PUTTING MONEY IN THE POCKETS OF THE TRADE

EVERYBODY is familiar with the old quotation about the man who made two blades of grass grow where only one blade grew before; and it may not be wholly new to apply it to the purposes of a trade paper, but the fact is St. Valentine's day affords an especially fine illustration of how The Review has put thousands upon thousands of dollars into the pockets of the trade.

Not that The Review ever has caused money to rain on the florists like manna from heaven—that was a miracle, and the days of miracles are over—but that the paper can and has, repeatedly, shown to enterprising florists opportunities and methods whereby the florists may increase their sales and their profits.

The beauty of it is The Review's suggestions work out in practice—they have the punch—they get there.

Mothers' Day, for Instance.

To cite a conspicuous example that all will remember, there's Mothers' day. The Review did not originate Mothers' day, but scarcely any florists had heard of it before The Review, recognizing an opportunity for the trade as a whole to add many thousands of dollars to the annual sales, made Mothers' day the feature of one of its issues. Every florist knows what happened: That year hundreds of florists pushed Mothers' day, and The Review reported how they did it, and how the public responded. The next year thousands helped, and now everybody features Mothers' day. The result is another special flower day has been developed—one that puts, in the aggregate, an immense sum of extra money into circulation in the trade. It might have come to pass, in time, without the assistance of The Review to point out the opportunity and the methods of developing it—but take the case of St. Valentine's day.

An Old Day Made New.

Read up on St. Valentine's day and you will find its origin lost in the mists of antiquity. Since time immemorial it has been the day on which brave men have sent fair ladies fond tokens. But for

a Live Paper
does it.

how long has the day held any general importance for florists? Just one year; this is the second. Look back to January 30, 1913, when The Review published a St. Valentine's Day Number in which it was conspicuously stated—

That was the real beginning of St. Valentine's day from a florists' flower selling point of view.

That issue of The Review pointed out another opportunity—and showed how to take advantage of it. It illustrated the methods by which the few retailers who had tried to do something with the day had made two dollars come in where only one dollar came in before, and it showed pictures of the corsage bouquets and the packages that had proved ready sellers.

Perhaps the last year's St. Valentine's Number of The Review fell short of its purpose to get 10,000 florists to push flowers for use as valentines, but the results really were surprising. Literally thousands took up the work and the way St. Valentine's day sales jumped is matter of common knowledge.

This year everybody is advertising St. Valentine's day. If the markets ease up a bit, so flowers can be offered at reasonable prices, sales will double, for it has been demonstrated that, as The Review said in its St. Valentine's Day Number, "all the public needs is the suggestion to send flowers."

Each Helps the Other.

Advertising is of two kinds, one kind designed to enable the advertiser to increase his share of the business resulting from an established demand, and another kind designed to awaken additional demand. Of course the florist who buys newspaper space does so with the idea of increasing his own individual sales, but advertising the appropriateness of flowers for use as valentines has the effect of stimulating business for all dealers in flowers—everyone in the trade reaps a benefit. The more florists advertise valentine flowers the better it is for all florists. Once impress the well-to-do public with the fact that flowers afford a vehicle for the expression of sentiment that opens to the grown-ups the pleasures childhood finds in the exchange of the highly colored crimped paper contraptions and each retailer then will find a profitable opportunity to exploit the quality of his individual stock and service.

Out of this situation developed the suggestion, made in The Review's St. Valentine's Day Number, for cooperative advertising ent answer to the question. If the sum of money you are prepared to spend will buy sufficient space, we should recommend daily advertising. However, it seems likely that the sum you mention would purchase only an inconspicuous card for daily publication. Consequently it would be advisable to appear less frequently, but none the less regularly.

We know little of the conditions in your location, but our idea of the town and newspapers there is that $5 would make an extremely small showing if devoted to one issue. It seems to us that it would be your best plan to advertise only once a month, or before each special flower day, putting all your expenditure into one or two specially seasonable issues and thereby getting a big enough space so that everybody who reads the best paper in your town must see your advertisement. Give St. Valentine's day a boost. Then lay off until Easter. After that wait until Mothers' day. Then give Decoration day a showing. If you are not a good writer of advertising, get someone who is proficient to plan your ads for you—it makes a lot of difference what is said and how it is said.

A ST. VALENTINE'S DAY WINDOW.

Horace R. Hughes, the Chicago florist, has an especially attractive window display for St. Valentine's day. But inasmuch as the decoration is a subtle creation of movement and color, the accompanying illustration only partly conveys its real beauty. It is one of those things that must be seen to be appreciated.

The goddess of love, dressed in a filmy white gowns, with a golden, star-set crown and silver wings, rides in a silver chariot outlined by various colored, minute electric lights. Twenty-six brilliant, spotted butterflies, kept in constant motion by concealed electric fans, are in the act of sailing the goddess over a large goldfish pond, which is artistically arranged in the floor of the window. The chariot is laden with the Hughes valentine boxes, which Mr. Hughes designed. It is a mediocre imagination indeed that cannot picture the fair goddess raising her magic wand and tightening the ribbons on her dashing butterflies, as she drops a box of flowers at the door of every sweetheart.

Mr. Hughes has a frontage on Van Buren street of seventy-five feet, divided into six large plate-glass windows. The St. Valentine's day display occupies the two central windows, twenty-four feet wide and ten feet in depth, one-third the entire window space. The two east windows display palms and ferns, with a painted background of mountain scenery. The two west windows are devoted to cut flowers, with the interior of the store as a background. The ceiling, a mass of oak leaves dotted with colored electric lights, lends a suggestion of Arcadia that not only enhances the St. Valentine's display but will add to the effectiveness of the Abraham Lincoln and George Washington scenes that will immediately follow, for Mr. Hughes takes considerable pride in his rapid changes.

TABLES AT CLEVELAND SHOW.

Described by a Detroit Retailer.

The following description of the table decorations by the Cleveland retailers, which were the feature of this year's exhibition by the American Carnation Society, is by Oscar Strand, artist for the L. Bemis Floral Co., of Detroit. The raisers of new varieties each supplied 150 to 200 flowers of his novelty. These were distributed by lot among the Cleveland retailers, one variety to each retailer, and the retailers were allowed to use them in any way they saw fit, in a table decoration. The results were excellent. The tables each were set for six persons. The following is the technical description of one who studied materials and design as well as effect.

Smith & Feters Co.

The table arranged by Smith & Feters Co. was with Carnation Gloria, light pink. In the center of the table was an antique gold vase filled with Gloria, draping over artistically, trimmed with pink ribbon to match Gloria, combined and covered over with a 3-inch gold lace maline. At the foot of the vase advertising paid for by subscriptions from a number of florists in a community. This suggestion was taken up in several cities and used to splendid effect, but nowhere more intelligently than at Columbus, O.

What Columbus Florists Did.

The way the florists of Columbus took hold of the idea was the subject of the leading article in The Review for February 20, 1913, and this article has had scarcely less effect than the St. Valentine's Day Number itself in encouraging publicity work. "After reading the St. Valentine's Day Number of The Review," said T. J. Ludwig, manager of the cut flower department of the Livingston Seed Co., "it seemed time for me to get busy, so I called on all the florists I could conveniently reach, got them together and to go in on a general advertisement in three of our daily papers. In all $132 was contributed to the fund, by twenty-one florists. This paid for a good sized space in each of three papers. In addition, the Ohio State Journal took the matter up and got ten of the florists to go in together on a full page printed in two colors, which, I understand, cost $200." The result was that in Columbus last year February 14 was "like another Christmas," as the Columbus correspondent put it. He said the trade was "something wonderful; a regular clean-up." The Review used three pages, with illustrations, to bring the story conspicuously to the attention of those who failed to take advantage of the opportunity last year. The result was that hundreds made up their minds then not to let the day pass again, and since Christmas the effect has been apparent in the advertising columns of The Review, supply houses and ribbon dealers early beginning to offer St. Valentine's day novelties. Now the cut flower men are at it and next week the retailers, having prepared themselves, will tell their story to the public. Watch the business jump.

Everybody Doing It Now.

The Review set the St. Valentine's day ball a rolling—now everybody is giving it a push, each according to his opportunity, enterprise and ability. The more the merrier!

It is in work like this that a trade paper shows its usefulness, its value to the trade. And it is in the response to the special articles in its paper that the trade shows the keen perception of its members and the ready recognition that its favorite journal is fulfilling its mission of showing how to make two dollars grow where only one dollar grew before.

AN APPEAL TO RETAILERS.

In view of the general possibilities which might accrue to the benefit of general flower trade, it behooves all of us in the retail business to make a special appeal for St. Valentine's delivery orders. The mails are loaded at this time with thousands upon thousands of presents which are far inferior to flowers and, with the proper spirit of cooperative and individual advertising, there should be a decided gain in this portion of the business. The membership of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery has grown decidedly within the last few months and it is those members in particular to whom I issue the request that they devote a liberal amount of their St. Valentine's day advertising to this cause.

The reports from the several parts of the country at Christmas indicate a phenomenal growth in telegraph orders, and it is altogether likely to do a great deal more in future instances.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery needs the assistance of individuality in advertising, it needs the personal appeal made to the patrons of the thousands of shops throughout the country, and the result will be a great one financially. Irwin Bertermann, President.

ADVERTISING A FLOWER STORE.

I would like to get ideas of several successful business men in the trade who have done considerable advertising, on the following proposition: If I have a certain amount of money, say $5 per week, to pay for advertising in a local daily newspaper, which would prove the most profitable, a small insertion daily or a larger insertion weekly or once in two weeks? L. P. K.

Without fuller details of the situation it is impossible to give an intelli-

TABLES AT CLEVELAND SHOW

Described by a Detroit Retailer

The following is a description of the decorations by the Cleveland florists, which were the feature of the show exhibition by the American Florist Society, as by Oscar Straub, president of the La Bemb Florist Co., of Cleveland. The raisers of new varieties of carnations, 150 to 200 flowers of each variety. These were distributed among the Cleveland retailers, one flower to each retailer, and the retailers were asked to use them in a window display. The table decorations were excellent. The table set for six persons. The following is the technical description of one, whose standard materials and design is of an effect.

Smith & Feters Co.

The table arranged by Smith & Feters Co. was with Carnation Georgia light pink. In the center of the table was an antique gold vase filled with Gloria, draping over artistically, trimmed with pink ribbon to match Gloria, combined and covered over with a 3 inch gold lace maline. At the foot of the vase were three gold baskets filled with Gloria drooping over on the table to one side. Maidenhair fern was used throughout and the handles were tied with the 3-inch gold maline.

James Eadie Co.

The table by James Eadie Co. demonstrated the usefulness of Carnation Matchless. In the center of the table was a high, round silver vase filled with Matchless, arranged in a large bouquet. At the foot of the vase was a low centerpiece, showered by narrow ribbons in Dresden colors, in combination with silver. Farleyense ferns were used throughout. Corsages used were colonial bouquets, using the size No. 5 bouquet holders. The bouquets were made up with Matchless trimmed with small bows and streamers corresponding to those used on the vase. The boutonnieres were of one Matchless carnation with a small combination colored ribbon bow.

J. M. Gasser Co.

The table by J. M. Gasser Co. had a smart blue French vase in the center. The flowers were arranged drooping over from the vase. The base was draped with light blue crepe de chine continuing in loops to the handles of three small baskets, which were of the French style. Asparagus plumosus was used for green. Three corsages of twelve carnations each were tied with blue fancy brocaded ribbons. On the back of the corsages they used the celluloid shields. This table drew special attention for the sweepstakes-winning carnation, Philadelphia, showing its worth in decorative work.

The J. M. Gasser Co. won the cup offered by Thos. W. Lawson, the Boston copper king, for the most artistically arranged vase, not to exceed 200 carnations, with any foliage. A royal Dresden vase five feet high was used. This was arranged with Philadelphia carnations and cibotium. At the back was a setting of green velvet draped under the vase, a picture in itself.

A. M. Albrecht.

A. M. Albrecht used for the centerpiece a low glass vase, and arranged Pink Supreme carnations loosely drooping to the table. Loose carnations were laid on the cloth. Boutonnieres and corsages were tied with a light green satin corsage ribbon.

Knoble Bros.

A tall, round silver vase filled with Alice Coombs carnations on the table by Knoble Bros. was unusually artistically arranged for the reason that quite a number of buds of Alice Coombs were used. At the base of the vase there was a wreath of maidenhair fern with short-stemmed Alice Coombs. Three small glass baskets with inlaid gold were filled with ten Alice Coombs and maidenhair ferns, trimmed with ombre-shaded wide satin ribbon, matching Alice Coombs. The colonial bouquets using No. 6 holders were used for corsages, made solid of Alice Coombs buds. The corsages were trimmed with the novelty Werbro de luxe ribbon, tassel ties. Boutonnieres of four small buds in paper cuffs proved themselves a feature.

Jones-Russell Co.

On its table the Jones-Russell Co. used a low white basket massively filled with Joy and Asparagus plumosus. The Joy carnations were drooped gracefully over and on the table. The handle of the baskets was twined with Joy and tied with an ombre-shaded ribbon to match the Joy carnations, which are red. The colonial bouquet holders, No. 6 size, were used for the corsages, a white carnation in the center and a border of the red Joy carnations showered with the narrow Dresden ribbon in rosette form. Boutonnieres of one Joy carnation, with a touch of white in the center, gave the finishing touch to the table.

C. M. Wagner.

The table arranged by C. M. Wagner showed good taste and a unique combination for such a dark carnation as Princess Dagmar, crimson. A low crystal handle basket was used, filled with a shower of Princess Dagmar, out and down over the table and trimmed with a wide, unusually pretty French taffeta ombre ribbon, shaded from Nile green to white in the center, then to a deep Nile green toward the edge. Three corsages of ten Princess Dagmar were used, finished off with a wide Nile ombre taffeta ribbon. This proved a beautiful combination. Farleyense ferns were used.

Westman & Getz.

The table by Westman & Getz proved to be a novelty and a practical commercial table. Gorgeous was used, arranged in a green, high handle basket which was raised from the table. Gorgeous was massively laid in the basket, yet daintily arranged. To the handle there were sprays of Farleyense ferns tied with a valley green ribbon-covered over with a 6-inch gold lace chiffon, giving a two-tone effect in ribbon colors, what is known as shadow lace. At the foot of the basket was a solid bed of Farleyense ferns and Gorgeous carnations. Six corsages of seven Gorgeous were on the plates, trimmed with the combination gold lace chiffon and ribbons used on the basket. The boutonnieres were of one Gorgeous and Farleyense fern.

A. Graham & Son.

The table by A. Graham & Son showed Peerless Pink daintily arranged in a tall glass vase with Farleyense fern. At the base of the vase low moss baskets were filled with Peerless Pink and Farleyense, spreading out over the table. Six corsages of different shades of carnation buds and Peerless Pink tied with a 2-inch lace chiffon, Nile green shade, finished the table.

Ella Grant Wilson.

Gloriosa was used on the table of Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, in a tall glass vase. Three large hats, two white and one pink, draped with pink chiffon, ribbon and clusters of Gloriosa, formed the base for the vase. Six candle holders of glass, with pink shades and candles to match Gloriosa, proved a novelty. The corsages consisted of five Gloriosa and Farleyense, finished off with a combination of wide chiffons and streamers of No. 8 corsage ribbon.

BOSTON'S MIDWINTER SHOW.

The show held in Horticultural hall, opening January 31, while not so large as usual, contained some fine exhibits. The attendance, owing to a hard, driving rain storm, was meager on the opening day, but much better the second day. Admission was free. Carnations were fewer in number than is customary, as most of the large growers were in Cleveland. Nevertheless, some splendid flowers were staged. A. A. Pembroke was first and second for fifty white, with White Wonder and White Enchantress; first for fifty red, first for flesh pink, first for dark pink, with Rosette; first for white variegated, with Benora, and second for fifty assorted blooms in five varieties. M. A. Patten was first for fifty assorted blooms in five varieties. He also had a superb vase of his new Princess Dagmar. The J. W. Minott Co. was first for fifty light, fifty crimson and fifty scarlet. C. S. Strout was second for fifty flesh pink. H. A. Abraham, gardener to E. D. Jordan, was first for an assorted vase, for private gardeners; George Page, gardener to Mrs. Frederick Ayer, was second.

For one hundred single violets, H. Stewart, gardener to Miss C. Warren, was first; Edward Bingham, second. The last named grower also won first for one hundred doubles, with Campbell. Thomas Roland took first for two vases, one hundred sprays each, of Christmas Pink Spencer and White Spencer sweet peas with magnificent blooms. He also showed a fine collection of other winter-flowering Spencers with 12-inch to 15-inch stems, which were awarded a first-class certificate. F. W. Fletcher had the best vase of one hundred spikes of freesia, showing his strain of Purity, which is remarkably fine, grown in benches containing three inches of soil.

For six plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, was first; A. M. Davenport, second. For Glory of Cincinnati, Mrs. Lester Leland, E. H. Wetterlow, gardener, was first; A. M. Davenport, second. For six pots of freesias, W. Whitman, Martin Sullivan, gardener, was first; Miss C. Warren, second; for eight plants of Primula Sinensis, Martin Sullivan, first and second; William Thatcher, third. For six plants of Primula Kewensis, E. A. Clark, Alex. McKay, gardener, was first. For eight Primula stellata, William Thatcher was first; Martin Sullivan, second. For eight Primula obconica, Martin Sullivan was first and second with splendid plants; Martin Thatcher, third. For eight Primula malacoides, Martin Sullivan was first, with superbly flowered plants; Geo. Page, second; Duncan Finlayson, gardener to L. Anderson, third. For eight Roman hyacinths, Martin Sullivan was first; William Thatcher, second.

There was a good show of orchids. Wheeler & Co. took first for six pots of calanthes; they also took second prize for a specimen orchid, with a fine Phalaenopsis Schilleriana. Geo. Melvin, gardener to Col. Charles Pfaff, was first with a large Lælia anceps; William Thatcher was third. F. J. Dolansky was first and third for three orchids; William Thatcher, second. Wheeler & Co. showed some fine Phalaenopsis amabilis. Duncan Finlayson received a certificate of merit for a seedling of Cymbidium insignis x eburneum.

Geo. Page had some fine Erica melantha; as also had Miss C. Warren. Knight & Struck Co. showed Epacris paludosa and chorizemas. Miss C. Warren had pans of Lachenalia Nelsoni. A. M. Davenport had a splendid table of begonias, including his new variety, Florence Davenport. W. C. Rust, gardener to Mrs. C. G. Weld, showed a vase of Pride of Haarlem Darwin tulips and a good seedling pink snapdragon. H. Huebner had vases of his new, winter-flowering antirrhinums, which were awarded a first-class certificate. The Waban Rose Conservatories showed a beautiful new seedling rose, delicate pink, in the way of La France when fully open, which was awarded a first-class certificate. We shall soon hear more of this variety. F. J. Dolansky received a first-class certificate for Cattleya Trianae Mrs. T. F. Galvin. A. A. Pembroke showed some wonderful Calendula Orange King on 24-inch stems, which was awarded a cultural certificate. Martin Sullivan received two cultural certificates for superior cultivation of Primula malacoides and obconica. M. A. Patten received a first-class certificate for Mignonette Farquhar's Universal, a remarkably fine strain. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. received honorable mention for a fine vase of the pure white Buddleia Asiatica. There was a nice display of winter fruits, but few vegetables were shown.

Edgar, Neb.—Chas. E. Vanstrom not only does a general cut flower and plant business, but handles vegetable plants at wholesale and retail, nursery stock and garden and flower seeds. One of life's little irritations for him is the fact that the local newspaper runs an advertisement for the local congressman, offering to send seeds free to anyone who will write him.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Shading.

Cattleyas and lœlias are better with full sunlight for some weeks yet. Never mind if they turn a little pale in color; they will grow and flower better than such as are kept in shade all the time. Give Miltonia vexillaria and odontoglossums the full sun until March 1, when a little shade may be necessary. Cypripediums need a little shade, and phalaenopsis should never be exposed to bright sunshine, they being the most susceptible of orchids in this respect. Where orchids can be fitted with cloth or lath shades, and these can be removed during cloudy and dark weather, the plants have a wonderful advantage over those grown under glass which in summer is heavily coated with kerosene and lead or even lime wash, but it costs money to put up these shades, and they are a little beyond the purses of commercial growers.

Sponging.

There is comparatively little time for sponging in summer and, therefore, every plant should, if possible, be overhauled between now and the end of March. With many plants this will be a simple task. Cattleyas, if infested with scale, should have bulbs, as well as leaves, well washed with some soap solution, and stiff brushes are usually necessary to clean the scale off properly. It takes considerable time to clean cypripediums off properly, but it will pay to do it. During bad weather it may be possible to put one or two extra hands cleaning these. Smart boys and girls do the work just as well as men.

Overhead watering needs to be done with great care in midwinter, but even at this season there are days when a light spraying is advantageous. Cattleyas and lœlias, if sprayed over about 9 a. m. on clear days, will be dried off before nightfall. Odontoglossums, cymbidiums and dendrobies, except those in flower, are all benefited by an occasional damping over. Dendrobies with nodes small should have a spray each fine day to assist development of the nodes.

Fumigation.

Orchids are less troubled with insect pests than many other plants. Scale can be controlled by spraying with Aphine or fir tree oil, but a fumigation once in eight or ten days will be a great help, using some nicotine extract evaporated over wood alcohol lamps, or, if steam is used, it can be painted on the pipes and a small quantity will give an atmosphere strong enough to kill aphids, also thrips, unless the attack is a bad one. A heavy dose will kill mealy bug. Cattleya flies on the wing are killed by these fumigations also, although cutting out infested growths as soon as noticed is the most certain, if radical, cure for the latter. Odontoglossums, masdevallias and Miltonia vexillaria will not stand heavy fumigations, and hydrocyanic acid gas, safe though it is to use among many apparently susceptible plants, will seriously damage even the hardy looking cattleyas and should never be used in an orchid house.

WILL NOT FUMIGATE ORCHIDS.

Importers of orchid plants are breathing easier: The federal horticultural board gives indication of abandoning its idea of quarantining or otherwise attempting to repel the invasion of the cattleya fly.

There has, of late, been much complaint of the devastations of the cattleya fly, and these complaints have come to the attention of the board charged with the duty of administering the federal horticultural quarantine law. The board, after giving the matter only slight consideration, told some of the importers of orchid plants that it seemed in line to prevent the importation of the cattleya fly either by prohibiting the importation of the plants except when accompanied by the regulation certificate of inspection, or by subjecting the plants to fumigation at the port of entry. The importers were prompt to point out that certification is impossible, because the countries from which orchid plants are imported are among the least advanced, and, with few exceptions, maintain no horticultural inspection; also that it is almost impossible to detect the presence of the cattleya fly by the inspection of the plants in the condition in which they are imported. The importers said that they would much rather have the importation of the plants prohibited than to have the stock fumigated at the port of entry—they preferred to be put out of business before they had spent their money for stock, since fumigation would amount to practical destruction.

The importers also pointed out that the quarantine law is supposed to be for the purpose of preventing the introduction of any plant pests not now prevalent in the United States—and they emphasized the fact that practically every orchid establishment already has the cattleya fly. They said the law does not fit the case.

So strongly do the importers voice their protestations that the federal horticultural board, after further consideration, has about concluded that it will not undertake to quarantine against the cattleya fly or to regulate the importation of orchids, except that the usual permit for the importation of nursery stock will be required, and an eye will be kept on the importations.

DISEASED GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

I am enclosing a few samples of geranium leaves which are affected with some sort of disease. Will you kindly advise me of its cause and the remedy for it? The disease is rather generally distributed throughout the geraniums, except in the stock plants. They are now in 3-inch pots and seem stunted from the effects of this leaf-drying. They are in a well lighted house, which, owing to general causes, cannot be heated higher than 52 degrees in cold weather, and on this account they are kept on the dry side. This trouble has never appeared before this year, either in the field or bench, and the soil is of the same grade as that used in previous years. It is rather light, with manure and a small amount of bone meal for the second potting. The first sign of the disease appeared after the plants were potted up in 2½-inch pots from the cutting bench, in soil without manure.

F. L. G.

It may be that your trouble arose from keeping the cuttings a little too long in the sand. This is frequently the cause of stem-rot and various leaf diseases not only of geraniums but of a number of other plants. It is possible that the soil without manure used at the first potting may have been too poor, and that pure starvation caused the plants to become stunted and the foliage to be lost. Geraniums make a rank growth if much manure is used in the soil, and fine bone is a safe substitute for animal manures, as it promotes a stocky, short-jointed plant which will flower well. Some fine, old, well screened manure added to the soil at the second potting is of material benefit to the plants, while just a little at the initial potting will put a little life into them. A temperature of 48 to 50 degrees is ample for geraniums. They like a dry atmosphere and plenty of sun and fresh air. All you can do with your worst affected plants is to throw them away. Those left may be found to need a little more plant food to color them up: Apply this in the form of a top-dressing rather than in liquid form. C. W.

THE CLEVELAND CONVENTION

AFTERMATH OF THE CARNATION GROWERS' EXHIBITION

The Review told the story of the meeting so completely last week that little remains to be said

IN his address at the opening of the Cleveland convention, printed in full in last week's issue of The Review, President Brown threw out a number of suggestions with regard to the individual work of the members in producing and marketing their crops, as well as to the work of the society. The address was referred to a committee consisting of S. J. Goddard, Wm. Nicholson and W. N. Rudd, which later submitted the following well-worth-reading report:

"We feel that the taking of an active executive part in the exploiting and management of a strictly local exhibition, by this society, is likely to lead to serious complications in the future. On the other hand it is the duty of the society to encourage in all feasible ways the public exhibition of the carnation everywhere. For these reasons your committee does not favor the award of a cup or other trophy of large value at the New York exhibition, as creating a precedent for similar demands from other parts of the country in future, which demands could hardly be met. Your committee recommends that one silver and one bronze medal be offered for competition at the New York exhibition and that the society, when proper application is made, offer similar medals at other exhibitions where it is shown that such exhibitions are of sufficient importance to warrant such offer.

"The question of the color line in the pink classes having been set for special discussion need not be considered by this committee except that your committee would recommend, no matter what color divisions may be adopted, that the judges be authorized, at any time when convinced that a mistake has been made in any entry in the pink classes, to transfer the exhibit wrongly entered to the proper division of the pink class and to consider it therein without prejudice, the same as though it had been originally so entered.

"It seems to your committee that slumps or gluts in the market are occasional but inevitable conditions to be met in growing and marketing perishable crops. It might be well to suggest to the grower the advisability of more strictly and carefully grading and culling his product at such times.

"We believe that the marketing of carnations carefully packed in boxes is to be recommended for the better grades and in markets which will accept flowers so packed.

"We doubt that carnations are losing either in fragrance or keeping qualities. It is true that some varieties are more fragrant than others—this has always been the case. It is certainly true that flowers produced during the comparatively sunless winter months will never be so fragrant as in late spring or early summer, when the sun is approaching its maximum in intensity of effect.

"Your committee feels that the deterioration which occurs in carnations is largely due to bad or overintensive cultivation and especially to improper methods in the selection of cuttings and their handling. We believe it quite possible to build a variety up by careful cultivation and especially by continued intelligent and careful selection in propagating.

"It is surely to be regretted that more of the men interested in the growing and sale of carnations have not become members of this society. Other societies perhaps are making no better, if as good a showing. We feel that there is no way of largely increasing our membership except by the slow and sure way, through the active and continuous efforts of our members with their individual friends and acquaintances.

"Your committee is hardly inclined to admit that we have exhausted the possibilities of development in the carnation in any direction, even in size."

The report was adopted by the society, the recommendation with regard to permitting the judges to transfer to its proper section any exhibit wrongly entered in the pink classes being extended to apply to any color or class.

The Best Keeper.

With the idea of encouraging the exhibitors to try for keeping quality, Fred Burki offered a prize of $10 to be awarded at the close of the show to the vase of flowers that had stood in best condition. One of the judges remarked, early in the show, that the award would go to Pink Delight, "everybody knew that before we came here," and it did—to the Pink Delight with which President-elect Goddard won first prize in the class for 100 flesh pink. Another judge said afterward that all five of the vases of blooms considered by the judges were Mr. Goddard's.

It was apparent that some of the exhibitors, having the Burki prize in mind, had cut their flowers underdone and there was some criticism on the floor of the convention because the judges had made awards to these flowers over fully developed blooms. Peter Fisher, F. A. Friedley, F. H. Lemon, W. N. Rudd, A. F. J. Baur, A. J. Guttman, E. G. Gillett, E. A. Stroud, Eugene Dailedouze and others gave their views. Some of the speakers seemed to think half open flowers were not entitled to award, while others inclined to the belief that the judges were justified if they considered an exhibitor's underdone blooms better than the other fellow's fully developed flowers. E. A. Stroud suggested that better judging might be had if the full board of six judges passed on each class, instead of working in threes, as has been the custom. W. N. Rudd disagreed with this, asserting that the larger the board the less the sense of individual responsibility for the result. Eugene Dailedouze thought the judging would be better if the rule about clearing the hall were more rigidly enforced, so it was put on record that hereafter even the newspaper men are to be barred while the judges are at work.

Carrying Plants a Second Year.

In the discussion of A. T. Pyfer's paper, led by Peter Fisher and Joseph H. Hill, it was the consensus of opinion that it does not pay to carry carnation plants a second year. Mr. Pyfer had not recommended it, except in special cases. C. S. Strout said it paid him, in Maine, where he has a good summer demand, and others mentioned special cases, such as with shy bloomers and varieties that have been kept cut back to produce cuttings, but the general report was that nothing is gained, the quality of the blooms produced in the second year being poor, the plants ungainly, a prey to disease and a harbor for insects. Mr. Pyfer was given a vote of thanks for his paper.

The Cost of Growing.

So many members of the American Carnation Society keep careful records of production that the figures of blooms per plant presented in Joseph H. Hill's paper aroused far less comment than did the closing paragraph, in which he attempted to set forth briefly the cost of producing the cut. It developed that a great many of the members had undertaken to ascertain what a flower costs, but that they had failed to secure anything more valuable than mental exercise. President Brown undertook to get discussion on the essays read by appointing members to start the talk. To lead the discussion on Mr. Hill's paper he designated W. N. Rudd and S. J. Goddard. Mr. Rudd asked to be excused, but Mr. Brown insisted, so Mr. Rudd responded with a general declaration of the futility of the average cost record; he declared them to be valueless except in rare instances because flower growing ever is an art and never can become a science, figures of cost never being alike for any two years. He commended records of production as showing the relative blooming qualities of varieties, but said that insofar as finding what it costs to carry a plant through its life, it never can be done, the best figures never being anything more than an average. Other speakers agreed. Mr. Hill, in explanation, said that carnations exclusively are grown

THE CLEVELAND CONVENTION

AFTERMATH OF THE CARNATION GROWERS' EXHIBITION

The Review told the story of the meeting so completely last week that little remains to be said

IN his address at the opening of the Cleveland convention, printed in full in last week's issue of The Review, President Brown threw out a number of suggestions with regard to the individual work of the members in producing and marketing their crops, as well as to the work of the society. The address was referred to a committee consisting of S. J. Goddard, Wm. Nicholson and W. N. Rudd, which later submitted the following well-worth reading report:

The report was adopted by the society, the recommendation with regard to permitting the judges to transfer to its proper section any exhibit wrongly entered in the pink classes being extended to apply to any color or class.

The Best Keeper.

With the idea of encouraging the exhibitors to try for keeping quality, Fred Burki offered a prize of $10 to be awarded at the close of the show to the vase of flowers that had stood in best condition. One of the judges remarked, early in the show, that the award would go to Pink Delight, "everybody knew that before we came here," and it did to the Pink Delight with which President-elect Goddard won first prize in the class for 100 flesh pink. Another judge said afterward that all five of the vases of blooms considered by the judges were Mr. Goddard's.

It was apparent that some of the exhibitors, having the Burki prize in mind, had cut their flowers underdone and there was some criticism on the floor of the convention because the judges had made awards to these flowers over fully developed blooms. Peter Fisher, F. A. Friedley, F. H. Lemon, W. N. Rudd, A. F. J. Baur, A. J. Guttman, E. G. Gillett, E. A. Stroud, Eugene Dailledouze and others gave their views. Some of the speakers seemed to think half open flowers were not entitled to award, while others inclined to the belief that the judges were justified if they considered an exhibitor's underdone blooms better than the other fellow's fully developed flowers. E. A. Stroud suggested that better judging might be had if the full board of six judges passed on each class, instead of working in threes, as has been the custom. W. N. Rudd disagreed with this, asserting that the larger the board the less the sense of individual responsibility for the result. Eugene Dailledouze thought the judging would be better if the rule about clearing the hall were more rigidly enforced, so it was put on record that hereafter even the newspaper men are to be barred while the judges are at work.

Carrying Plants a Second Year.

In the discussion of A. T. Pyfer's paper, led by Peter Fisher and Joseph H. Hill, it was the consensus of opinion that it does not pay to carry carnation plants a second year. Mr. Pyfer had not recommended it, except in special cases. C. S. Strout said it paid him, in Maine, where he has a good summer demand, and others mentioned special cases, such as with shy bloomers and varieties that have been kept cut back to produce cuttings, but the general report was that nothing is gained, the quality of the blooms produced in the second year being poor, the plants ungainly, a prey to disease and a harbor for insects. Mr. Pyfer was given a vote of thanks for his paper.

The Cost of Growing.

So many members of the American Carnation Society keep careful records of production that the figures of blooms per plant presented in Joseph H. Hill's paper aroused far less comment than did the closing paragraph, in which he attempted to set forth briefly the cost of producing the cut. It developed that a great many of the members had undertaken to ascertain what a flower costs, but that they had failed to secure anything more valuable than mental exercise. President Brown undertook to get discussion on the essays read by appointing members to start the talk. To lead the discussion on Mr. Hill's paper he designated W. N. Rudd and S. J. Goddard. Mr. Rudd asked to be excused, but Mr. Brown insisted, so Mr. Rudd responded with a general declaration of the futility of the average cost record; he declared them to be valueless except in rare instances because flower growing ever is an art and never can become a science, figures of cost never being alike for any two years. He commended records of production as showing the relative blooming qualities of varieties, but said that insofar as finding what it costs to carry a plant through its life, it never can be done, the best figures never being anything more than an average. Other speakers agreed. Mr. Hill, in explanation, said that carnations exclusively are grown in the establishment to which his records referred and that they were no doubt more exact than any grower could secure where miscellaneous stock is grown.

President Brown added an interesting statement with regard to the record of prices obtained in the New York market. He said that the price varies widely when the records of a single month are compared through a series of years, but that there is little variation when the average price of carnations for a whole year is considered. He said that he had in his pocket the record of the price received for every flower sold by his establishment for the last seven years, and that in no year had the average been less than 3 cents per bloom, or more than 3½ cents, the average being approximately 3¼ cents per flower over seven years. His point was that the grower who produces strictly high grade blooms can count with considerable certainty upon a definite return.

The Retailers and the Society.

Sam Seligman started something when he asked what the society purposes to do for the retailers—A. Farenwald was on his feet at once to ask what the retailers purpose to do for the society. Mr. Farenwald said the society has done it about all in the past, the growers doing about all the publicity work that is done for flowers through exhibitions. He said the retailers should join the society and then exhibit whenever they can. He said they now hold aloof from the exhibitions through fear of being beaten. If spirit can be aroused as it is in Cleveland great good will result. He thought it up to the retailers to show the spirit of helpfulness on a broad scale before asking anything of the society.

F. H. Lemon said the retailers are not using carnations in their best work and that there is a big field for the society in showing that carnations can be employed where any other flowers are used. He said the society should go on record in commendation of the work of the Cleveland retailers, whose demonstrations of the use of carnations in table and vase work had been the most valuable feature of the show.

M. A. Patten commented that the retail sales of carnations always jump in the cities visited by the A. C. S. Messrs. Fisher, Johnson, Guttman and Baur added their views and President Brown closed the discussion by saying that a non-competitive basis appears to be the only one on which the retailers will participate and that it probably will be possible to carry along the work on the lines originated by the Clevelanders.

On motion of S. S. Pennock the Cleveland retailers were given a vote of thanks for their assistance in making the show.

Miscellaneous Matters.

The schedule for the carnation classes at the New York show in March was read by President Brown. It was decided to recede from the requirement that exhibitors there must be members of the A. C. S. The matter of judging was left to the officers and the elected judges, with authority to fill vacancies.

A straight galvanized iron vase painted a bottle green was adopted as the official exhibition vase of the society.

Final resolutions, acknowledging courtesies, were written by Wm. Nicholson, E. G. Gillett and Joseph H. Hill.

The Banquet.

The exhibition hall was cleared on the second evening and the annual banquet spread on the same tables, the flowers being used for decorations. As the society had come uninvited to Cleveland, each person paid for his own ticket. It was an innovation that is likely to become the rule of the future. Nearly 200 were present. Adam Graham, the Nestor of the Cleveland florists, was toastmaster. Because of the lateness of the hour at which the speaking started, and the wish of many to catch night trains, the speakers talked briefly. Among the dozen called on were H. P. Noble, R. T. Brown, George Asmus, Wm. J. Stewart, Ella Grant Wilson, Charles Gibson, F. H. Lemon, W. F. Kasting and S. J. Goddard.

so he was unable to supply blooms for a retailer's display. However, on the second day the management, with Mr. Fisher's consent, gave one of his competitive exhibits to Westman & Getz, who made of it one of the prettiest tables of the ten on display.

The three vases entered for the Dornier medal were sent as a gift of the society to the McKinley day banquet of the Tippecanoe Club the evening the show closed.

The Cleveland Lady Florists' Society gave a reception Wednesday evening, January 28, in the parlors of the Hotel Statler, at which forty-six visiting ladies were guests. There was a fine musical and elocutionary entertainment by club talent and refreshments were served. The affair was directed by Mrs. George W. Smith, president of the society, and was a splendid success. Thursday morning the visiting ladies were taken for an automobile ride about the city.

Overheard in a crowd: "Did you ever see that 'Sprinkleproof' when he wasn't busy?"

Everybody knows what the inspired compositor, and the proofreader, do to a manuscript, but it really shouldn't be mentioned on the same day with what a night operator does to a flower show reported by wire. The Review got off luckily last week—only two bad breaks. The paragraph that said the Hadley rose is being disseminated this season had tacked onto it the first five words from the next paragraph, "for John McIntyre, of Philadelphia," which of course completely changed the sense. Mr. McIntyre has nothing to do with Hadley, which is being sent out by A. N. Pierson, Inc., for Mr. Montgomery, the raiser. But Mr. McIntyre sent some excellent lilac to the Cleveland show. Also by the omission of a line of copy, the operator made Mr. Fisher say "he should be selected as the recipient of the first Medal of Merit," when what he really said was that he should be honored in either event were he selected as the recipient of the medal—Mr. Fisher wasn't claiming the medal, only expressing a sense of being honored were it awarded to him either as the raiser of Enchantress or of Beacon.

JOHN COOK'S LATEST ROSE.

Francis Scott Key is the latest production of the well known Baltimore rosarian, John Cook. It is a seedling from Cardinal and an unnamed red seedling also raised by Mr. Cook, who describes Key as a vigorous grower, with large red flowers carried on extra long stems.

UNPACKING FROZEN SHIPMENTS.

Shipments of soft-wooded plants at this season are occasionally received in a frozen condition; not entirely on account of insufficient protection in packing, but owing largely to unforeseen and severe weather changes.

When the thermometer suddenly drops below the zero point, as it did recently, plant shipments are liable to suffer while waiting on station platforms or during wagon delivery, no matter how carefully packed, and a little judgment in unpacking will in most instances bring the plants out of a frozen condition with little or no injury.

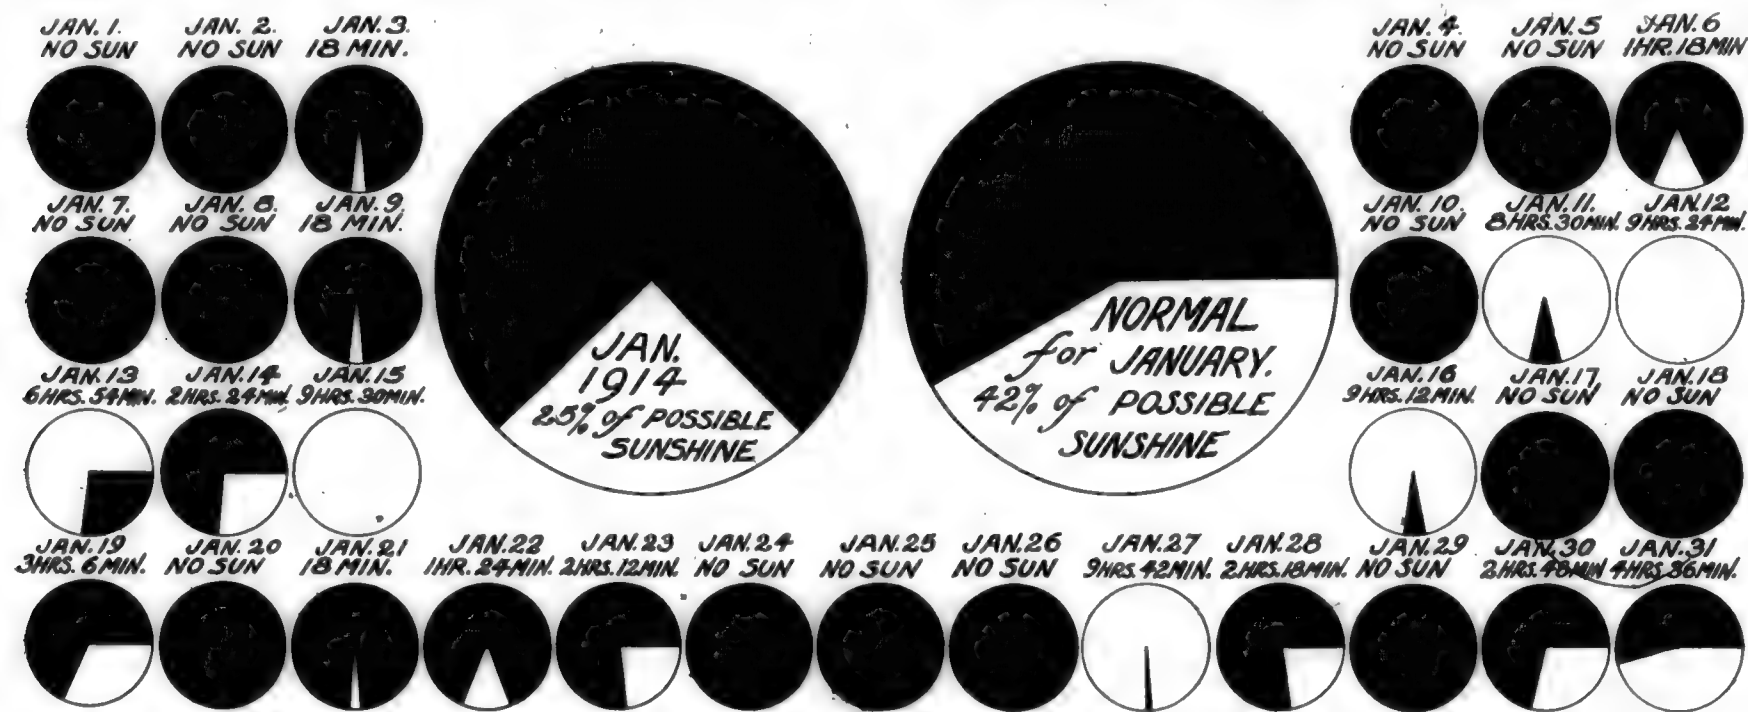

The undersigned received during the recent severe spell a shipment which included geraniums of various types, fuchsias, begonias and other soft-wooded subjects from pots, with the ball of earth on practically every plant frozen hard, the frost penetrating even to those in the center of the boxes. Although the shipment looked rather hopeless, the boxes were placed immediately in a cool shed, with a temperature just above the freezing point, and allowed to remain forty-eight hours, thawing out gradually. The plants were then unpacked, placed in a slightly higher temperature, kept well shaded and were soon in condition to be potted.

The loss on the entire shipment did

A NEAR-SUNLESS JANUARY AT CHICAGO

DURING the thirty-one days of January, in the latitude of Chicago, the sun is above the horizon 296 hours and forty-eight minutes. In a normal January the sun is obscured by clouds for over half the time it is above the horizon, so that the average number of hours of sun in January at Chicago is 124.65. But in January, 1914, there was but twenty-five per cent of the possible duration of sun, or seventy-four hours and twelve minutes, only a little more than half the normal. It was a January that put a severe strain on the growers at Chicago. The accompanying diagram shows the month at a glance. The white shows the percentage of possible, the figures the actual hours of sun.

not exceed five per cent. The begonias suffered no more injury than the geraniums and the plants are now well established and in a growing condition.

STORAGE OF PAPER WHITES.

Here is a nut for some of you brother florists, which I wish you would crack for me.

Last fall the writer got in about 20,000 Paper Whites for winter forcing. I planted about 1,000 right away, and they did finely. Then I placed some of the remaining bulbs in a cold room on board shelving—I should say about half of the lot. The other half were put in a basement on a cement floor.

Those I put in our cold room are all planted and all have done well. Then I started planting from the basement, and from the 8,000 to 10,000 bulbs which were stored there we have not had, to date, a single good flower. In fact, the vitality seems gone; they do not make foliage as Paper Whites generally do, and the flowers come with from two to four bells on each stem and not over eight or ten inches tall. It is surely a failure. I was priding myself on the good place I have in which to keep my bulbs from growing, as they generally do in storage, but in all my twenty-five years' experience in storing and planting Paper Whites I have never seen the like of this before. The bulbs from the cement floor look as dry and dormant today as when taken out of the boxes last fall.

The basement where I put these bulbs is a clean and airy place, with a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. Nothing else is stored there except a few sacks of potatoes, and the bulbs are stored in a dark corner of the basement. The bulbs have all been treated in the same way as regards soil and planting, and after planting they have had the same place in the greenhouse, from the first planting last fall until now. I have 2,000 or 3,000 more to plant, but I have removed them from the cement floor to our cold storage, where I have kept bulbs for years with good results.

I shall be pleased to hear from other readers of The Review, if any of them have had an experience similar to mine and if they will be so good as to state what they believe to be the cause of the trouble.

FOURTH NATIONAL SHOW.

At Philadelphia Two Years Hence.

The location of the fourth national flower show given under the auspices of the Society of American Florists was fixed at a meeting at Cleveland January 29, when the national flower show committee reorganized by the election of George Asmus, of Chicago, as chairman to succeed Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J. Mr. Asmus will have the general management of the next show, which will be held at Philadelphia in the spring of 1916, the exact date to depend upon the ability to secure a suitable hall. The big Saengerfest hall at Broad street and Allegheny avenue will be used, providing the details of the lease can be closed satisfactorily. It will afford the largest and best hall the S. A. F. has yet used for its show.

John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., will continue to act as secretary for the national show committee. Chairman Asmus has appointed the following working committees to get busy at once:

Schedule—C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.

Hall—A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo; W. P. Craig, Philadelphia.

Special prizes—W. F. Kasting, Buffalo; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.

Publicity—W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; John Young, New York; C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

Those present at the meeting were Messrs. Totty, Young, Asmus, Kasting, Rudd and Farenwald. The absent members were Messrs. Roland and Craig.

In an official report of the meeting, received since the above was put in type, Secretary Young says:

"Mr. Totty was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for the great work he had done as chairman of the committee and for the extremely successful manner in which he had arranged for and carried out all the arrangements for the recent successful show held in New York city.

"The meeting was most enthusiastic and stirring addresses were made by W. N. Rudd, Wm. F. Kasting, Chas. H. Totty and A. Farenwald, showing that the experience gained in the recent exhibitions would help to make the Philadelphia show the grand success that it should be. It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that no city in the United States is better able to conduct a national flower show successfully than the city of Philadelphia. It is doubtful if many of the members of the society realize the great amount of hard work which is being done by the national flower show committee at their meetings and during the time that the arrangements for the show are being made, and if every member will assist and do his little bit, there is no question but what this exhibition will be the best ever."

De Kalb, Ill.—J. Leonard Johnson is planning to erect another greenhouse next spring to accommodate his growing business. Beginning with a hotbed eight years ago, Mr. Johnson has built up a large trade and now has eleven houses, comprising 15,000 feet of glass.

THE SHIPPING DEPARTMENT.

THE NEW EXPRESS RATES.

At Last They Are in Effect.

Interstate express rates on a scale averaging sixteen per cent lower than those formerly prevailing, with an entirely new system of rates and regulations, became effective February 1, under orders issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Coincident with the lower interstate rates, the states of Maine, Vermont, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Delaware, West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, New Jersey, Illinois and Louisiana put into force rates applying on intra-state express business upon practically the same basis as those on interstate business.

A block system of rates, dividing the country into 826 blocks, formed by the intersection of the meridians of longitude and the parallels of latitude, is now in effect on interstate express business. The method by which the new rates are determined by the block system is of importance to all shippers. In explaining this system it may be stated that the blocks begin in the extreme northwest part of the state of Washington with 101 and are numbered across to the east. The second tier starts with 201, directly under 101, and so on down, the last sub-block being 2,445, which embraces the extreme southeasterly portion of the state of Florida, each of the blocks being divided into sixteen sub-blocks, designated by letters from A to Q, omitting J.

New Minimum Express Rates.

Under the new schedule of interstate rates, subject to revision, the minimum charge on a first-class shipment is 21 cents. On a second-class shipment it is 25 cents, unless the first-class rates are lower. Generally speaking, the second-class rates are seventy-five per cent of the first-class rates. The first and second-class charges are based upon rates per 100 pounds. It is not practicable in these classes to have the charges increase in proportion to the weight; for instance, to charge for a ten-pound package ten times the charge for a one-pound package, and so on, would make the charges so high as to keep the business from reviving. The new schedules of first and second-class rates, therefore, contain a list of fixed rates for the transportation of packages of every weight from one to 100 pounds.

How New Rates Are Made.

The new federal express tariffs state all rates from block to block, except that between points on the same block and between points in adjoining blocks they are stated from sub-block to sub-block. An important feature of the new system is that rates are made from block to block or from sub-block to sub-block, irrespective of the number of carriers participating in the transportation. For instance, a shipment is to be made between two points, A and C. If the company with which the shipment originates is not represented at C the property is taken by that company to another point, B, and there transferred to a second company to complete the transportation. Assuming the shipment to weigh 100 pounds, under the old system of determining charges, the first carrier would assess, say, 50 cents, its rate per 100 pounds for the transportation from A to B, and the second carrier would assess a similar charge based upon its rate per 100 pounds from B to C, thus making the charges $1. Under the new system the rate per 100 pounds from sub-block A, in which the shipment originates, to sub-block C, in which it is delivered, is a given amount per 100 pounds, say 60 cents, and this is the charge which will be collected for the transportation.

The new method for ascertaining the rate upon a given shipment will be as follows: Find out the nature of the article and the proper classification to apply. Then turn to a directory of express stations, now being distributed by the companies to drivers, agents and shippers, and find out the block and sub-block in which the destination office is located. Then turn to the block tariff and find the scale number which applies. By then referring to the schedule of first and second-class express rates, and under the scale number already obtained, the charge which is to be made on the shipment will then be learned.

R. E. Jones. Sam Selligman.
A Good Pair to Draw To.

Second-class rates under the new classification cover, with a few exceptions, articles of food or drink, including plants and greens when properly packed, being seventy-five per cent of the merchandise, or first-class rates. The second-class rates replace the old general specials, but also include a much larger variety of articles. Second-class articles must be so prepared as to show the nature of the contents or they will be billed as first-class, subject to revision on proof of the nature of the contents.

Urge Earlier Shipments.

Although every preliminary preparation has been made by the various express companies to put the new rates, regulations and practices prescribed by both the federal and various state authorities into effect without confusion, the officials, believing that the volume of their traffic will increase shortly by leaps and bounds, strongly urge upon the shipping public the necessity for making their daily express shipments at earlier hours than now prevail.

Most of the matter transported by express moves outward from the large cities. In New York city one of the express companies handles on an average from 27,000 to 30,000 pieces of express matter daily at one of its depots and from 12,000 to 15,000 daily at another depot. At the first depot over seventy-five per cent of this matter is handled between the hours of 6 and 9 in the evening. At the other station over ninety per cent is handled between 6:30 and 9:30 in the evening. This practice of late shipping results in much confusion which might easily be avoided and much delay and many mistakes might be overcome by early shipment of express matter.

CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES.

In the issue of The Review for January 22, page 16, there is an article on carnation culture headed "When Stock Is Shipped In," referring, of course, to plants. In the second part, headed "Delayed or Damaged Shipments," there is a statement which is not in accordance with my best knowledge and business experience with the prevailing laws of our state and, as we presume, the laws of most of the other states of our Union. The article says that "if contents are damaged, consignee can refuse the shipment and the shipper is able to collect from the forwarding company." Allow me to copy from a quite recent decision published in our Journal of Commerce, as I presume this to be a subject of vital interest to your many readers:

"Goods cannot be abandoned to a carrier, as they might to an insurer. Any goods that the carrier, for any reason, has failed to deliver, must, if they have any value at all, be dealt with by the owner, who is the purchaser, not the shipper of the goods. The carrier is liable for any deterioration arising out of his negligence, but he cannot be compelled to take the goods and pay full value for them. The owner is to dispose of the goods to best advantage, as if the whole loss were destined to fall on him, and then he may hold the carrier for the difference between the price obtained for the goods and the value they would have had if the carrier had not been negligent in regard to them. This is held practically to be the law in every state of the Union."

You will see that in cases of poor delivery by the carriers, consignees, who are by the law the owners of the goods shipped for their account and risk, will have to accept the goods, of course under protest and reserving their rights to claim. They will have to protect the shippers and not try to throw the goods into the shippers' hands. They have to claim from the carriers, not the shippers. The latter will always support any just claim, and such support has, in our experience, in the majority of instances influenced the carriers to at least some sort of settlement with the consignees, sometimes promptly, sometimes more tardily. But the carriers will have to acknowledge just claims put before them in legal form. The way suggested in your article does not appear to me to be legal form, but a form to impede the successful collection of a just claim.

SHORT COURSES AT CORNELL.

Farmers' week at Cornell University completed the short courses in floriculture which began November 11, 1913. Three distinct courses have been given this year. The commercial course consists of five lectures and two afternoons each week devoted to practical and investigational work. The aim is to familiarize the students with the methods of culture of as many commercial crops as possible, such as roses, carnations, violets, orchids and the like. Eleven have taken this work during the last session. The course in greenhouse construction is also for persons interested in commercial problems. Different methods of construction used in houses for growing flowers and vegetables are described, and factors which influence the heating of these are studied. Coldframes and hotbeds are also considered. Twelve have been taking this work.

The course in amateur flower growing is designed principally for those interested in home flower growing. So far as possible, this course is given without reference to greenhouses. The physiological principles of plant growth are considered in so far as they apply to the growing of house plants and garden flowers. Practical exercises in propagation by seeds, cuttings and other methods are given. Two lectures each week are also given in the culture of various plants adapted to home growing, including house plants, plants for window and piazza boxes and garden flowers. Fifteen have taken this course. The accompanying illustration shows the students who have taken these short courses in floriculture during the last session.

GLADIOLI IN JUNE AND JULY.

When should America and Mrs. King gladiolus bulbs be planted under glass to have them in flower from June 15 to July 4?

J. C. H.

Plant the bulbs in the benches at the end of March. If planted outside as soon as frost leaves the ground, a good many will be in bloom. You can start them singly in 3½-inch pots in a cold-frame about March 15 and plant outside at the end of April; a good many of these will bloom from June 15 to July 4, but indoor culture will give you the surest crop.

OBITUARY

William Algie.

William Algie, who, since the death of the late Henry Dale, fourteen years ago, has acted as co-executor with T. W. Duggan in the management of the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont., died at his residence at Alton February 1.

Charles Mauff.

Charles Mauff, vice-president of the Mauff Floral Co., Denver, Colo., died January 24 of pneumonia. Mr. Mauff was 53 years old and had lived in Denver all his life. His mother, Mrs. Rosalie Mauff, was for many years a florist, operating the Capitol Hill Greenhouses, of which Charles Mauff and his brother, Albert Mauff, at one time state horticulturist, took charge under the corporate title when Mrs. Mauff went to Los Angeles, Cal., to live. Mr. Mauff is survived by his widow, two brothers, Albert and Robert Mauff; four sisters, Mrs. A. D. Pickens, Mrs. A. B. Briggs and Mrs. R. V. Brown, of Denver, and Mrs. Roy Hartz, of New York city, and his mother, Mrs. Rosalie Mauff, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Charles David Thayer.

Charles David Thayer, one of the oldest florists in the state of Massachusetts, died at his home, 16 Ripley street, Worcester, Mass., January 24 of valvular heart disease at the age of 63 years. Mr. Thayer's health had been failing since the death of his wife two years ago.

Mr. Thayer was born in Worcester July 7, 1850. He went into the florists' business when he was 19 years old and two years later opened a store on Main street, which he conducted for twenty years. At one time he also operated stores in Millbury, Marlboro, Clinton and Spencer. He gradually enlarged his plant and built up his business until he had one of the largest in the state. Of late years Mr. Thayer handled real estate on the side and had a large stock farm, on which were a large number of high-bred cattle. He was past commander of the Knights of Malta and a member of several horticultural societies.

Mr. Thayer leaves five children, Mrs.

A. L. Halford, of Ludlow; C. D. Thayer, Jr.; Mrs. John Beveridge, Alfred D. and Joseph Thayer. A sister, Miss Anna E. Thayer, also survives him. The funeral was held at his home the following Tuesday.

Joseph H. Towell.

From New York comes the report, this week, of the death of Joseph H. Towell, of Paterson, N. J., who had for many years been bedridden but who had continued to conduct his florists' business.

IRIS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Please tell me how long a time is required to have Spanish iris in bloom for Memorial day. I planted iris in flats January 15, and covered them with four inches of soil. When must I bring them in to have them in bloom for Memorial day?

F. H.

Spanish iris will need extremely little forcing to be in flower for Memorial day, as their natural flowering time outdoors is in June. You need not have covered your flats with soil. These irises commence to grow quickly when planted and should not be covered, as are the general run of Dutch bulbs. If you leave them covered, the growths will become weak and drawn. Remove them to coldframes or a light cellar. Never mind if they get an occasional light freezing, as it will not hurt them. About the middle of April place your irises in a cool house, run at about 48 degrees at night, and they will be in ample time for Memorial day. You planted your bulbs quite late; another season get them in during October and the results will be better.

Joliet, Ill.—There is a case pending in chancery in which the Thompson and Fish families are continuing the fight for control of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., a corporation capitalized at $58,000. In 1908 the Fish interests secured the upper hand. Vera Thompson, sister of Mrs. Charles M. Fish, now has sued for the possession of six and one-half shares of stock heretofore voted by the Fish family. Charles M. Fish, Mrs. Helen Fish, P. W. Peterson, B. Wunderlich and the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., defendants in the case, have filed an answer in which they deny the claims of ownership made by the plaintiff.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 54 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo. Thirtieth annual convention, Boston, Mass., August 18 to 21, 1914.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

IN England Polypodium Mayi is a new form that is considered an important addition to the list of market plants.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

BECAUSE of last summer's unfavorable influence on carnation plants and autumn crops of bloom many growers will not trust all their stock to the field this summer, but will plant a part from pots to benches.

THE report is general that stock was scarcer in January than in many years. Bad weather is blamed, in most cases, but the shortage has been equally apparent in localities where climatic conditions have not been far from normal.

THE Classified ads in The Review all come practically without solicitation, as it is impossible to know who has the surplus stock. The fact that there are nearly a thousand a week, nearly all sent in by mail without solicitation, shows how serviceable the trade has found these inexpensive little liners.

IT's real name is Antoine Rivoire, but there was a time when it sold best as Mrs. Taft. However, most of the trade now use a part of the name Prince de Bulgarie, which, in shortening, becomes Bulgaria. And now the society editors have added a letter, so we read that the bridesmaids' flowers were "Bulgarian" roses.

IN certain quarters there is urgent demand for a national credit association of florists, but really that is not what is needed—nearly everyone knows the weak buyers; what really is needed is the strengthening of the backbones of the sellers to the point where they will have the strength of purpose to stop giving credit to those who do not pay promptly. The Review speaks with authority on the subject, as its own losses seldom come without ample warning.

THERE is believed to be a fair prospect of obtaining this year an appropriation of $75,000 at the hands of the legislature in New York for greenhouses for floricultural research work at Cornell University Agricultural College. The last legislature made the appropriation, but Governor Sulzer vetoed it.

THE complaint of poor bulbous stock is so widespread as to excite much comment. The bulbs are not producing the results that usually are obtained; both cut stock and pan stock are so poor as to sell with difficulty. In certain localities the blame is put on dark weather, in some places on warm weather, and in others on other conditions of the elements. Is it possible the trouble is in the bulbs?

HOW THEY WATCH.

Of course when one wants to get the attention of possible buyers who are not searching for stock the proper plan is to use a big, strong display, but to catch the eye of the man who is looking for a certain item nothing is needed but a little Classified liner in The Review. All the trade consults the Classified ads when something in the way of standard stock is wanted. This is the result:

We are sold out of coleus and Sprenger for a few weeks. This will show you how the trade watches the Classified ads in The Review, and the advertisers' results.—Felch Bros., Maywood, Ill., January 24, 1914.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Grand Forks, N. D.—J. V. Wickler, the proprietor of the Wickler Floral Co., filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy January 23, giving his liabilities as $6,122 and his assets as $1,850. This amount includes trees and shrubs valued at $1,360, which were sold to E. J. Lander & Co., September 25, 1913. The sale, being within four months of the filing of the petition, will probably be contested. In spite of misfortune and expense from sickness and death in the family in the last few years, Mr. Wickler tried to build up his florists' and nursery business, but was unable to get enough to pay off the old debts. His daughters have rented from him the store fixtures, which he claims under the exemption rights, and, occupying the same place, will carry on the business.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There has been no material change in market conditions since last report, but with the sun again shining now and then the growers have hopes that the supply will increase. Already there are signs of a good supply of sweet peas. The belated crops have started to arrive and growers have notified their wholesalers that they can be assured of fairly good shipments from now on if the weather is the least bit favorable.

Roses are in slightly better supply than they were a week ago, but there still are more orders for the shorter grades than can be handled without trouble. Of course Killarney is more in evidence than any other variety, as it is planted at least as heavily as all other roses combined. The call for funeral flowers takes up White Killarney even quicker than short pink. There are enough long Killarney so that prices have eased a little. Outside of this one variety the market has little to offer,

THE SHORTAGE of ROSES is PASSED

YOU CAN GET all the roses you need if you get your order into our hands early in the day. Of course, we sell to city buyers and other wholesalers after our shipping orders are picked out and set aside, but the supply now is so large we seldom are without fine stock, even for late orders. ## Corsage Flowers for St. Valentine's Day

VIOLETS VALLEY FANCY CATTLEYA ORCHIDS

These are the flowers that will be most wanted and with which we shall be especially well supplied. We regularly handle more violets than any wholesaler west of New York. The cream of the crops, double and single. Our valley is the celebrated Chicago Market brand—none better and not much so good. Our Cattleyas are home grown, excellent stock.

FANCY BEAUTIES

Most of the Beauties now on the market are too poor to be salable, but our Beauties are first-class. The stores that have the Beauty trade need have no hesitancy in taking orders—we can supply fine stock. Plenty of medium and short Beauties.

CARNATIONS

For years it has been recognized that we have the highest average quality of any large supply of carnations—almost all of our stock will meet the needs of the most exacting buyer. It not only is good stock when it leaves us, but it is good stock when it reaches the out-of-town retailer—and it pleases HIS customers.

BULB STOCK

We have a full line—Jonquils, Tulips, Freesias—the best grade procurable. A large supply.

GREENS

The trade will find here a full supply of the best quality.

EASTER LILIES

We can supply fine Easter Lilies every day in the year.

...ANNOUNCEMENT...

We wish to announce that on February 1 we purchased the CLEVELAND PLANT & FLOWER CO., of Cleveland, Ohio.

We have continued their contracts with their growers, which will give us greatly increased shipments of flowers, enabling us to take care of your cut flower wants to better advantage.

The purchase also includes an immense stock of Florists' Supplies, which will be disposed of at greatly reduced prices.

for there is a good demand for the yellows. Richmond is coming into crop again. As for Taft, Maryland and the new roses, they are being cut in such small quantities that they are hard to find. The plants of the new roses, Mrs. Russell, Shawyer and Milady, are being cut up for propagating, so that these varieties are to be had only in small quantities. There is some improvement in the quality of roses, which have been decidedly poor of late, because of the lack of sun.

Beauties in the longer lengths are fairly plentiful, but the shorter grades have not been in oversupply at any time this year. All Beauties show the effects of the weather and the better grades are bringing good returns. Some of the high-class stores complain that the Beauties of late have been so poor they could not use them without receiving complaints from their customers.

The supply of carnations has not increased to any great extent. There are quantities that are too poor to ship, but first-class carnations for shipping purposes are not easily picked up in any large quantities. Most of the carnations now on the market are soft and are of little use except to the local retailer for funeral work.

Violets are in large supply and there are more of the Hudson river doubles than the market can care for without effort. The singles, however, are not so plentiful and they bring good prices. The supply for St. Valentine's day is not expected to be so plentiful as the dealers would like. While the sweet pea growers believe they will be able to pick in large quantities, there is no such word of encouragement from the local violet men. Cattleyas are less plentiful than they were and the bargain sales of locally grown stock are said to be over for a time.

Bulbous stock is being cut more freely than before and there are plenty of tulips, Paper Whites, jonquills, freesias, etc. The supply of jonquills, however, is not any too large for the demand and the dealers find no trouble in disposing of them. There is much complaint that the bulbous stock this year is poor, the pan stock as well as that grown for cutting. Valley moves well and the supply, though large, is kept well cleaned up.

Fisher's Affairs.

Representing a meeting of creditors, Philip Schupp and John Zech made a thorough investigation of the affairs of the H. A. Fisher Co., at Kalamazoo, last week, devoting several days to the work. Returning, it was reported to the creditors that the largest creditor has accepted Mr. Fisher's personal notes for his account and that the other indebtedness is approximately $9,600. Only one creditor had started suit. The committee recommended that the creditors accept the offer of Mr. Fisher's friends to pay at once 12½ cents on the dollar, Mr. Fisher to move the store to cheaper quarters and otherwise cut his expenses in half, such profits as are secured to be turned over to the committee until the company's indebtedness is discharged. The committee feels that the business is a good and profitable one and that careful supervision will save it for Mr. Fisher without loss to his creditors.

Pyfer and Olsem Buy Star.

The Star Floral Co., Wilmette, Ill., which has been on the market for some time, February 3 passed to the ownership of Aaron T. Pyfer and Peter Olsem, of the Chicago Carnation Co. The consideration is reported to have been $63,000, which is practically the amount Herman F. Schuettler, first deputy chief of police, the former owner, has said the plant cost as it stands today. The first houses were erected seven years ago and the range has been added to from time to time until now there are twenty-one houses, a total of approximately 100,000 feet of glass. The establishment was overhauled last summer and is in good shape. The houses are in roses, carnations and spring bedding stock. The new owners, who took possession at once, will continue to grow cut flowers for the Chicago market. The stock now is being consigned to the Chicago Carnation Co., where Mr. Pyfer will continue as manager, at least for a time. Mr. Olsem will remove from Joliet to Wilmette and take personal charge of the growing and a new superintendent is to be appointed for the Joliet establishment.

Various Notes.

At the regular meeting of the Retail Florists' Association of Chicago, Monday, February 2, about 100 members were present and twenty applications for membership were received. An exhibit was staged by Wertheimer Bros., who also donated a ribbon case which was raffled off and won by Julius Zschau. Poehlmann Bros. Co. showed a line of florists' supplies and Horace Hughes displayed his line of valentine boxes. There was an animated discussion of the association's pet project of getting all the wholesalers to take the same stand as the ones who decline all retail orders. Announcement was made of the next regular meeting, the first Monday in March, to be held at the same place, 170 West Jackson boulevard. A committee to take charge of a trade exhibition to be held this month was appointed. H. Dieu Schiller is secretary.

The accidental death of Herbert Jegen Bitters, the 8-year-old son of Mrs. Ida Jegen Bitters, was a shock to her friends in the florists' trade. The boy was crushed to death under the wheels of an Illinois Central train at the Windsor Park station February 1. His mother was Miss Ida Jegen, daughter of J. J. Jegen, both well known to the florists of Chicago.

Jean E. Franke, retail florist at 736 Milwaukee avenue, has the indorsement of the Republican organization for the aldermanic nomination in the Seventeenth ward in the primary election of February 24.

January 27 Fred Strail, who is well known in retail circles here, went to St. Louis to take a position in the department store flower section presided over by David Geddes, also a former Chicago man, having been connected

The Evans-Jones patent case was argued in the U. S. Appellate Court in Chicago January 30, having been brought on appeal from the U. S. Court at Indianapolis. No decision is expected for several months.

Four important holidays are on the calendar this month at Bassett & Washburn's store, to-wit: Lincoln's birthday, St. Valentine's day, Washington's birthday and C. L. Washburn's birthday, the latter coming February 27.

Sam Pearce is bringing the stock to market, from his recently completed establishment on Higgins avenue, in a new Nelson-Le Moon motor truck, all green and gold.

M. C. Gunterberg looks forward to a large St. Valentine's day demand for violets.

Bulbous stock has found a good market so far, according to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, tulips, jonquils, etc., cleaning up in good shape.

A. L. Vaughan says collections have been satisfactory since Christmas, much better than at the close of the year. He adds that prospects are good for St. Valentine's day.

Charles Erne, who is acting as receiver for E. H. Hunt, Inc., states that a few disputed accounts are holding up the dividend to creditors that had been promised by T. T. Clark, the former receiver. As soon as these are adjusted, the payment will be made.

PLAN FOR DANVILLE MEETING.

The officers of the Illinois State Florists' Association and representatives of the Danville Florists' Club met together at the Plaza hotel at Danville January 21 and went over the plans for the joint meeting of the state florists' associations of Indiana and Illinois at Danville March 10 and 11. The Danville florists have outlined a program for the two days, which the officers of the association fully approved. The Plaza hotel has been named as headquarters for the visiting florists and an attendance of about 300 is expected. The hall of the Armory will be used for the exhibition, which is being planned as a big feature of the convention.

Monday, March 9, will be devoted to staging the exhibits of flowers and plants. Tuesday will be the first day of the exhibition, and in the afternoon the important business meeting will be held. Wednesday the visitors will take a trip to the University of Illinois, at Urbana, to visit the agricultural school and the experiment station there. A banquet at the Plaza hotel Wednesday evening will close the convention and is to be one of its prominent features. The speakers have not yet been selected. The music committee comprises W. J. Anker, Charles Walker and J. J. Smith.

The program of the meeting, so far as it has been completed, is as follows:

Introductory remarks—H. E. Smith, president of the Danville Florists' Club.

Address of welcome—Attorney H. A. Swallow, corporation counsel.

Response and welcome to the Indiana Florists' Society—One of the officers of the Illinois State Florists' Society.

Response—W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind. President's address—Charles Loveridge, of Peoria.

Report of secretary—J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville.

Report of treasurer—F. L. Washburn, of Bloomington.

Unfinished business.

New business.

Remarks by visiting Indiana florists.

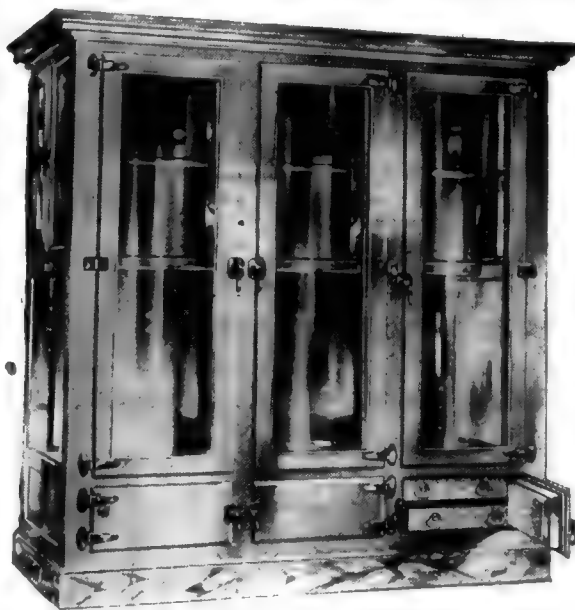

General discussion.

Nomination and election of officers.

Falls City, Neb.—Mr. and Mrs. Bert Simanton attended the meeting of the State Florists' Association at Lincoln, at which the firm of Simanton & Pence received first prize for their display of roses. Other stock intended for exhibition failed to reach Lincoln in time to make a showing, on account of the express company's delay.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Eastern Market.

There is a greater variety of flowers to supply the market. Double daffodils, Narcissus Von Sion, have come and are offered side by side with Golden Spur. Freesia is more abundant and showy tulips, like Keizerskroon and Couronne d'Or, have arrived. This added assortment, with rather more of the staple flowers, has given an easier tone. Buyers no longer are worried lest they cannot fill orders of ordinary size; they take things easily, and prices have fallen a little. This is most noticeable on carnations and on short roses. Easter lilies are among the few scarce flowers; Beauties belong in the same class, while Richmond is by no means abundant.

The orchid situation has changed but little; there are plenty to be had, with prices easy. Gardenias are going a little better. Violets are dull. There is a fair amount of activity in sweet peas, with quite heavy receipts after a sunny day. The orchid-flowering varieties of sweet peas continue a feature of the market. Snapdragon shows improvement; there are some splendid flowers of several colors, borne on long stems that are extremely decorative. Shipping trade is fairly brisk.

Club Meeting.

George Burton presided, February 2, over the best carnation meeting ever held by the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. The feature of the evening was the splendid address of R. T. Brown, of Akehurst & Son, Baltimore, Mrs. C. E. Akehurst, a fine pink. S. S. Skidelsky & Co. exhibited Philadelphia. This fine pink was seen here for the first time. The Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., set up a wonderful vase of Matchless and a light pink sport of Mrs. C. W. Ward. J. M. Rider, of Baltimore, exhibited two promising sorts, a flesh colored pink and a white. Richard Lange, of Roxborough, exhibited White Perfection and a white seedling.

Various Notes.

Duncan Macaw has decided to build one more house on his place at Norwood, Pa. This will make three houses, each 30 x 150. Mr. Macaw has the hearty good wishes of his many florist friends.

Mrs. Fred Ehret keeps her handsome showcase filled with an attractive variety of cut flowers, chosen with excellent taste. Killarney Brilliant and delicate white primroses occupied points of vantage in Mrs. Ehret's display last week.

The Floracraft Greenhouses, Moorestown, N. J., did a heavy January business. Valley is the specialty. Golden Spur narcissi and pure white freesia also were cut in quantity.

Berger Bros. are receiving some exceptionally well grown valley. Their snapdragons are in exhibition form.

Joseph G. Neidinger has originated a February specialty in cherry trees and cherry branches for window decoration.

Samuel J. Irvine has retired from the field.

August Gontram, of Holmesburg, Pa., who visited Albin Harvey & Sons, Brandywine Summit, Pa., recently, reports that their large new house, which is planted in sweet peas, is a magnificent sight. It will be in flower about the middle of this month and contains buds, all of the Spencer type, that promise to equal if not raise the best winter standard in sweet peas.

Robert Craig and party have reached the Isle of Pines. Mr. Craig's business interest there is centered in dracenas. He has great quantities of canes of the choicer varieties that are flourishing in this favored clime.

Frank R. Hastings is recovering rapidly from what might have been a serious accident, a fall down the cellar steps of his store, cutting his hand on glass vases.

The Market.

There was little change in the wholesale cut flower market during the week ending the month of January. Light shipments, no increase in local demand, and about the same level of values as prevailed for two preceding weeks about sums up the situation. A heavy rainfall spoiled the Saturday trade. This has been followed by colder weather, and a good February business is anticipated.

American Beauties still lead the rose procession, the best of them advancing last week to $75 per hundred. This top was for the selected stock. Then came Russell, Shawyer, Mock and Sunburst, with Ward, Milady and Killarney Queen not far behind. The No. 1 and No. 2 Maids, Brides and Killarneys are absorbed quickly at good prices. Any boom in the retail department of the business would lift prices instantly, as supply and demand at present are about even. Larger arrivals of all varieties of roses are promised within the next few days.

Carnations have been steady during the last week and the stock now arriving is superb in quality. McKinley day, while it created a little extra demand, had less effect than had been expected.

Valley is abundant and lower. Lilies also have receded slightly from the excellent average of the last few weeks, and still show a downward tendency. There is no diminution in the volume of gardenias now arriving and prices are low. Orchids, too, are overabundant and prices show no tendency to rise, the best of them being quoted at $35 per hundred. The supply of freesias, narcissi, daffodils and daisies is sufficient for any possible demand, and of excellent quality. Forget-me-not, mignonette and wallflowers also are abundant. Lilac and acacia are the aristocrats of the market. Larger shipments and lower prices express the violet conditions. There seems to be no increase in demand, even the singles moving slowly.

The auto show, banquets, graduations and weddings should combine to make the present the best week of the year to date. It is high time for a "bull market" in the florists' business.

appropriating roses and selling them in adjoining cities, absorbing the proceeds.

Monroe & Reynolds, the new wholesale cut flower dealers at 111 West Twenty-eighth street, say they have been much encouraged by their first week's experience. The members of the firm are Robert Monroe and John L. Reynolds.

The New York carnation experts who visited Cleveland particularly commend the enterprise of the retail florists there. Gratifying success attended the exhibits of our local growers.

Preparations are being made by the retailers, with a view to increased observance of St. Valentine's day, and fancy baskets and boxes of flowers will be featured as expressing the sentiments of that occasion. The leading retailers will have many novel and beautiful suggestions in their window displays.

The interest in the coming flower show, now less than seven weeks distant, seems to be growing daily. Great preparations are under way by the leading growers and gardeners. Secretary Ebel, of the gardeners' society, announces a banquet and bowling contest as one feature of the week's exhibition. March 21 is the date of the opening.

J. A. Muller, traveling representative of Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, arrived home last week from his European trip.

Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford, have nearly 200 employees in their service, and their annual reception last week was one of the social events of the season. The decoration of the immense ballroom by the company was beautiful and elaborate, the finest specimens from the greenhouses being utilized. Handsome favors were donated by the firm, and the opening march was led by Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Atkins. Leo Oesternei, one of the firm's landscape artists, and J. L. Knickman were the floor managers. Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Bobbink, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Atkins and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bobbink were among the guests, of whom there were several hundred.

Max Schling reports business excellent, with an important decoration every few days.

The Cut Flower Exchange will hold its monthly meeting February 7 at the office, No. 1 Queensborough plaza, Long Island City.

February 12 the annual banquet of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society will be held at East Norwich, L. I.

The nineteenth annual banquet of the New Jersey Floricultural Society took place at the Plaza hotel, Monday evening, February 2, and proved a most enjoyable and successful reunion. The absence of several of the veterans was widely regretted. The secretary, Geo. W. Strange, was chairman of the banquet committee. The other officers for 1914 are: President, Edwin Thomas; vice-president, Henry Halbig; treasurer, Fritz Berglund.

Vegetable Forcing

THE BEST EARLY CABBAGE.

In the vegetable forcing column of The Review for January 15 appeared an inquiry, signed B. A. A., concerning the best early varieties of cabbage. If B. A. A. will plant his whole plot with Glory of Enkhuizen or Copenhagen Market he will get from fifty to 100 per cent more cabbage. I have tested both and would plant no other. I start the seed in flats in the greenhouse about March 1. When the plants are large enough I prick them off into flats about one and one-half to two inches apart. As soon as they have become large enough to make good plants I set them out in coldframes to harden. Watch for a warm spell in which to set out the plants, for if they have three or four days to get started they will stand hard frosts and come through all right. The flats should be well watered before the plants are set out in the field, to insure a good start. Wilson Her.

May I suggest in answer to the inquiry of your correspondent B. A. A. in the issue of The Review for January 15 that he try Copenhagen Market for his early variety? It comes in three or four days later than Early Jersey Wakefield, but gives twice the yield, is a sure header and will stand twice as long as any other early cabbage. W. Atlee Burpee & Co. have an exceedingly good strain of it. The average weight of my cabbages of this variety is about ten pounds. I have had them as heavy as twenty-six pounds, and they were not coarse even then. Alwyne Buckley.

FERTILIZER FOR TOMATOES.

Will you please tell me what sorts of dry fertilizers are best for mixing with soil for tomato plants? I now use pulverized sheep manure, but it seems to me there should be something better. I try to keep the temperature at 60 to 75 degrees, but some of the plants seem to be stunted or hungry. Should I give them applications of liquid manure? E. B.

Good pulverized sheep manure should have suited your tomato plants. If it is not giving you the desired results, try decayed cow manure passed through a half-inch screen, to mix with your soil; one part cow manure to five parts soil will be about right. I would advise the use of natural rather than artificial manures for tomatoes, as they will give the best results. Some fine bone added to the soil will prove a good help to the plants; use a 4-inch potful to each barrow load of loam. If any of your plants seem starved in pots, give a top-dressing of fine bone or other fertilizer. For plants in beds or benches, if they seem to be starved, give a mulch of some well decayed manure and water it well. If the plants are fruiting, apply liquid manure once in ten days, and later in the season once a week. The other fertilizers named are equally good for planted-out tomatoes. Your temperatures are about right; 60 degrees at night, with a dry atmosphere, is what they need. After the middle of March advance the minimum to from 62 to 63 degrees. C. W.

advised if there is anything better than tobacco stems to exterminate the green fly. If so, what? How should it be used, and where can it be secured? I now have a crop ready for sale. The quality is good, and the heads large. I am surprised myself at the success I have had with the first crop, but I have had all sorts of trouble with the green fly. B. R. E.

Tobacco stems as a fumigant are now almost entirely discarded. They make a foul smell, and when they are used there is great danger of scorching lettuce leaves. There are now a number of good nicotine preparations which are vastly preferable to tobacco stems. If you use steam you can paint the pipes with a nicotine extract. This also can be evaporated over wood alcohol lamps. There are other nicotine preparations in the form of paper. These latter are handy, but, unfortunately, variable in quality. C. W.

Columbus, O.—E. B. Roberts, now at 36 West Fourth avenue, will take possession of a 200-acre farm next spring and plans to devote part of the tract to hardy flowers for the market.

THREE SPECIAL OFFERS

On account of sickness, will make the three following offers, any one of which will bear investigation—any one of which is a money maker. We have been in business for 30 years; have 15,000 feet of glass in good repair, some only two years old. Same stocked with general assortment of cut flowers and plants. Are near two cemeteries.

FIRST OFFER

Will sell the greenhouses and stock outright for any reasonable offer and give long lease on land.

SECOND OFFER

I will sell the stock and rent greenhouses.

THIRD OFFER

I will sell half interest in both greenhouses and real estate, or half interest in greenhouses and stock alone.

I want to give my whole attention to the store and through it can use all the cut flowers and plants you can raise. Have never yet been able to supply the demand.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.

H. H. Cade, formerly of Cairo, Ill., purchased the establishment of John Walker February 2 and has taken possession. Mr. Walker and Mr. McLean came to Youngstown some ten years ago, from Philadelphia, and bought the Hippard establishment. Later Mr. Walker became sole owner. Two years ago he built a new range of glass at Boardman, disposing of the city property. There is a well equipped city store at 11 South Phelps street. The growing plant consists of seventeen acres of good land, five 200-foot and three 100-foot greenhouses, boiler and packing shed, 36 x 100; all erected in 1911; houses planted in roses, carnations, etc.; 6-room house, two barns and other buildings.

Mr. Cade was in the business at Cairo, Ill., for several years prior to last August, when he sold out to his brother and went to Ridgely, Md.

IS THIS MAN DISSATISFIED?

Every now and then an advertiser writes a letter regarding results, saying that he is dissatisfied, but it seems that possibly he may not expect to be taken literally. Like this:

Please don't print our advertisement in the Classified section any more. We already have orders for about 5,000 more geraniums than we can fill and we have to spend too much time returning checks. The advertisement of three lines only appeared once. If you should print it again we would lose our profit in time and stamps consumed in answering orders we cannot fill.—E. T. Barnes, Spencer, Ind., January 27, 1914.

MAKING LIQUID PUTTY.

Kindly give me a formula for making liquid putty, and state the quantity that would be required for about 3,000 square feet of glass. I am unable to buy putty in liquid form here.

A. O.

In order to make a first-class liquid putty, one should be able to run it through a paint mill, but it will answer if a fine sieve is used for sifting the whiting, to remove everything except the dust-like particles. The amount required will depend largely upon the size and thickness of the glass, as well as upon the space between the glass and the sashbars. For glazing with double-strength 16-inch glass, about 150 pounds of whiting and five to seven gallons of linseed oil will be required, depending upon the consistency of the putty. The durability of the putty will be improved by the addition of about ten pounds of white lead.

While liquid putty is in a convenient form for use in patching an old roof, I prefer a rather firm paste for ordinary glazing, merely bedding the glass and filling the cracks at the sides of the panes, without using any putty over the glass. T.

TIME TO FORCE DUTCH BULBS.

When will it be advisable to take in Dutch bulbs to be forced? J. C. H.

Any of the Dutch bulbs, such as hyacinths, narcissi and tulips, can be housed for forcing as soon as the growths are started two to three inches. Bring batches along as needed. Dutch hyacinths and tulips can be had as early as Christmas, narcissi a little later, and from that time until May 1. C. W.

TEN PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The market conditions the first part of last week were most satisfactory to the local trade, as prices were up and stock rather scarce in all seasonable flowers. During the latter part of the week, stock began to come in heavily and the demand was slow. The weather, too, was rather freakish during the week; up to January 28 it was summer-like, but from then on we got a real taste of winter, with a big snow storm January 30. This did not help the flower business much, but did help to empty the coal bins of the growers. The one noticeable feature last week was the great increase of violet consignments, and the growers of Kirkwood, where most of them come from, are happy once more. Another feature was the increased supply of bulbous stock. Jonquils, Romans and Paper Whites were easier than they have been for the last ten days at any of the wholesale markets.

In roses there is still a scarcity, although the new crop now coming on promises to be a heavy one. Carnations are again in crop and have been coming in heavily the latter part of the week. Prices on these are down to $3 per hundred for fancy varieties and $2 for good stock. Easter lilies and valley are in good demand, with an equal supply. There is always a good demand in this market for greens, such as smilax, asparagus, galax and fancy ferns.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. James S. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia., spent a few days longer than was expected in the city calling on old acquaintances, as this is Mr. Wilson's former home. They left January 29, taking Mr. Wilson's brother, Alexander, with them.

of Forest park, died last week at the home of his parents. Mr. Hatchford was well known in local trade circles.
The funeral took place January 30.

The Brix Floral Co., on St. Louis avenue, reports a splendid trade in all lines since the holidays. Adolph Brix has joined the Retail Florists' Association.

Robert Thomson, the local greenhouse builder, reports that he has a number of new houses to build for florists in the county, on which work will begin early in the spring.

Gus. V. Brecht, of the Brecht Co., builders of florists' refrigerators, is consul for the Argentine Republic.

The local crepe-chasers were not quite so active the early part of last week, owing to the scarcity of stock and high prices, but they now have resumed their activity, since stocks of all kinds are more plentiful.

John T. Milliken, head of the Mosgiel Gardens, at Crescent, Mo., reports that he will start a new range of houses next spring. It seems that when Mr.
Milliken gets through building he will own the largest amount of glass west of the Mississippi river. He has 1,000 acres of land at his disposal.

W. C. Smith, of the W. C. Smith
Wholesale Floral Co., says that violets were more plentiful last week than at any time this season, and he now has great hopes of a large supply for St.
Valentine's day, when violets are in great demand. This will be good news for the local trade.

takes place February 12, in Odd Fellows' hall. Mr. Jaenicke's lecture and other interesting features should bring them all out. Remember the meeting opens promptly at 2 o'clock.

Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. had the decorations for several large social functions last week. Among them was the decoration of the Women's Club building for the Kentucky Club. They also have the decorations for the South Side Blue Wing Club for this month, for which 300 American Beauties will be used.

Jos. Witek, who recently bought out Julius Schaffer, on North King's Highway, is making some of his artistic window displays, for which he was noted when in the employ of Fred C. Weber. He reports business satisfactory.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, originator of the Mazzura violet, says that from now on he expects to have a good cut of violets. The Mazzura, like all other varieties, suffered from the early winter warm spell, but is now beginning to show a big crop.

Grimm & Gorly say that their east side branch is enjoying a good run of trade. Their fine displays of cut stock and plants are an attraction along Collinsville avenue. At their Washington avenue store their big force of help has been kept busy.

J. F. Ammann, of the J. F. Ammann Co., Edwardsville, Ill., which consigns all its stock for this market to C. A. Kuehn, was a caller February 2 and reports that he will visit Bloomington this week, and that he, with Mr. Washburn and Mr. Loveridge, will make a trip to Chicago on an inspection tour.

The publicity committee of the Florists' Club will report on the advisability of holding a fall flower show and other matters concerning publicity at the next club meeting. The trustees, who have charge of the club's anniversary banquet, also will make known their plans at this meeting.

Society will be quite active from now until Lent sets in with entertaining, which should keep the west end florists busy for the next few weeks. The south end florists, too, say they have considerable work of this kind booked for this month. J. J. B.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

On the average, cut stock of all kinds has not been any too plentiful and most of it is pretty well cleared daily. The only flowers that seem to come in heavily are carnations, and the varieties are good. Roses are arriving in good condition, both in bloom and foliage. A good shipment of Shawyer arrived recently.

Both Easter and calla lilies are slow in arriving and do not sell rapidly. Valley is plentiful and good. Sweet peas are making a better showing and are bought up eagerly. Violets are fragrant and of good color, but there does not seem to be quite enough for the demand. There is a large quantity of first-grade Paper Whites, but Romans are scarce. A few snapdragons are seen. Asparagus plumosus is in short supply and some extremely poor stock gets into the market. Other greens are fairly plentiful. There is a good display of Dutch bulb stock in bloom in all the stores. Fine cyclamens and azaleas are arranged attractively and bring good prices.

Rosette carnations, a vase of which was on show at the commission house January 31. This appears to be a good variety, with especially strong stems. The bloom is large and true, and the color is popular.

Alexander B. Lamberton has been re-elected president of the park board for the thirteenth term. Calvin C. Laney was reappointed superintendent of parks and re-elected secretary of the board. John Dunbar was re-elected first assistant superintendent.

The officers of the Western New York Horticultural Society which were re-elected at the meeting last week are: President, William C. Barry, for the twenty-fourth term; vice-presidents, E. Van Alstyne, Kinderhook; Samuel Fraser, Geneseo; T. B. Wilson, Hall; C. R. White, Ionia; Seth T. J. Bush, Morton, and T. H. Lattin, Albion; secretary and treasurer, John Hall, for the twenty-fifth term. H. J. H.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

The market is not what florists would consider favorable, although it is responding somewhat better of late. Stock is inferior and roses are nearly all cut. There is little bulbous stock arriving. Sweet peas are now coming in nicely and will be favorites for the St. Valentine's day trade.

Various Notes.

city were so inspired and enthused that they determined to have a flower show in Toledo. The opportunity for carrying out their plans in a successful manner came when the Ohio Land Show Co. invited the Toledo Florists' Club to participate in the show which they are going to hold in the Terminal building during the first and second weeks in November. The idea of this exhibit, which will be a monster one, is to educate the people of Ohio to the advantages of staying right at home to make their fortunes, by revealing the many good qualities of the soil and products of Ohio. Naturally an exhibit of flowers would fit in with this idea in a most appropriate way. The guarantee fund asked by this company has already been raised by the Toledo florists and growers and all that is necessary is the final word from the Ohio real estate board.

Wednesday, January 22, a few Toledo florists made up a party and visited Detroit. Those who made up the party were Harry Heint, Thomas Magee and Frank Schramm, with A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago. At Detroit the party was joined by Robert Rahaley and Mr. Brown. The purpose of the trip was mainly to see the new Philadelphia carnation. After spending some time in seeing the sights of Detroit, the Toledo florists left for Mt. Clemens, where they found the most magnificent carnations of the season. The party took in four places and were delighted with the beautiful valley they saw at Robert Klage's. At Breitmeyer's the Philadelphia carnations were seen in all their glory and in every stage of their development. The stems were from twenty-four to thirty-six inches long and remarkably sturdy and firm. These houses were in full bloom and a few weeks of sun should bring out a fine crop. The feature of the trip was the royal entertainment furnished the Toledo party by good-natured Robert Rahaley.

Lima, Springfield, Dayton and Cincinnati were visited by another party of Toledo growers. This exploration trip was mainly for the purpose of finding some new plants that would enlarge the variety of the local market. The party was composed of Emil Kuhnke, J. Schiller and William Krueger. The expedition was a success from every standpoint.

CLEVELAND.

One of the visitors during the convention of the American Carnation Society was E. J. McCallum, of Pittsburgh, head of the McCallum Co., which operates commission houses in both Pittsburgh and Cleveland. While here Mr. McCallum and W. O. Potter, who has charge of the Cleveland branch, consummated a deal for taking over the Cleveland Plant & Flower Co., which has conducted a wholesale house since September. The Cleveland Plant & Flower Co. was incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000. It was organized by members of the Jones-Russell Co. The incorporators were H. B. Jones, A. B. Barber, C. H. Billman, H. C. Byce and E. E. Dreher. Mr. Barber was the manager. Though owned by the Jones-Russell interests, the two corporations were entirely separate. Before becom-

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, C. O. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

THE journeys of the Dutch bulb salesmen are not along paths of roses—the bulbs they sold last season are flowering too poorly.

THERE is a perfect deluge of bills to put seeds into the parcel post. February 3 Senator Kenyon introduced an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill providing that fourth-class mail matter shall embrace seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, plants, etc.

THE postmaster general having decided that legislation is necessary before seeds, bulbs, plants, etc., can be included in the parcel post, at least four congressmen have risen to the occasion and within the last few days have introduced bills that will wipe out the present law fixing the rate at 1 cent for each two ounces regardless of distance.

MASSIE GETS PRESIDENCY.

At a meeting of the board of directors of Northrup, King & Co., at Minneapolis, January 28, the following officers were elected: President and general manager, Charles C. Massie; vice-president and treasurer, L. M. King; secretary, E. B. Northrup.

Mr. Massie has been connected with the company for more than twenty years and has been general manager since J. E. Northrup's retirement. He is widely known as a seedsman and for the current year is president of the American Seed Trade Association and vice-president of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association. He is 42 years of age.

L. M. King, who is also secretary and treasurer of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association, succeeds the late Preston King as vice-president and treasurer of the company.

E. B. Northrup, who becomes secretary, has been connected with the business for more than seven years.

SEEDSMEN MIX WITH CANNERS.

Biggest Gathering of Its Kind Yet Held.

This is canners' week at Baltimore, the center of the industry in the east, and the gathering of those interested in the canning trade is the largest on record. Also the exhibit of machinery and materials, in the Fifth Regiment armory, is the largest ever staged. In this department the seedsmen who cater to the canning trade are well represented, a dozen concerns having exhibits, as follows: Leonard Seed Co., Chicago; Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit; Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.; W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; John H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis.; Hogg & Lytle, Toronto; S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn.; N. B. Keeney & Son, Le Roy, N. Y.; Rogers Bros., Chaumont, N. Y.; Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.; J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore. Others represented are W. H. Grennell, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., and the Peninsula Seed Co., Port Huron, Mich.

Among the seedsmen whose presence

342 West 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

Head, 650 pounds; Grand Rapids, 150 pounds. In the report of the bids published in The Review for January 15 it appeared that the Springfield Seed Co. offered lettuce at 18 cents per pound.

THE POSTAGE ON SEEDS.

The Review has printed frequent references to the growing demand that seeds be admitted to the parcel post. That the subject has had consideration by the postoffice department is shown by the following letter addressed by A. M. Dockery, the third assistant postmaster general, to H. G. Hastings & Co., seedsmen at Atlanta, Ga., dated January 23:

In answer to your letter of January 19, concerning the postage rates applicable to seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, plants, etc., I have to say that careful consideration has been given the question of extending the parcel post rate to these articles, but in view of the provisions of the parcel post act of August 24, 1912, that act shall not in any way affect the postage rate of 1 cent for each two ounces, or fraction thereof, on seeds, plants, etc., as fixed by the act of July 24, 1888. The assistant attorney-general of this department holds that no change in the postage rate on such articles can be made without legislation.

SEED TRADE WANTS HEARING.

In a letter to The Review dated January 29, W. F. Therkildson, chairman of the postal laws committee of the American Seed Trade Association, says:

It has come to the notice of the postal laws committee that Representative Anderson January 23 introduced H. R. 12170, an act to provide that "hereafter, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants shall be subject to the rates of postage provided by, and shall be mailable under, the provisions of Section 8 of an act entitled 'An Act Making Appropriation for the Service of the Post Office Department, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, and for other purposes approved August 24, 1912, as the same may have been, or may be, lawfully modified by the rules or orders of the postmaster general.'"

This would seem to substantiate the point I made with my correspondence with you some time back, that the legislators must recognize that the authority given the postmaster general under the Bourne act would not extend to seeds, because of the wording which said, "This act shall in no way apply to seeds, plants and bulbs, which are provided for, etc." As you will, no doubt, remember, this last clause was inserted in the Bourne act at the insistent demand of the postal laws committee of the American Seed Trade Association for the years of 1912-13. This should allay the fears of all friends of the idea that seeds should be included in the parcel post, and also substantiate the statements that I made in my letters to you that seeds, plants and bulbs, etc., would soon be included.

The postal laws committee would appreciate the cooperation of all members of the American Seed Trade Association to the extent that they use their influence in securing a hearing for this committee before the proper authorities.

The chairman of the postoffice committee of the House of Representatives is John A. Moon, Washington, D. C. The Review suggests that seedsmen write him asking that no action be taken affecting the postage on seeds until the American Seed Trade Association has been heard by the committee.

WHAT DOES THE TRADE WANT?

It is apparent that there is a widespread demand that seeds and plants be admitted to the parcel post. The parcel post law provided for the alteration of the rates and regulations by the postmaster general with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, but the law also provided in plain language that nothing therein should be construed as altering the rate of postage on seeds, etc. The postoffice department, therefore, has taken the stand, with legal advice, that legislation by Congress will be necessary to make any change affecting these trade commodities. At least two bills have been introduced within the last fortnight which would have the effect of putting seeds and plants in the parcel post. Originally seeds were kept out of the zone system because of the insistence of a committee of the American Seed Trade Association. Some seedsmen who then were in favor of the old flat rate are now in favor of the zone system and rates. Without a doubt the trade can get consideration if there is a unanimous demand, but if seedsmen are asking for such a variety of things as to show that there is no agreement as to just how the trade's interests will be best served, the result will be in doubt.

The Review suggests that the seed trade unite in the request that seeds, plants, etc., be admitted to the parcel post on the same basis that catalogues will be after March 15. This will permit mailing eight ounces of seed any distance for 4 cents, and shipments heavier than eight ounces will take the same zone rates as other lines of merchandise. If all letters on the subject sent to the postoffice committee of either house of Congress make this request it will be certain of serious consideration.

THE MCGILLICUDDY BILL.

The full text of the McGillicuddy bill, introduced January 27, referred to in last week's Review, is as follows:

A BILL, H. R. 12468

Extending the privileges of the parcel post system to include seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this Act the privileges of the parcel post system be, and the same are hereby, extended to include seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants.

Sec. 2. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

This is not the only bill that has been introduced for this purpose, but if this becomes law it will leave the postmaster general free to make rates and rules on seeds, the same as on books, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A NEW SEED HOUSE.

Albert Lea, Minn., says a newspaper of that city, is soon to have an extensive and first-class wholesale and retail seed house, and it will be established under auspices that not only assure its success but which are a guarantee of its reliability. It will be established, the newspaper continues, by Robert H. Black, of Independence, Ia., whose father's seed house there is one of the largest and most reputable in the west, and who, except when pursuing his advanced studies in the business, has spent his life in the work with his father at the Independence plant. Mr. Black is a graduate of the Upper Iowa University and since has taken thorough courses at

MAY'S GLADIOLUS Northern Grown

Especially For Forcing

Florists' failure in forcing Gladiolus Bulbs was due to a large portion being imported or grown in sections where seasons were long and Bulbs did not mature properly. May's Minnesota Gladiolus Bulbs are World Renowned and Famous for their robust habit, luxuriant growth and exquisite beauty; grown in a cold climate and short season, they force easily everywhere with greatest satisfaction. May's Minnesota Grown Bulbs Lead The World.

THERKILDSON AT NEW POST.

The following clipping appeared in the Telegraph-Republican of Painesville, O., January 16, 1914:

"W. F. Therkildson, for the last four years superintendent of the seed department of the Storrs & Harrison Co., left Thursday for Philadelphia, where he will take charge of the advertising and catalogue department of the well known seed house, W. Atlee Burpee & Co.

"Mr. Therkildson will remain in Philadelphia until March, when he will leave for the Lompoc valley, near Los Angeles, Cal., where he will inspect the crops under cultivation by that company.

"During Mr. Therkildson's residence in this city he won many friends, who regret his departure and wish him all manner of good fortune. Mr. Therkildson will be especially missed during fair week, when he was ever ready and enthusiastic to assist with good suggestions.

"Mrs. Therkildson and the two children will remain in this city until the close of the school term, when they will join Mr. Therkildson."

It is understood Mr. Therkildson's title is advertising manager.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston, Mass.—Annual catalogue of seeds, bulbs, roots, plants, fruits, shrubs and general nursery stock, lawn mowers, sprayers, miscellaneous implements and supplies; new varieties of flowers and vegetables are well represented; 184 pages, fully illustrated.

Old Colony Nurseries, Inc., Plymouth, Mass.—Trade list of trees, shrubs, roses, vines and climbers, herbaceous perennials, fruits, asparagus and rhubarb.

Henry Youell, Syracuse, N. Y.—An 8-page descriptive list of gladioli; a list, it is said, which is restricted to "such sorts as are really good and worth growing," including several of the new Kunderd varieties.

W. W. Wilmore, Denver, Colo.—Two catalogues, one of them a 4-page trade list of dahlias, gladioli and hardy perennials; the other a 16-page, illustrated general catalogue of dahlias, gladioli, peonies, phloxes, hardy roses, vines, and miscellaneous hardy herbaceous plants.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.—A special catalogue of dahlias, with an announcement of the prizes to be awarded for dahlias at the Dreer flower show, October 3 to 10, 1914; the last three pages are devoted to hardy phloxes, late-branching asters and "the Dreer dozen" hardy everblooming hybrid tea roses; thirty-two large pages in all, well illustrated. A separate catalogue of "Dreer's old-fashioned hardy plants" has also been received; this contains, among other illustrations, large diagrams showing complete systems of laying out and planting hardy borders.

Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.—Annual catalogue of "Blue Ribbon" flower, vegetable and farm seeds, seeding machines, sprayers, insecticide distributors, garden tools and sundries, with

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

PRIZE TO PASADENA FLORIST.

The Pasadena Rose Festival this year drew many strong entries for the floral parade, but there was nothing in Division K that could compare with the entry of a florists' concern of the town. The store known as The Orchid and conducted by Henry Jaeger and L. F. Wolfskill won first prize, a special prize and a blue banner in this division with the entry shown in the accompanying illustration.

The flowers used in decorating the cart were 100 orchids, 500 lilies of the valley and 500 pink and white roses. With these were used Begonia Rex, smilax and selaginellas for greens. The pony, a full-blooded Shetland stallion, was driven by Yvonne Jaeger, 5 years old, who was accompanied by Thelma Jaeger, 1 year old.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The heavy rains, causing washouts on the railroads and preventing automobile traffic, were the cause of much business being lost to the retailers last week, order after order being canceled for this reason. This was most unfortunate, as business had not been too good, and a strong spurt would have occurred had these orders all materialized. Roses are improving right along as the days lengthen. The reds, especially, are coming in better color. Killarney is still weak in this respect, and this rose, which has been such a wonderful producer for so many years, is undoubtedly on the down grade, as so many others are being pressed into service that have qualities the famous Irish rose lacks. The heavy rains have cut out the oversupply of outdoor carnations, but these are not a scarcity. Valley is shorter in stem than the retailers like, and poorer in foliage—the results of using new crop pips a little too early. Orchids are more plentiful. Good small ferns are scarce, but there are plenty of the large and medium sizes.

Various Notes.

At Wright's Flower Shop some of the finest Beauties ever seen in this section have been shown of late, while all the roses are good. A nice bunch of Calanthe Veitchii was among the unusual flowers shown.

H. Reeve Darling was married January 21 to Miss Clara La Feltra, of Glendora, and directly after the wedding left with his bride for a long tour of this country and Europe. Walter Garbett, his manager, who is left in charge of the store, has heard from him several times; the last report was that they were headed for Panama, thence to New York. Mr. and Mrs. Darling have announced that after October 1 they will be at home at 1834 Grammercy place. All of his host of friends will join in wishing Mr. Reeve the happiest of married lives.

J. J. Karins, of H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, was calling on the trade last week.

The H. N. Gage Co. is gradually letting go of its Long Beach property and this has been subdivided into lots. I was sorry to hear from Mr. Gage of the serious illness of his wife.

Some of the finest Freesia Purity ever seen here has been sent in by J. Young, of San Gabriel. Mr. Young was first in the market with them this year.

The Los Angeles Flower Market was in the throes of moving last week. The new store is already beginning to take on a more finished look.

O. C. Saakes had a most beautiful window last week, golden yellow acacia being largely used.

Gebhart Prechtel, late foreman for Jacob Dieterich at his Montebello ranch, left here January 28 for Coos Bay, Ore., where he intends going into the nursery business for himself. He had thought of locating in lower Texas, but the disturbed condition along the Mexican border made him decide otherwise. Mr. Prechtel has been here a number of years and is a young man who will make his way anywhere. All his friends wish him the best of success.

The washouts have made it difficult to move express shipments, and the companies refuse to accept them. The Mexican trouble also interferes with movements of nursery stock, so that altogether nurserymen are having a hard time of it.

Howard & Smith report the biggest business they have ever had, the increase being heavy. The big trucks used by this firm can be seen all over town with the fine stock for which this firm is noted.

Polder & Groen have their new water system in first-rate order now. It has not been needed the last few days, but will be useful during the summer.

At the Dieterich & Turner range the only damage done by the storm was the partial collapse of the cut flower cellar wall, causing only a little temporary

We are shipping buds to Chicago, SIX DAYS' JOURNEY, arriving in good condition, and we believe we supplied all the cut buds except for one lot grown in the east from plants obtained from us last year. We shipped cut buds to New York, Chicago and many other cities. The rose was the hit of Fifth avenue and its fame spread throughout the country, resulting in a demand for the buds in every store that caters to the good trade. It is in great request for corsage bouquets, Colonial bouquets, boutonnieres, etc. Appreciating that because of our distance from the largest markets we can not handle the demand for cut buds, we have prepared to supply young plants to growers who know a money-making novelty when they see it.

We have an abundance of jonquils, but unfortunately the rainy weather has marred them to a considerable extent, and they are not as perfect as they might be. Noticeable also is the great quantity of Narcissus Paper White and freesias. They work in excellently in funeral work and are both excellent commodities. Yellow tulips have made their appearance, and although they still stand high in price, retailing at 75 cents per dozen, and have short stems, they prove to be a good seller.

We have had practically no roses whatever during the week, and our large downtown stores have suffered for lack of stock for cut flower boxes. The supply of valley is normal, and cattleyas are particularly fine. Formosa lilies are a staple commodity and a good seller. Liberal branches of Acacia Baileyana tend to fill in nicely and fruit blossoms are beginning to make their appearance. We still have a profusion of violets and notice a continued downward tendency in the price of them. It is to be hoped that with the sunny and clement weather we are having, the stock of roses will be much improved, for this surely is a matter of concern at this writing.

Various Notes.

The funeral of Wm. G. Irwin called for a large supply of high-grade funeral work, and such firms as Pelicano, Rossi & Co., Podesta & Baldocchi and Julius Eppstein had some extensive work to execute.

Great interest has been shown in the wonderful progress which John McLaren and Donald McLaren have been making at the exposition site. Among the 200,000 plants already boxed and ready to set out are 42,000 eucalypti from ten to forty feet high, also 5,500 acacias of many different varieties. About 2,200 fuchsias in 12-inch boxes are being trained in standard form. There are also 6,000 hydrangeas, in 18-inch boxes, which are expected to reach the width of four feet. Marguerites, pelargoniums and geraniums in many varieties have been placed in boxes and will be used for tub and vase work. One of the most marked contributions to the floral beauty of the exposition will be the bougainvillea. Many of these plants are now in bloom at the nurseries. Mr. McLaren has 500 of these plants, and they will be twenty feet high when the exposition opens.

The Market.

Business last week was satisfactory. The weather conditions have improved considerably. There was a daily clean-up on all stock. Roses have not been overplentiful, but the quality is gradually improving as the days are getting longer. Carnations are in good supply, with an increase in the amount of splits. Spring flowers are rapidly taking the place of the conventional flowers of the season. Last week there was a steady demand for wedding and table decorations, and spring flowers predominated in the decorations. Sweet peas have been slow to bloom; the supply is hardly dependable enough to justify taking orders for them.

Green goods are somewhat scarce. Smilax is being shipped from California and is used extensively for decorating. On account of the mild weather in some sections rose bushes and shrub-inconvenience. Fine stock in all lines is now being shipped from here. Mrs. Geo. Sawyer and Prince d'Arenberg roses are two of the headliners here and immense stocks are being propagated. Frank McQuoid, representing A. Fleishhacker & Co., of San Francisco, has been calling on the trade for flower boxes.

Several new retail stores are being started here and some of those recently started have closed their doors. A short life and not a merry one describes many of these. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

An entire change of weather has brought with it an entire change in the business aspect among the local florists. Beginning Monday a decided impetus was felt throughout the city. Spring flowers and early blooms tended to cheer the situation, and from Monday up to this writing every florist in town reports a normal increase in business, with excellent prospects. Undoubtedly the spring season will be a good one.

ROSES FOR EARLY PLANTING

For January delivery, 100,000 from 2½-inch pots, once shifted, splendid, clean, healthy, cool-grown stock, the very best we ever produced. We would especially call your attention to the new ones of this season; they have all shown themselves at home here on the Coast, and surely will replace some of the existing favorites. We have an exceptionally fine stock of Mrs. Geo. Sawyer, Prima Donna, Milady, Christie Miller, Lady Alice Stanley, Sunburst, Killarney Queen, etc. Let us book your order now, delivery at any time you wish. We will be pleased to quote you on any quantity.

MRS. GEO. SHAWYER. This variety will dispute first place with Killarney.
PRIMA DONNA. In a class by itself, indisputably unbeatable.
MILADY. Already a great favorite with the flower-buying public.
MRS. CHAS. RUSSELL. Superb flower and keeping qualities, deficient in foliage.
PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG. We have been growing for the past two seasons, it is undoubtedly the best red in sight. Winner best 50 any other variety at the Cleveland Show, November 12-15, 1913.
JONKHEER J. L. MOCK. Very distinct, one of the big ones. Has made a reputation.
MRS. WAKEFIELD CHRISTIE MILLER. A high class rose, a popular vote at any of our exhibitions would declare it a winner. Strong and easy to handle.
LADY ALICE STANLEY. A wonderfully improved Radiance. Will be very popular.
ROSE QUEEN. One of the grandest pinks grown, we are having exceptional success with it. Requires good culture, and it is worth it.
DOUBLE WHITE KILLARNEY. Pure white at all times, and of greater petalage.
NATALIE BOETTNER. An improved Kaiserin, bigger, better foliage.
SUNBURST. Head and shoulders over any other yellow, in big demand.
KILLARNEY QUEEN. Already a great favorite, a grandly beautiful rose.
ANTOINE RIVOIRE (Mrs. Taft). Sells on sight, and an easy doer.
American Beauty, Richmond, My Maryland, Pink Killarney, White Killarney, Prince de Bulgarie (true), Kaiserin, Mlle. Cecile Brunner, White Cherokee, Pink Cherokee, Red Cherokee, "Ramona."

bery have put out foliage nearly an inch in length. This is in danger of being nipped, as the winter season is far from being over. Orchardists are alarmed at the advanced season, as the fruits may be severely injured if there should be a cold snap.

Various Notes.

Louis Goodfriend, representing Wertheimer Bros., called on the local trade last week with an extensive line of ribbons.

Attention is called to a typographical error in the Portland notes of January 22, in which the size of the violet of J. Koida should have read two inches instead of ten, as quoted.

W. A. De Graaff, representing a Holland bulb house, is calling on the trade this week. He reports business satisfactory.

Ole Erickson, of Astoria, Ore., was a week-end caller. E. R. C.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that Julius A. Peterson & Sons, of Cincinnati, O., submit for registration the begonia described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Raiser's description: Seedling, result of cross between Lonsdale's light pink sport of Gloire de Lorraine and Socotrana. Strong, robust grower, from twelve or eighteen inches to two feet in height; flowers are borne in great profusion; male flower is one and three-quarters to two inches across and 4-petaled; female flower 5-petaled and very rare; color of flowers a soft, delicate, satiny pink, a shade lighter than Glory of Cincinnati; foliage nearly round and of a dark green color. It flowers from November till March and is in prime condition during December and January. Easy to propagate. Succeeds best in equal parts of loam and leaf-mold, with some sand added. Temperature while in bloom, 56 to 58 degrees at night. Name, Melior.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

PREPARE HARTFORD PROGRAM.

The executive committee of the New England Nurserymen's Association met January 29 to outline a program for the annual meeting of the organization, which is to be held this month at Hartford. The members of the committee are President Harlan P. Kelsey, of Salem, Mass.; Vice-president John R. Barnes, of Yalesville, Conn.; Secretary Charles Adams, of Springfield, Mass.; Treasurer V. A. Vanicek, of Newport, R. I.; W. W. Hunt, of Hartford, Conn.; C. H. Groaton, of Providence, R. I., and A. P. Horne, of Manchester, N. H.

OHIO NURSERYMEN MEET.

Officers Elected.

The seventh annual convention of the Ohio Nurserymen's Association was held Wednesday, January 21, at the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, O. The officers were reelected and are as follows: President—W. N. Scarff, of New Carlisle.

Secretary—W. B. Cole, of Painesville.
Treasurer—A. R. Pickett, of Clyde.

Executive committee—Robert George, of Painesville; A. R. Dinsmore, of Troy; T. B. West, of Perry; W. F. Bohlander, of Tippecanoe City, and J. W. Gaines, of Xenia.

The Meeting.

The meeting of the association was unusually well attended. The principal matter of business before the association was the entertainment of the American Association of Nurserymen, which meets in Cleveland, June 24 to 26. At the meeting $1,000 was raised for this purpose. City Forester John Boddy, of Cleveland, will cooperate with the Ohio association in entertaining the national organization. The present plan is to furnish the members of the association next June an automobile ride through the parks and boulevards and a moonlight boat ride on the lake.

Mr. Boddy gave an interesting talk, illustrated with stereopticon views, on the parks and boulevards of Cleveland. He showed views of the $2,000,000 art museum in the course of construction and of the new conservatories and arboretum. He also showed a number of slides in explanation of certain fruit blights and pests. Several papers were presented that were on topics of importance and of great interest to the members.

TENNESSEE NURSERYMEN MEET.

Ninth Annual Convention.

The ninth annual convention of the Tennessee Nurserymen's Association was held at Nashville January 29. During the week several state organizations met in that city and so the attendance at the nurserymen's meeting was quite large. Vice-president Harvey M. Templeton, of Winchester, presided, in the absence of President Charles Pennington, who since his election has moved to Alabama. It was proposed at this meeting that the proceedings of the nine conventions of the association, of which complete stenographic reports have been taken, be published in a volume for the benefit of the members. It was proposed also that a number of addresses delivered at these meetings be incorporated in the volume. A committee composed of G. M. Bentley, Percy Brown and A. I. Smith was appointed to devise ways and means for the publication of the volume. A resolution was passed protesting against the adoption of the McKellar cold storage bill, now in Congress, as detrimental to the fruit industry, and another thanking the Atlas Powder Co. for its demonstration of the use of dynamite for removing stumps and other work in horticulture. At the close of the afternoon session the members of the association visited the greenhouse establishment of the Joy Floral Co. and inspected the work and products of the plant.

Officers Elected.

The following were elected officers of the association at the afternoon session: President—Harvey M. Templeton, of Winchester.

Vice-president—A. J. Fletcher, of Cleveland.

Secretary and treasurer—G. M. Bentley, of Knoxville.

Sectional vice-presidents—A. I. Smith, of Knoxville, for eastern Tennessee; J. A. Griffin, for middle Tennessee, and H. S. Stallings, of Humboldt, for western Tennessee.

The following were appointed chairmen of committees: Nominations, A. J. Fletcher; resolutions, Robert Chase; auditing, C. R. Spangler, and publicity, G. M. Bentley.

Interesting Papers.

A number of interesting papers were

OREGON-WASHINGTON MEETING.

Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Oregon-Washington Nurserymen's Association was held in the Hotel Kennewick, at Kennewick, Wash., January 20, and the following officers were elected:

President, C. F. Breithaupt, of Richland, Wash.

Vice-president for Washington—F. W. May, of North Yakima, Wash.

Vice-president for Oregon—H. A. Lewis, of Portland.

Secretary and treasurer—C. A. Tonneson, of Tacoma.

Executive committee—A. Brownell, of Portland, and J. McGhee, of Orenco, Ore.

It was decided to hold the next meeting of the association at Vancouver, B. C., in June. It will be held jointly with the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen. The next annual meeting will probably be held at Kennewick again.

A Small Attendance.

The meeting at Kennewick did not draw a large attendance, although all the large concerns operating in this section were represented. The nurserymen devoted the entire day to work and took up many questions of interest. There seems to have been a decrease in the nursery business in this section during the last year and a corresponding decrease in the number of nurseries. The general tone of the meeting, however, was one of optimism, and the members predicted a decided increase in the plantings next year.

Among those present were F. W. May and A. McConnell, of the Washington Nursery Co., Toppenish, Wash.; S. A. Miller, of the Milton Nursery Co., Mil-

The Market

Flowers, with the possible exception of roses, are now much more abundant. Last week prices held up well, but now increased supplies are causing a drop in many staples. The weather, for some days, has been unusually warm for mid-winter. January 30 the temperature reached 60 degrees in the shade and this naturally brought flowers along with a rush. Roses are not yet overplentiful, and prices even on short-stemmed stock are holding up well. Beauties continue scarce, but Killarney Queens and Richmonds are more plentiful; so are Wards and Killarneys. Russells are now of grand quality. Carnations are a little lower in price, owing to increased supplies; the same is true of violets. Singles are now blooming much more freely, and indications now are for a good supply for St. Valentine's day. Sweet peas were surely never more plentiful or of grander quality at this season. The largest proportion seen are of the Spencer type, the best making $2 per hundred. In Dutch bulbous flowers, a much larger assortment of tulips and narcissi are coming in. Of Paper Whites there is still an ample supply, but Romans are nearing the end. Freesias are still abundant and good. Lilies, callas and valley are all fine, and the last named sells well. Mignonette is extra fine; so are calendulas. Some of the latter with 24-inch stems have made $12 per hundred. A little more snapdragon is seen, while yellow marguerites come somewhat more freely.

Cattleya Trianae is still plentiful, and Phalenopsis amabilis is also seen in fair quantity. Gardenias are abundant for midwinter, while the quality is grand. Adiantum fronds are of better quality. Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus are moving a little better.

Flower Market to Move.

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of the stockholders and stallholders of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market, held at the Quincy House January 31, it was unanimously voted to instruct the directors to sign a lease for the basement and street floor of the Carter-Rice building, at 260 Devonshire street, facing on Winthrop square, for a term of years, for a flower market. The new location, on which necessary alterations will be rushed, has 13,000 feet of floor space, or four times that of the present market on Park street. It is conveniently fitted up in every way, is near the South Terminal and all express companies and has unequalled teaming facilities.

The management expects to have the market ready for occupancy about March 1. On the street floor, spaces will be allotted for 137 stalls, 4x4 feet, allowing for 6-foot aisles, in addition to leaving considerable space to lease to dealers in sundries, etc., for which there are already many applications. With the removal of this market to Winthrop square, practically the entire wholesale flower business of Boston will be cen-

Various Notes.

William J. Patterson, of Wollaston, has splendid Murillo, Couronne d'Or and Prosperity tulips, also Golden Spur and Von Sion. He also specializes in wallflowers and scented geraniums.

Paul E. Richwagen, of Needham, has the sympathy of many friends in the death of his mother, which occurred January 26. Mrs. Richwagen had reached the ripe old age of 85. Interment was at Forest Hills cemetery January 29.

N. E. Boyle, of Malden, likes Rose Milady and is cutting a fine crop of it. He has a splendid lot of Killarney, White Killarney and Hillingdon. Of giganteum lilies, he has 65,000 coming along for Easter.

Frank J. Dolansky and wife spent a few days in New York last week. He is still cutting plenty of Cattleya Trianae and will have a fine cut for St. Valentine's day. Of Schrodæras and Mossiæ he has a big crop coming in, and of Mossiæ he will have 25,000 for Easter. His gardenias are of superb quality; some of these he is shipping to New York.

Henry Penn left February 4 for a week's visit to Philadelphia and New York. He believes that in spite of depressed trade conditions, business in volume for January, 1914, will just about

SELLS LIKE HOT CAKES

Among recent interesting letters received was the following:

Mr. G. S. Ramsburg.

Medina, O., Jan. 20, '14.

Dear Sir: We thought you would like to know of our success with your Silver Pink Snapdragon. Have had twelve packages of seed. We sow one pkt. to a flat, and from last sowing of two pkts. we potted 655 plants from one and 630 from the other. Think you advertised 500 seeds to pkt. How is this for all seed growing, then some. THEY SELL LIKE HOT CAKES. Very respectfully, Hammerschmidt & Clark.

We have but one quality of goods and the same SQUARE DEAL is handed out alike to all. There is more money for the grower in SILVER PINK SEEDLINGS than in any other snapdragon. Its existence is not due to accident. It was brought about by scientific rules and principles and has "made good" to the amazement of all. It has pure blood, produced by three generations of the parent plant from cuttings without permitting a blossom to appear, so that it could not even pollenize itself. This stock, which is still in our possession, was then allowed to produce seed which is making a world-wide record. It has vigorous growth and wonderful productiveness, hence its great popularity throughout the country.

To obtain genuine Silver Pink seed, order from us or from seedsmen who have original packets only. We do not sell in bulk. The price is $1.00 per trade pkt.; 3 pkts., $2.50; 7 pkts., $5.00, postpaid for cash.

Splendid, well branched plants at $4.00 per 100, by express. These plants are right for Memorial. Use seeds for bedding sales and be sure to have a big lot of plants.

est varieties. At the last cut over 100,000 spikes were cut. The house containing these is a large one, 52½x600.

The selection of Samuel Goddard as the new president of the American Carnation Society met with universal approval here. Mr. Goddard is a first-class grower, progressive, popular with everyone, and no one has the interests of the Carnation Society more at heart.

William W. Elliott has some nice, bushy, well flowered plants of Christie-Miller rose in his store windows on Park street. He is cutting a fine crop of this popular rose, also superb lots of Ward, Richmond and Killarney Queen.

Among the numerous bulbous flowers of Mann Bros., Narcissus Walter T. Ware and Tulip Murillo are noteworthy at present.

The new unnamed light pink seedling rose at the Waban Rose Conservatories is something that will create no end of a stir when seen more of. It is of a distinct shade from any other forcing rose, and Mr. Montgomery has a novelty which will later create even more of a sensation than did Mrs. Chas. Russell.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 17, L. W. C. Tuthill, of New York, will lecture on "Advertising, the Gasoline of Business." It will be carnation night, and an extensive display of these flowers will be made. Arrangements are well under way for the annual club banquet, which will be held at Horticultural hall February 24. These occasions are always delightful, and there is already an eager demand for tickets.

Harry Quint, at 164 Tremont street, has had some attractive daffodil and violet windows of late. He notes a wonderful change for the better in business during the last fortnight.

The Sutermeister estate, Readville, is sending in some of the finest Golden Spur and Soleil d'Or narcissi seen this season.

H. M. Robinson & Co. and Welch Bros. Co. both note a steady improvement in business for the last ten days.

This appears to be the sentiment, both among wholesalers and retailers.

Littlefield & Wyman have a new rose-pink seedling carnation which is said to be a wonderful producer. The flowers are not of the largest size, but the stem and calyx are excellent and the flowers hold their color remarkably well. They have another seedling which is a glorified Enchantress, also promising.

Keeping a Reputation

IT is one thing to get a good reputation but another thing to keep it. The quality of the stock we have sent out from year to year has made an enviable reputation for itself and we have that reputation to maintain. It hasn't been luck; it's been hard, consistent work to make it. Judging by our spring prospects, that reputation will be made good.

Our novelties of the season in Roses are Killarney Brilliant and Hadley.

In Chrysanthemums, Indian Summer, our bronze sport of Chadwick, and the new Pompons—Golden Climax, Golden Harvest, Golden West, and Western Beauty. For pot plants the new bronze Grey-stone.

Our bedding plant stock is large and in excellent condition.

If you have received our trade list look it over. It includes things you will want. If you haven't it, send for one, using printed stationery, or give reference, to prove yourself a florist.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The Market.

Business is rather quiet; there is not much doing in any line of trade. Stock, owing to the extremely cloudy weather, is soft and scarce. Carnations are hard to get and the supply of roses hardly meets the demand.

Various Notes.

The Brainard Nursery & Seed Co., of Thompsonville, Conn., has been sending some fine potted plants into the city. It plans to remodel its buildings before the spring rush begins. From now on it expects to do a big business in cuttings and small potted stock.

One of the greenhouses and the boiler room of Nicholas Bros., at Westfield, together with the stock in the house, were almost completely destroyed by fire January 26. Two small houses near by were saved. The loss was partly covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown. F. J. C.

Rockford, Ill.—W. H. Hall, who has been in charge of the Engstrom farm, south of the city, has moved to town and will engage in florists' work.

Little Rock, Ark.—Paul M. Palez suffered a loss from damage done by a fire in a millinery establishment in the building in which his store is located, at 409 Main street.

Portland, Me.—William J. Kenney, formerly designer and decorator with Thomas F. Galvin and with Julius A. Zinn, of Boston, has taken a similar position with the E. J. Harmon Co. here.

Mrs. George Shawyer

We are growing this splendid rose this season with most gratifying results. As a free and vigorous grower and great producer it has no equal. It has not shown the slightest symptoms of mildew with us. It sets buds freely in the short days of winter and is now coming in with a fine midwinter crop. It does equally well on grafts or own root.

We intend planting Shawyer heavily this season, but still have a splendid stock of fine young plants in 3-inch pots, ready for immediate delivery—on own root.

We also offer a splendid lot of Sunburst, Ward, Richmond and Killarney, all own root stock. For prices and further particulars write

WASHINGTON.

On account of the unseasonable warm weather, the thermometer at times registering as high as 74 degrees, all flowers became more plentiful during the latter part of last week. While certain lines, such as American Beauty, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Taft and Radiance roses, are off crop and are commanding a high price, there is no need for anyone to pay unusually high prices for flowers, because the Killarneys, white and pink, are cut by the thousands, so that the demand for roses during the latter part of the week was well met. For the first time in many weeks the retailers were enabled to pick up roses for as low as $4 per hundred and get good stock. The supply of carnations has also increased and these receded considerably from the high prices which prevailed during the earlier part of the week. Although just making their appearance in the market, jonquils are being offered at $4 and $5 per hundred. Some of the growers claim they would rather buy jonquils at this price than attempt to produce them. Each year the promise is held out by the foreign bulb dealers that they have something new that will positively come in for the Christmas trade, but this year, as usual, some of the growers have lost the entire crop that they had tried to force for the middle of January, while others made but half a crop.

The warm weather has had a tendency to flood the market with sweet peas and violets, more especially the single violets, and huge trays of these could be seen on the streets to be bought at the buyer's price.

The continued warm weather is causing the growers considerable alarm because of the tendency of azaleas to bloom and cause a shortage for Easter. All kinds of schemes are being tried to prevent this condition. The demand for flowers at present is not great enough to take care of the many thousands that will be thrown on the market unless a change comes soon. C. L. L.

Herrin, Ill.—W. M. Ridgway is planning to build two additional greenhouses to take care of his increased trade in greenhouse-grown vegetables.

NEW PINK ROSES

Mrs. George Shawyer... One of the best Roses that has been introduced in years. It is a very rapid, strong grower and with us produces more flowers per plant than Killarney. It is exceptionally well adapted to the grower that retails his stock.

Grafted Plants only .....$12.00 per 100

CECILE BRUNNER, The Baby Pink Rose

This is a beautiful little Rose coming in sprays of three to five buds and has been a great success with the retail florists of this city, as it combines in beautiful effect with so many other flowers in all kinds of work. Every grower should try some of these—not only in the greenhouse but in his garden. It is a very prolific bloomer and if carefully protected in the winter, should be a money-maker both outdoors and under glass.

Grafted Plants.....	$12.00 per	100
Own Root.....	8.00 per	100
“ “ .....	35.00 per	500
“ “ .....	60.00 per	1000

Both of the above varieties are not novelties but have been thoroughly tried out.

Rhea Reid, Killarney, White Killarney, Bulgarie and Richmond

All carefully grafted on selected English Manetti.....$10.00 per 100

Ready about April 1st, in 2½-in. pots. All of our plants are well hardened off, ready for shifting into larger pots or planting direct in the benches.

The flowering quality of our plants is well known, as we select only flowering wood for scions—no blind wood used at all.

JOY!

You must have heard about it. We know it sounds good. It sounds so good because it happens to be true.

This is a Carnation that did not get a reputation over night. We have been handling it for a little over two years and ought to know something about it.

IT'S A REAL RED

Perhaps we should call it Scarlet, because it is a live, glowing Red.

Better still, it is the kind of Carnation that proves the florist's friend. Shipped over a distance, it will look as good on arrival as when sent. This feature appeals to us because we know what it means to the man who is depending on us.

JOY has been described by Mr. E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, Ill.—the man who raised it—as “a strong grower, early, very free and continuous bloomer, with strong calyx and good stem.” That should be good enough for anybody.

Don't wait for the other fellow to tell you about it. Send your order in now.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has been having pleasant weather, with some sunshine, which is bringing in everything except roses, which still are scarce. Tulips of all colors and with good, long stems, and Golden Spur narcissi are almost a glut. Carnations are becoming plentiful and there is an abundance of good valley, cattleyas and lilac. The shortage of Beauties and roses is not felt badly.

The retail stores all have a good run of funeral work, but there is nothing really exciting about the balance of the trade.

Various Notes.

The delegation to the carnation convention got home January 29, thoroughly satisfied with Cleveland and the convention. The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. took the only exhibit from here and got a first premium on it. Ed. McCallum continued on to Chicago from the convention.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, W. Va., spent an evening at the convention, while en route for Chicago.

Wm. L. Baker will open a wholesale and retail cut flower shop at 642 Penn avenue. Clarke.

New Rose, Killarney Brilliant

THE MOST VALUABLE ROSE INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

We consider this new rose—a sport from the original pink Killarney—the most valuable rose that has been introduced in many years. It is well named Killarney Brilliant, on account of its brilliant color.

It is a great improvement on the original pink Killarney; first, because of its much more brilliant color, it being almost crimson in bright weather, while in midwinter—in dull, cloudy and foggy weather,—when the original pink Killarney loses its brilliancy and becomes badly faded, Killarney Brilliant is as bright and deep a pink as the original variety at its best. In addition to its great superiority in color, the flower is almost twice as large, having from twenty-five to forty full-sized petals.

It has the same desirable color that Killarney Queen possesses, but has double the number of petals, making it a very double and a fuller flower; and it is also very much more productive, having the same habit of growth and the same freedom of bloom as its parent.

We have watched Killarney Brilliant growing during the past winter, planted in the same house with the original and the double pink Killarney, and when those varieties faded so as to be almost unmarketable, Killarney Brilliant was superb. We are thoroughly convinced that it will immediately supplant the original Killarney as the standard market variety, and that every up-to-date grower will be compelled to plant it, on account of its great superiority. A prominent rose grower, who has seen it growing, says it is the only rose he has ever seen that needs no advertising; it sells itself.

NEWPORT, R. I.

At a meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, January 27, announcement was made that former United States Senator George Peabody Wetmore had offered the use of a lot on Bellevue avenue, corner of Leroy avenue, for the June exhibit to be given under the joint auspices of the society and the Newport Garden Association. A committee, consisting of President Andrew S. Meikle, Secretary William Gray and Alexander MacLellan, was appointed to act with a committee from the Garden Association in arranging the details. Announcement was made that the next lecture under the joint auspices of the two associations will be given February 11 by John T. Withers, whose topic will be "A Horticultural Trip Through Europe."

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Haas, Miss Henrietta Haas and Mr. and Mrs. William Jurgens were visitors in Providence and Boston last week.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

We are still having more dark, cloudy weather than we should have at this season of the year. The sun has been bashful of late, not letting us have a view of him for days at a stretch. This, of course, keeps the stock short and really good stock is at a premium. Business is slow at this time and the trade is unanimous in wishing for better weather.

Carnations are better in both quality and quantity than they have been for the last few days. The demand for this stock is always strong. Roses still remain scarce and it is hard to satisfy the trade, as the demand is much greater than the supply. The cut of roses looks fine, however. Bulbous stock in general is coming in better than it has been. The supply of tulips is now about sufficient to supply the demand. Trumpets and daffodils are still slow in coming in. There does not seem to be any immediate prospect for more Wisconsin grown violets than we are getting at present.

Various Notes.

Albert Hare, with the Holton & Hunkel Co., has been serving on the jury for the last few weeks.

Last week's bowling scores will be found in the bowling column as usual.
H. J. S.

The wedding of Hulda Dettmann and Louis Hermening took place on the evening of January 30 at the residence of A. M. Dettmann, 417 Auer avenue. The bridal couple left for California and other western points. They will reside in Milwaukee on their return.

St. Marys, O.—J. J. Lawrence's 2-acre orange grove near Glenwood, Fla., this season yielded him 243 boxes of fruit, which sold for $208.

FOR

Get them at Dreer's

We try out all new introductions for at least two years before endorsing or rejecting same, and if they are not improvements over existing sorts, or decided novelties, we do not offer them to you.

The following varieties of recent introduction stand out prominently as the best of their respective types and colors, and you will make no mistake in accepting our endorsement of the ten varieties here offered.

SPECIAL.—Note the reduction in price of the three leaders—Hungaria, the ideal pink, Gustav Gumpfer, yellow, and Mrs. Alfred Conard, popular salmon pink.

Gustav Gumpfer. Another season's trial strengthens us in again recommending this as the ideal rich yellow bedding Canna; the flowers of good size are held well above the foliage, the fine trusses always clean looking; in habit of growth very uniform; color a rich golden-yellow, a shade that has been missing heretofore and which can be seen as far as the eye will carry; 3½ to 4 feet. 20 cts. each; $1.25 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $65.00 per 1,000.

Hungaria. The ideal pink bedding Canna; flowers large, in good sized trusses, produced early, freely and continuously, in color not unlike that of the Paul Neyron Rose. Compared to all other pink varieties, it possesses a softness and refinement not found in any other sort; 3 to 3½ feet. 20 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1,000.

Louis Reverchon. This was one of the best dark-leaved red-flowering varieties in our trials during the past three years. A block of about 2,000 plants attracted great attention. The flowers are very large, of a cochineal-red color, very freely produced on vigorous plants with light bronze foliage; 4½ to 5 feet. 10 cts. each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1,000.

Meteor. There are two varieties of Cannas being sold under the name of Meteor, one a German introduction which can be bought very cheap. We offer the American variety and it is the Canna you want, as it is the best red flowering Canna in commerce. 30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Mrs. Alfred F. Conard. A most remarkable variety, with exquisitely salmon-pink flowers of largest size in erect and abundantly furnished heads, so freely produced as to keep a superb showing of bloom for months above the rich green foliage; 4 feet. 20 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000.

Rosea Gigantea. Extra large flowers, borne in such abundance that the mass of color on each plant is truly amazing; individual petals are 2½ inches across; a deep, rich rose, almost a coral-carmine. 10 cts. each; 75 cts. per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1,000.

Maros. The best white bedder, in color about the same as Mont Blanc Improved, but produces not only three or four times as many flowers, and, as the old flowers shed themselves, it always presents a clean and tidy appearance. Maros in our fields attracted great attention, forming great broad clean bands of white. Its habit is perfect, filling every requirement of a tip-top bedder. 15 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1,000.

Uhlberg. Entirely distinct and one of the freest-flowering varieties we have ever grown. The flowers expand very full and are of a soft rosy-carmine; the throat of the flower is of a creamy-yellow and the edges of the petals, which are slightly crimped, are also pale yellow. This variety attracted much attention at our trials; 3 feet. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

Undine. Unquestionably the best of its type, and we heartily recommend it either for massing or as single specimens in the border. Its growth is dwarf and graceful, with green foliage, and its flowers, which are produced very freely, are of a bright orange-scarlet broadly edged with golden yellow; a most satisfactory variety in every way; 3½ feet. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

William Bates. A splendid free-flowering pure yellow Canna that has attracted much attention. The size of its flowers, of its trusses, its habit of growth are all that can be desired; a variety that will become a great favorite; 5 feet. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

The varieties Meteor and Uhlberg will be supplied in growing plants, all others in roots.

Twenty-five at hundred rates; 250 or more at thousand rates.

We will supply 1 each of the set of 10 varieties for $2.00.

We will supply 6 each of the set of 10 varieties for $8.00.

We also have an immense stock of the standard varieties of Cannas and we shall be pleased to quote special prices on your requirements.

DETROIT.

Various Notes.

Frank Allan, gardener for E. D. Speck, of Grosse Pointe Farms, has some splendid specimens of cyclamen plants. His bulbous stock is in fine condition, and it will be worth anyone's while to visit the conservatories in his care during the spring months, when the rhododendrons, lilacs, etc., are in bloom.

The new home of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, on Randolph street, is rapidly nearing completion and will be practically finished for the opening March 1.

Mrs. Dinser, wife of John Dinser, has been taking the baths at Mt. Clemens in an endeavor to overcome a severe attack of sciatic rheumatism.

From the Cleveland show a number of prominent growers came to Detroit to see Carnation Philadelphia at home. Among them were August Poehlmann and Guy French, of Chicago; E. Allan Peirce, of Peirce Bros., Waltham, Mass.; Joseph Thomas, of Greensburg, Pa.; E. H. Blind, of the Blind Floral Co., Pittsburgh; Nick Zweifel, of Milwaukee, and S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia. Another visitor whom we had not seen for some time was H. Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia.

After seeing Philadelphia growing at Mt. Clemens, one of the largest growers in Chicago placed an order for 10,000 cuttings. Many smaller orders have also been received since the Cleveland show.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

The cold and cloudy weather of the last fortnight has given place to the January thaw; that and the voting on the Canada temperance act, which was carried throughout the country, have been the excitements of the week. Excellent bulbous stock is coming in and violets are blooming a little more freely. Roses are scarce and are likely to remain so for a while, but carnations are proving a good, marketable commodity, both as regards quality and quantity.

Various Notes.

The Dale Estate intends to plant about fifty per cent more carnations for the next season, lessening the Beauty space in consequence.

Walter Calvert has already ordered the materials for an additional 400-foot house. He also intends to build a new boiler house during the summer.

After a great deal of preliminary investigation, the Dominion government has at last decided to inaugurate the parcel post system throughout Canada on Tuesday, February 10. The operation of the system will be carried on through the postoffice inspectors of the various districts, so that the details of management will not be subject to troublesome delays through having to look to Ottawa. The postmaster general believes that this local arrangement will tend to greater smoothness of operation and quicker remedy of defects.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The annual banquet of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held at the Manchester town hall January 21. In spite of unfavorable weather, over 200 ladies and gentlemen were present. The tables were beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers, and the menu was the best ever served on a similar occasion. A splendid entertainment was given, and an able and humorous address by the Rev. I. B. Hardy, of East Gloucester. Dancing followed.

The committee in charge of the affair was: E. H. Wetterlow, chairman; John Jaffrey, Albert Cunningham, Carl Eicke, M. C. Horton, H. T. Stiles and Axel Magnuson.

ASTERS.

NORTHERN GROWN ASTER SEED.

In this day and age of sharp and wideawake competition to claim "the best" in any line, requires a colossal nerve. We keep a mighty watchful eye on the doings and stocks of our competitors, and to the best of our knowledge, the quality of the stocks offered below is equal to and just a little beyond the head of the procession. If better can be found, the finder will indeed come into possession of a prime strain of aster seed. Trials free to large growers. Prices on larger quantities on application.

CYCLAMEN.*200,000 GIANT FLOWERING CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS AND BLOOMING PLANTS.

For the last 16 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be potted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first prize at the Cleveland show and first and second at Toledo, early November, when blooming cyclamen were scarce.

STRONG AUGUST SOWN SEEDLINGS, once transplanted, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

BLOOMING PLANTS, 5, 6 and 8-in., 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50 each. Cash with order. Cultural directions with all orders.

C. Winterich, Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS.

Giant flowering from very best strain obtainable; these are twice transplanted and are sure of giving satisfaction. Early planting will make best plants for next Christmas.

Cyclamen giganteum, August seedlings, transplanted, finest strain obtainable and new varieties equally divided, 10 vars., $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. Have grown commercially only for 4 years and my output is now the largest in the west, because I grow only the best. Extra fine plants. In bloom, 4-in., $2.50 per doz.; 5-in., $4.20 and $6.00 per doz.; 6-in., 75c and $1.00 each. Cash, please. Ernest Rober, Wilmette, Ill.

I still have to offer quite a few cyclamen that did not come in bloom for Christmas sale. The stock is mostly from 6-in. pots and in assorted colors. Prices, according to grade, run 60c, 50c, 40c, 30c, 20c and 15c. Write me about them. Cash, or reference.

The crowns never become moist under the present conditions and it seems to me that the presence of moisture is the real cause of Cleans a building of Rats and Mice in short time, keeps it cleaned, for it is always ready for use. Made of galvanized iron, can't get out of order, lasts for years. Large number can be caught daily. Go to Catcher mornings, remove device inside, which only takes a few seconds, take out dead rats and mice, replace device—it is ready for another catch. Small piece cheese is used, doing away with poisons. Catcher is 18 inches high, 10 inches in diameter. When rats pass device they die, no marks left on them. Catcher is always clean. One of these Catchers set in a livery stable in Scranton, Pa., caught over 100 rats in a month. ## DO YOU KNOW VERMINE?

John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., writes: "I suppose you will be glad to know that VERMINE is giving excellent satisfaction. Our greenhouse foreman says that it is the only thing that he has ever used that will kill white ants in the benches."

Valentin Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., write: "We wish to say that we find VERMINE an excellent thing. We used it on a bench planted with Smilax to kill root lice or maggots, which ate the roots, and after two applications our Smilax is taking on new life and has started off to grow."

The Gardner Nursery Company, Osage, Iowa, writes: "We will use VERMINE on our out-of-door fields of strawberry plants, if the inside test continues as satisfactory as it now seems."

W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass., writes: "I have used VERMINE and found it effective against root maggots, cut worms, earth worms, ants and other ground pests."

VERMINE is applied one part to four hundred parts of water by thoroughly soaking the soil. It will protect your crops from the ravages of vermin underground without the slightest injury to vegetation.

Greenhouse Heating.

WANTS MORE INFORMATION.

Your valued reply to my former questions, in The Review of January 8, under the title of "Piping a New Jersey Range," has been noted and I am greatly obliged to you. My range of greenhouses, as I stated in my first letter, consists of one detached house, 20x112, and seven connected houses, which cover a total area of 100x100 square feet. The detached house runs in the same direction as the others and would be a continuation, lengthwise, of the outside house of the solid part of the range, if not separated by the few feet of open space. The two boilers, only one of which is ordinarily used, are situated at one side of the connected houses and a short distance from the end of the detached house. A 3½-inch flow pipe enters the house next to the boiler room, and, after running through the house to the farther end, turns and runs across the ends of the other houses, so as to connect with the radiation in each house.

I stated, also, that the larger boiler has one 3½-inch tap for the flow and one 3-inch tap for the return. I find, however, that there are two 3½-inch flow openings in this boiler. In this case, how would you suggest that I run the pipes, for an open-tank system? What would you suggest, also, as a piping system for the connected houses, if you were to design the whole system, with no restrictions except the location of the boiler house and using such sizes of mains as you think would give the best service? In the house 20x112, would it be advisable to run two 2½-inch flow pipes from one 2½-inch main from the boiler?

I have just built a sash extension to the detached house. It is in the form of a lean-to and the distance from its outside wall to the eave plate of the greenhouse is forty-four inches. Can I heat this lean-to with a return pipe under the bench? I expect to use it for the propagation of chrysanthemums.

H. J. R.

If the boiler has two 3½-inch flow ports, I would run one 3½-inch flow are the product of ideal conditions. One of the most vitally important of these is constancy of temperature. Install the Morehead System of Steam Line Drainage and Boiler Feeding and have a vacuum system instead of an inefficient gravity system.

Save the heat—turn the condensation right back to the boiler—make it do double duty with considerably less fuel. The ideal temperature conditions following the installation of the Morehead System promote the growth of live, substantial flowers, full of sparkle and color.

the houses with the boiler, using two 2 1/2-inch pipes to join the mains to the coils in each house.

While two 2 1/2-inch flow pipes in the detached house, 20x112, can be connected with the 2 1/2-inch main which leads to the boiler, they will not be much more effectual as flow pipes than the two 2-inch pipes, but will furnish slightly more radiating surface. Unless a generator is used, I would consider it advisable to run a 3-inch main to the boiler, in which case two 2 1/2-inch flow pipes could and should be used as overhead flow pipes in the house. Unless it is possible to ream out the opening in the boiler to admit the 3-inch flow, it will answer if the present opening is used.

In the house 20x112, I would use six 2-inch returns in addition to the two 2 1/2-inch flow pipes. The lean-to propagating house can be heated by means want a night temperature of 60 degrees in the main house, which is 22x175, running north and south. It is seven feet high to the gutters, with a board wall on the entire west side, where I intend to build another house in the near future. It is fourteen feet high to the ridge, with two and one-half feet of concrete in the ends and glass in the upper part.

On the east side is a lean-to, eight feet wide, which I want to separate from the main house by a partition of either canvas or tar paper, so it can be easily removed. I want to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees in the lean-to, for cucumbers and propagating. There is a 2-foot concrete wall, with three feet of glass, on the east side of the lean-to. There will be a bench three and one-half feet wide along the entire front; all the rest of the space will be occupied by solid beds for cucumbers and tomatoes, to be followed by mums, so most of the pipes will have to be on the iron posts under the gutters. There is a row of supports under the ridge and I can either place the flow pipe there or put one under each gutter. Can it be a continuous flow or should the return be cut into two sections?

The boiler is at the northwest corner of the houses. The top of the boiler is eighteen inches below the level of the ground and the flow pipe rises directly into the house. Will the boiler mentioned be able to take care of a carnation house 30x160, besides the present houses?
A. I. A.

To heat a greenhouse 22x175 feet to 60 degrees, when the outside temperature is 15 degrees above zero, will require one 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and six 1¼-inch returns, using steam. One of the returns, at least, should be placed on each of the side walls and the others may be distributed beside the walks.

While canvas or rosin-sized building paper may be used for the partition, it would be a great mistake to use tar paper, as it would have an injurious effect upon the plants. In the lean-to house use one 2-inch flow pipe and three 1¼-inch returns. Run the flow pipe on the partition and the returns under the propagating bed. This part of the house appears, from the description, to be 175 feet long, with three feet of glass in the wall and about nine feet in the lean-to roof. Arranged as suggested, the coils may run the entire length of the house.

The proposed carnation house is to be 30x160 feet and will require one 2½-inch flow pipe and seven 1¼-inch returns.

As nearly as can be estimated from the data furnished, about 1,500 square feet of steam radiation will be required to heat the three houses, and for economical firing a boiler with a rating of 2,000 square feet should be used.

The Market.

Trade has been brisk for the last two weeks and the quantity of stock in the market is surprising, considering the amount of cloudy weather we have had. There has been almost no sunshine, and the softness of some of the stock was a natural effect of this. Roses have been almost equal to the demand, except in the case of reds and Sunbursts, and as a rule the stock has been good. Most of the Killarneys have been light in color, but otherwise have been of good quality. Carnations have been about equal to the demand, but have been a little soft. Bulbous stock is more plentiful; there is an abundance of narcissi and jonquils, while other varieties, such as tulips, hyacinths and daffodils, are also considerably in evidence. Sweet peas are more plentiful, but are cleaned up nicely. Valley is more abundant and finds a ready sale. Single violets are again increasing in supply, after a rest of a few weeks, and are usually picked up as soon as they come in. Double violets are plentiful and the demand is good.

The sale of potted plants is heavy and there is a good assortment to pick from, including azaleas, cyclamens, primulas and a good lot of bulbous stock, such as potted hyacinths, daffodils, etc.

Various Notes.

W. W. Walker has changed his position and is now at the seed store of S. H. Wilson & Son, who will soon be in their new quarters.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports that the flower trade is heavy and the seed trade is opening up somewhat, especially with the southern states.

The Munk Floral Co. says business is excellent. This firm is cutting a lot of good roses and is also handling a lot of potted plants.

The Miller Flower Shop reports business as quite satisfactory.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting heavily on carnations and bulbous stock.

Several barns have been burned to the ground at Chillicothe, O., in the last few weeks, presumably as a result of the work of incendiaries, and about a week ago Louis Elsass suffered a heavy loss, when his barn, horse and two wagons were burned. Four men have been arrested, and it is hoped that they are the guilty parties. J. M.

Great Falls, Mont.—Chas A. Burrell, of the Electric City Conservatory, reports that January this year eclipsed this month in any previous year, so far as business is concerned, in spite of the mild weather, sometimes supposed to be a detriment to trade at this time of the year. Roses have been scarce, but other stock has been plentiful, especially spring bulbous stock.

The Market.

Business continues dull, with just a few good days to stimulate the trade at this time. Funeral work is the principal item with retailers and that has spasmodically been good. The general business is quiet and no doubt will be so for some time. Stock is exceptionally scarce and what is coming into this market is not of the best quality. Roses are almost impossible to procure here. During the recent scarcity of violets several retailers have continued handling California violets. They seem well pleased with results they have obtained.

Various Notes.

E. P. Holm, of Holm & Olson, has been confined to his bed for the last three weeks, suffering from an attack of bronchitis, which developed into pneumonia. The critical stage has passed, however, and he seems to be slowly recovering.

Gus. Colberg, of L. L. May & Co., has been confined to his home for the last week with a severe cold.

The St. Paul Florists' Club held its first dance at the North Central Commercial Club's hall on the evening of February 3.

Wm. Keeling, of Holm & Olson, is at St. Joseph's hospital, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis. He is getting on as well as can be expected at this time.

The West Side Floral Co., of which Munich & Wahler are the proprietors, is sending in a fairly good cut of roses, about as good as are to be had now.

A. Currie, Jr., of A. Currie & Co., Milwaukee, accompanied by Mrs. Currie, spent several days here last week.

Mrs. Henry A. Boardman, the owner of the Riverside Greenhouses, will open a retail store in the St. Paul hotel about the middle of February. J. A. McLellan, formerly with the Flower Shop, of Minneapolis, will have charge.

Ross Bragg, of Rochester, Minn., was a caller for a few days last week.

The Principle—2 layers of glass with a 3/8-inch layer of dry still air.

Now's the time to gain on Spring

If you wait for the weather to start your Spring plants, the market will be gone before you have anything to offer. An equipment of Sunlight Double Glass Sash should be ordered early. They provide growing conditions even in the worst weather. The 3/8-inch air space between the two layers of glass shuts out the cold and holds in the warmth, letting in the light and protecting better than mats or boards.

Ten years use has proved their success. Made of the best cypress; glazed or repaired in half the usual time; eliminating all need of mats or shutters; making plants early without undue forcing—they are simply indispensable to obtain the best results.

A new double glass greenhouse

The Sunlight idea has been carried into an inexpensive greenhouse, 11 x 12, 1 x 24, 11 x 36, or 11 x 48 feet in size. It is made of Sunlight Double Glass Sash, which are instantly removable when the greenhouse is idle for use on hot-beds or cold-frames. Thus they serve a double purpose. Sash ordered now for Spring work may be used on a greenhouse frame ordered at your convenience for next Fall or Winter.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Market conditions have changed materially since last report. While good stock is still scarce and in some respects hardly sufficient for needs, still there has been a general increase in supply. The demand is fairly good, but not as firm as it was, nor is it grasping at everything offered. Prices have in many lines dropped a point.

Roses continue to be the flowers most desired and all receipts of them are cleaned up quickly. Carnations are in somewhat heavier supply than they were, but the increase seems to be along the line of split stock and culls. Good ones meet with a fair market, but at lower prices than a fortnight ago. Giganteum lilies are plentiful. The narcissus market appears to be crowded with both the white and yellow stock. Freesias have been proving good property. Daffodils also continue to sell satisfactorily. Sweet peas are much more abundant, but up to this time the good ones have sold readily. The violet market is slow. The streets are a big outlet for doubles, while the singles, though still in meager supply, are ample for requirements. Valley and orchids meet with a fair call. The supply of greens is ample.

IT is located in the John Hancock Building, corner of Franklin and Federal Streets, being near the South Station, not far from Washington Street, and handy by to the Flower Exchange.

Mr. Keeler has been with us for some time and knows our different constructions thoroughly.

He also is accurately informed on constructions in general, having had the advantage of being associated with other greenhouse concerns before coming with us.

Many of you already know Mr. Keeler. Those of you who don't will find him to be a frank, earnest, likable man, with whom you will find it both a satisfaction and a pleasure to do business.

In the last year we have erected several iron frame houses with the rafters spaced 12 feet apart instead of 8. The glass is 20 inches wide (not 24).

Not only does this modification of our standard construction make a lighter house, but you have also a third less columns. With houses wider than 40 feet, for those who want the fewest possible columns across the house, as well as lengthwise of it, we have our Special Lattice Rafter Construction, which has many decided advantages in its favor.

Then there is our curved eave construction and the way we have successfully solved the side ventilation problem, which has always been a certain drawback to that type of construction.

All these things Mr. Keeler is thoroughly informed on, and we hope you will give him the opportunity to talk them over with you.

"Safety First" is, and always has been, the basic principle of our constructions. You can depend on depending on Hitchings Houses.

The Market.

Only a fair volume of business was reported last week, the cut flower trade taking the lead, with a supply for all demands. The number of funerals was smaller than has been the case in several weeks, while fewer large social functions were on the calendar. Carnations and roses are offered in quantity, as well as of good quality, while the increasing supply of bulbous stock keeps the market in good poise.

KNOBLE'S SHORT CUT TO LARGER FLOWER SALES

Reported
Seligman.

THE following conversation occurred at lunch the other day, just as it is reported. The reporter believes there is enough food for thought in this conversation to make it worth passing along. The views of one of the most successful of advertisers among florists furnish nourishing meat for those who will digest it. The scene was a Cleveland restaurant; the dramatis personæ were Herman P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., Cleveland; his friend, Frank Smith, and Mr. Brown, an acquaintance of the latter.

Mr. Knoble: "Hello, Frank! How are you?"

Mr. Smith: "Why, hello, Herman! Haven't seen you lately. Where've you been?"

Knoble: "Busy advertising the carnation convention."

Smith: "Between advertising trade shows and conventions, when do you find time to keep your business going?"

Knoble: "My ads in the daily papers keep my business going."

Smith: "It must be great to have a business like that. By the way, I want you to meet Mr. Brown."

Who's Mr. Brown?

Knoble: "How do you do, Mr. Brown! Glad to know you."

Brown: "How do you do, Mr. Knoble?"

Smith: "I have just engaged Mr. Brown, Herman, to open up a new set of books for me."

Brown: "The word 'new' is superfluous."

Knoble: "Well, that's a good one on you, Frank."

Smith: "Yes, that ought to hold me for a while."

Knoble: "When you open up this set of books for Mr. Smith, don't fail to include an account for publicity. I have often told Frank that his business could be greatly increased if he would set aside a little money each year for advertising. I honestly believe his store is the best equipped in the city; you know, he invested $24,000 in service equipment alone. Yet the fact remains that not enough people know of this elaborate service to employ it constantly and make it realize a sufficient return on the investment."

Brown: "But newspaper advertising does not work equally well for everyone. In some lines personal magnetism and individual association are really the only means that can be used to advertise."

Knoble: "That's where you are mistaken. You are in the auditing business, I understand. What is the name of your company?"

Brown (handing his card to Mr. Knoble): "I am president of the Brown Co."

Knoble: "How long have you been in business?"

Brown: "Six years."

Knoble: "I am pretty closely in

"A man, to meet with success in business, should choose the line he finds himself in love with.

"He should never allow some other business to tempt him and take him away from the business he loves.

"If a man doesn't like the business he's in he ought to get out and get in one he does like, even though he might have to start on a more humble basis.

"The searchlight of ambition should always be kept ahead so that no opportunity to improve is overlooked."

—Herman P. Knoble.

touch with business affairs in this city and am surprised to know that you have been in business six years and I have never heard of you. If I should have occasion to use an auditor, I would call on Ernst & Ernst, Nau-Rusk & Swearingen, or the Audit Co. of America. These concerns have been repeatedly brought to my attention through their advertising. I have used two of these concerns and paid about $375 each time. Possibly you would have had that money if I had known of you."

Making New Business.

Brown: "In that case, Mr. Knoble, advertising would not have benefited those firms, for they would have lost where I gained."

Knoble: "Now you have opened up a deep subject. But the main idea in successful advertising is to create business where no business exists. Don't you believe that if a man employed an auditor to go over his books once a year he would be money ahead?"

Brown: "There is no question about that!"

Knoble: "By advertising you might convince many business men of the fact and increase your business. In the same way, Mr. Smith might give people an idea of his splendid equipment. You will agree with me, I hope, that there are many people in the city and many more constantly moving in who, except in rare cases, have no occasion to hear of Mr. Smith and his store."

Brown: "That's true."

Sales Talk in Print.

Knoble: "Now, it is up to Smith to tell these people just where he is located, the kind of service he gives and the cost and the varieties of stock he has to sell. He should give them a regular line of sales talk about his business."

Brown: "How can he do this?"

Knoble: "In the daily papers, of course."

Smith: "But that lowers the dignity and standing of the business."

Knoble: "That talk about dignity in business amuses me. The only dignity in any business is the dignity of excellent stock, excellent service, and modern efficiency. Not long ago, you know, it was considered undignified for banks to advertise. The frock-coated, long-whiskered gentlemen of those institutions were scarcely to be approached by ordinary persons, much less to solicit accounts from them. But times have changed. In every daily paper and in some weeklies you will find the best financial institutions bidding for $1 deposits and offering toy banks to help you save the pennies. In the same way you find the best and most fashionable florists using page ads in the newspapers."

Smith: "Yes, but unless you use a whole page, your ad is lost in the paper and nobody reads it."

Little Ads Bring Results.

Knoble: "That's where you are wrong. At this time we ordinarily use about 1,000 carnations a day, but since we placed a small ad in the papers, announcing a special sale of carnations, we are selling 3,000 a day, instead of

1,000. That ought to convince you that the small ads are read."

Smith: "That's all right when you have something to offer for a special sale, but what are you going to do when you can't offer a special sale?"

Knoble: "You can tell people, as I said before, of the excellent equipment you have and the excellent service you give, and that the greater the volume of business, the easier it is to handle it at a smaller cost. These facts can be printed so that they are in keeping with the dignity of the profession. If a customer enters your store when you have not a special sale on and she doesn't know exactly what she wants, the salesmen do not stand back and make no attempt to wait on her or to make suggestions in order to induce her to buy your goods. Now, so far as the dignity of the business is concerned, what is the difference between making suggestions and quoting prices to possible customers who come into your store, and putting down these same suggestions and prices in black and white in the daily papers, nearly every reader of which may be considered as a possible customer?"

What to Say, and How.

Brown: "But how will you know what to put in your ads? An advertising man told me only the other day that he had to treat these new kinds of advertisements in a hit-or-miss fashion, and depend on luck for results."

Knoble: "Let me tell you, the fellow who told you that could not have been much of an advertising man. Advertising is nothing more or less than salesmanship on paper."

Brown: "But salesmanship is a matter of individual ability. Each man does it in his own way."

Knoble: "Do you mean to say there are no fixed rules of salesmanship?"

Brown: "You must be a student of Sheldon."

Knoble: "Yes, I have been, and I profited a great deal by it. But to return to the subject, the fact remains that there are fixed rules in regard to selling flowers or anything else. Some men follow them unconsciously, others consciously. The main thing is, the rules are there to follow, and they will increase your business if you use them."

Smith: "The question is, are the results enough to pay for your time and work, and the cost of the ads?"

Knoble: "How many thousands of people do you suppose there are who do not buy flowers, not because they can't afford them, but because they don't know enough about them and their cost, and have not had them brought to their attention as much as automobiles, theaters and other luxuries they spend money on?"

Smith: "But will newspaper advertising reach them?"

Knoble: "Did you ever know of a florist who started advertising, who stopped? That's the tip to follow. Get in the bandwagon! I'm glad of this chance to give you my views on advertising. The only thing you need to convince you is a little thought about it. Well, I'll have to leave you and give you time to think. Glad to have met you, Mr. Brown."

Brown: "You've half convinced me I ought to advertise, as well as our friend."

Smith: "I'm going to think about it."

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A RETAIL FLORIST'S ROUTE.

Perhaps there are many retail florists who have worked up something similar, but the method of a greenhouse man on the north shore of Lake Michigan, above Chicago, is one that has not previously been described. This florist is located between two first-class suburban towns. The majority of the residents are city people in fairly well-to-do circumstances. The florist's chief business is growing cut flowers for the city market, but, like many of his kind, he does more or less retailing at the greenhouses. In the course of time he found that many of his customers wanted regular supplies of flowers every Saturday; they wanted to spend a half dollar for the decoration of the Sunday dinner table. The result was that the florist started out on Saturdays with a basket to make deliveries to regular customers. At first he used the street car. Then the bicycle was employed. Later a horse and wagon became necessary. Now an automobile is used, for the Saturday route has grown to include 100 customers in one town and 150 customers in the other. The florist finds himself with 250 people who take 50 cents' worth of flowers every Saturday. Sometimes, of course, they want extra flowers, but ordinarily his deliveries are as regular as those of the milkman. Short-stemmed stock will do, and the florist has his customers trained to accept whatever variety of flowers he chooses to deliver. Naturally, he uses the kind that happens to be most plentiful at the time. In times of high prices he is not able to make much money on a 50-cent bunch of flowers, even if delivered without a box or other expensive accessories, but for at least forty-eight weeks in the year he is able to give a fairly generous bouquet and clean up good money on so big a quantity as is required to serve 250 regular customers.

It seems to be a plan that is capable of development wherever a florist is suitably situated.

A COUNTRY RETAILER'S RANGE.

The article in The Review for January 8, on "Making a Flower Store Pay in a Country Town," proved to be of so much interest to the readers of the paper that the accompanying illustration, showing the range operated by the owner of the store, will not be without interest to them also. The greenhouses are those of F. E. Blake, of Marion, O., whose son, B. F. Blake, is in charge of the retail store in that town. The plant now contains about 35,000 square feet of glass. It is located about one mile from the center of the town. From seven to ten men besides Mr. Blake are employed at the greenhouses, and all the stock grown here is disposed of at the store in town. The material used in the construction of these houses was supplied by the John C. Moninger Co., and the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., both of Chicago, and all of it has been found to be first-class and quite satisfactory by the owner.

MORE ABOUT FUNERAL CLAIMS.

In your issue of January 1 there appeared an article on "Claims for Funeral Flowers," in which it was stated that when an estate is small and the claims against it are many, the courts hold that "the whole funeral expense must be kept within the reasonable cost of a decent Christian burial." Now, I should like to know what is considered a "decent Christian burial."

In December, 1909, a farmer, who was worth perhaps $10,000, died, leaving a widow and three grown-up children. The two sons came and ordered a pillow at $6.00 and a spray at $1.50. One of them stated he would pay for them the following week, and he did. The widow then went to live with the son who had acted as spokesman, but she lived less than a month. The two sons again came and asked to have the order duplicated, but stated that we should look to the estate for payment of the bill. We considered the estate good for it and sent the bill to the administrator, but I heard nothing from him until after my father's death in May, 1910, when I was appointed administrator of his estate. I pressed the heirs for a settlement and then found that the sister had objected to the payment. Affairs went along in this condition for over a year. Finally the administrator phoned me that the money was ready, stating that the judge had ordered it paid, as it was the last remaining claim, letting the heirs thresh the matter out later.

I might state that the book of instructions issued by the judge of the Probate court of this county to an administrator states that all claims must be paid by the administrator, providing the assets hold out and none of the heirs objects. But how is the florist to know or find out on short notice whether all the heirs have given or will give their consent to the payment of the bill for the funeral flowers? I should like the opinions of some other florists on these matters. I might cite several other cases which, while similar, vary to a certain degree, but believe I have given enough to make my case clear.

BOOSTING TELEGRAPH ORDERS.

So indefatigable is Albert Pochelon in his endeavor to extend the sphere of influence of the association of which he is secretary, that he has been dubbed F. T. D. Pochelon. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery now numbers nearly 200 members and the secretary's office is handling a large volume of correspondence. Mr. Pochelon recently mailed to the representative florists 1,500 circulars presented to the association by the McNeff-Swenson Co., reproducing the poster design which has been adopted by the F. T. D. and giving details relative to the plan of operation and membership.

It is the intention of the directors of the association to carry on a complete advertising campaign to familiarize the general public with the fact that every F. T. D. member will accept orders for delivery in any part of the world and will guarantee perfect satisfaction to sender and receiver. This campaign will include newspaper advertising, mailing cards, folders, posters for windows, hotels, etc.; in fact, every form of advertising to reach the buying public.

SALTFORD JOINS IN.

Ed. Review: Allow us to compliment you on the efforts you are making to bring St. Valentine's day into its own. We are enclosing samples of enclosures that we send out with mail, also in flower packages. This is in addition to our regular advertising in the Poughkeepsie newspapers.

The Saltford Flower Shop.

W. A. Saltford, Sec'y.

The enclosures of which Mr. Saltford speaks are excellent. One is a neat little blotter with February calendar. It says, "St. Valentine's day has become one of the BIG flower days of the year. This shop will be glad to send your valentines." The other enclosure is a neatly printed card that, in addition to the name, bears two significant messages: "Flowers get nearer the heart than candy. Why not delegate us to send your valentines?" And "Flowers by telegraph anywhere on one hour's notice."

Every retailer who features the appropriateness of flowers for use as valentines thereby increases, not only his own business, but the business of the trade in general; not only for today, but for all time. The Review hopes every florist will help.

WHY I AM A MEMBER.

[A "talk" by Jacob Schulz, of Louisville, read before a recent meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists.]

Why am I a member of the Kentucky Society of Florists? I am a member because it pays to be a member, and if it caused a loss, I assure you I would not remain a member long.

The seal of Kentucky shows two men "all dressed up" clasping each other by the hand and saying, "United we stand, divided we fall." We should do likewise, be united and make the society a real helper to each member, telling our successes, failures, mishaps; trusting in the combined experience of all will be a help to each member. Cooperation is the cure for ruinous competition, and the history of business sustains the contention that coöperation is "the life of trade," and that competition is the death of it.

The florists' trade has its seasons, good, medium and bad. The goods easily perish, style changes, and there is much loss of product. Now, if we can, by being members of the Kentucky Society of Florists, make our business pleasant and profitable, we have done much for our own good, and we have not harmed anyone. A fair profit is always legitimate.

Some people decry chasing the "almighty dollar," but do they practice their beliefs? Watch them and you will see them doing some tall "stunts" in chasing it.

See that dollar, how it glistens. Chase it;

Get it if you can.

If you fail to strive and get it,

You wouldn't be a man.

All men's effort is for profits,

Seeking for a gain.

He that does not seek a profit

Always is in a "strain."

We raise the plant for profit;

We should sell the flower for gain.

A plant that brings no profit

Always gives to me a pain.

1,000. That ought to convince you that the small ads are read."

Smith: "That's all right when you have something to offer for a special sale, but what are you going to do when you can't offer a special sale?"

Knoble: "You can tell people, as I said before, of the excellent equipment you have and the excellent service you give, and that the greater the volume of business, the easier it is to handle it at a smaller cost. These facts can be printed so that they are in keeping with the dignity of the profession. If a customer enters your store when you have not a special sale on and she doesn't know exactly what she wants, the salesmen do not stand back and make no attempt to wait on her or to make suggestions in order to induce her to buy your goods. Now, so far as the dignity of the business is concerned, what is the difference between making suggestions and quoting prices to possible customers who come into your store, and putting down these same suggestions and prices in black and white in the daily papers, nearly every reader of which may be considered as a possible customer?"

What to Say, and How.

Brown: "But how will you know what to put in your ads? An advertising man told me only the other day that he had to treat these new kinds of advertisements in a hit-or-miss fashion, and depend on luck for results."

Knoble: "Let me tell you, the fellow who told you that could not have been much of an advertising man. Advertising is nothing more or less than salesmanship on paper."

Brown: "But salesmanship is a matter of individual ability. Each man does it in his own way."

Knoble: "Do you mean to say there are no fixed rules of salesmanship?"

Brown: "You must be a student of Sheldon."

Knoble: "Yes, I have been, and I profited a great deal by it. But to return to the subject, the fact remains that there are fixed rules in regard to selling flowers or anything else. Some men follow them unconsciously, others consciously. The main thing is, the rules are there to follow, and they will increase your business if you use them."

Smith: "The question is, are the results enough to pay for your time and work, and the cost of the ads?"

Knoble: "How many thousands of people do you suppose there are who do not buy flowers, not because they can't afford them, but because they don't know enough about them and their cost, and have not had their brought to their attention as much as automobiles, theaters and other luxuries they spend money on?"

Smith: "But will newspaper advertising reach them?"

Knoble: "Did you ever know of a florist who started advertising, who stopped? That's the tip to follow. Get in the bandwagon! I'm glad of this chance to give you my views on advertising. The only thing you need to convince you is a little thought

Brown: "You've half convinced me I ought to advertise, as well as our friend."

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A RETAIL FLORIST'S ROUTE.

Perhaps there are many retail florists who have worked up something similar, but the method of a greenhouse man on the north shore of Lake Michigan, above Chicago, is one that has not previously been described. This florist is located between two first-class suburban towns. The majority of the residents are city people in fairly well-to-do circumstances. The florist's chief business is growing cut flowers for the city market, but, like many of his kind, he does more or less retailing at the greenhouses. In the course of time he found that many of his customers wanted regular supplies of flowers every Saturday; they wanted to spend a half dollar for the decoration of the Sunday dinner table. The result was that the florist started out on Saturdays with a basket to make deliveries to regular customers. At first he used the street car. Then the bicycle was employed. Later a horse and wagon became necessary. Now an automobile is used, for the Saturday route has grown to include 100 customers in one town and 150 customers in the other. The florist finds himself with 250 people who take 50 cents' worth of flowers every Saturday. Sometimes, of course, they want extra flowers, but ordinarily his deliveries are as regular as those of the milkman. Short-stemmed stock will do, and the florist has his customers trained to accept whatever variety of flowers he chooses to deliver. Naturally, he uses the kind that happens to be most plentiful at the time. In times of high prices he is not able to make much money on a 50 cent bunch of flowers, even if delivered without a box or other expensive accessories, but for at least forty-eight weeks in the year he is able to give a fairly generous bouquet and clean up good money on so big a quantity as is required to serve 250 regular customers.

It seems to be a plan that is capable of development wherever a florist is suitably situated.

A COUNTRY RETAILER'S RANGE

The article in The Review for January 8, on "Making a Flower Store Pay in a Country Town," proved to be of so much interest to the readers of the paper that the accompanying illustration, showing the range operated by the owner of the store, will not be without interest to them also. The greenhouses are those of F. E. Blake, of Marion, O., whose son, B. F. Blake, is in charge of the retail store in that town. The plant now contains about 35,000 square feet of glass. It is located about one mile from the center of the town. From seven to ten men besides Mr. Blake are employed at the greenhouses, and all the stock grown here is disposed of at the store in town. The material used in the construction of these houses was supplied by the John C. Moninger Co., and the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., both of Chicago, and all of it has been found to be first class and quite satisfactory by the owner.

MORE ABOUT FUNERAL CLAIMS

In your issue of January 1 there appeared an article on "Claims for Funeral Flowers," in which it was stated that when an estate is small and the claims against it are many, the courts hold that "the whole funeral expense must be kept within the reasonable cost of a decent Christian burial." Now, I should like to know what is considered a "decent Christian burial."

In December, 1909, a farmer, who was worth perhaps $10,000, died, leaving a widow and three grown-up children. The two sons came and ordered a pillow at $6.00 and a spray at $1.50. One of them stated he would pay for them the following week, and he did. The widow then went to live with the son who had acted as spokesman, but she lived less than a month. The two sons again came and asked to have the order duplicated, but stated that we should look to the estate for payment of the bill. We considered the estate good for it and sent the bill to the administrator, but I heard nothing from him until after my father's death in May, 1910, when I was appointed administrator of his estate. I pressed the heirs for a settlement and then found that the sister had objected to the payment. Affairs went along in this condition for over a year. Finally the administrator phoned me that the money was ready, stating that the judge had ordered it paid, as it was the last remaining claim, letting the heirs thresh the matter out later.

I might state that the book of instructions issued by the judge of the Probate court of this county to an administrator states that all claims must be paid by the administrator, providing the assets hold out and none of the heirs objects. But how is the florist to know or find out on short notice whether all the heirs have given or will give their consent to the payment of the bill for the funeral flowers? I should like the opinions of some other florists on these matters. I might cite several other cases which, while similar, vary to a certain degree, but believe I have given enough to make my case clear.

E. E. Hill.

BOOSTING TELEGRAPH ORDERS.

So indefatigable is Albert Pochelon in his endeavor to extend the sphere of influence of the association of which he is secretary, that he has been dubbed F. T. D. Pochelon. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery now numbers nearly 200 members and the secretary's office is handling a large volume of correspondence. Mr. Pochelon recently mailed to the representative florists 1,500 circulars presented to the association by the McNeff-Swenson Co., reproducing the poster design which has been adopted by the F. T. D. and giving details relative to the plan of operation and membership.

It is the intention of the directors of the association to carry on a complete advertising campaign to familiarize the general public with the fact that every F. T. D. member will accept orders for delivery in any part of the world and will guarantee perfect satisfaction to sender and receiver. This campaign will include newspaper advertising, mailing cards, folders, posters for windows, hotels, etc.; in fact, every form of advertising to reach the buying public.

Allamandas.

Allamandas which have been kept tolerably dry for the last eight or ten weeks will now have dropped about all their foliage and will have their wood well ripened. A. Williamsi, which is the most useful variety for pot culture, succeeds well in a temperature of 60 degrees at night and is particularly useful during the summer months, when choice flowering plants in pots are not numerous. All that some plants may need will be an overhauling of the drainage, a removal of the surface soil and a good top-dressing. In other cases it may be necessary to pick the balls over with a pointed stick and remove most of the soil. This will permit their being started in smaller pots, giving them a shift when these are well filled with roots. Prune the plants back moderately a few days before repotting them.

Large plants in pots or tubs, or such as are planted out for covering roofs of greenhouses, should also now be pruned and given a liberal top-dressing of fibrous loam, bone and dried cow manure. While allamandas are looked upon as true tropical plants, they can be well grown in an ordinary greenhouse, and flowers produced in these are even finer than those seen in the hot, humid stove houses.

Schizanthus.

That beautiful annual, schizanthus, makes its finest display in March and April of each year. It must have at all times a cool and airy house, and, before being moved into the flowering sized pots, should not get at all pot-bound. If grown cool and in a light house, comparatively little staking will be needed, but such as is required must be done before the shoots become bent or broken. In addition to their value as pot plants, schizanthus are splendid for cutting, the beautiful, orchid-like flowers having splendid keeping qualities, and for table centerpieces it would be difficult to find anything more beautiful. Our first lot of schizanthus are now in full flower, and they are useful. A late sowing has just been made; these will not flower until May, but even if they do not come along until Memorial day they will prove useful. When well established in flowering pots schizanthus must have copious water supplies and liquid manure at least once a week in addition.

Mignonette.

At this season mignonette produces its finest spikes. Considerable care should be taken to disbud the shoots so as to ensure strictly first-class flowers. With the increasing sunlight we are now enjoying, beds and benches dry out a little better and there is a perceptible quickening in growth. It is well to encourage the plants now, either with a top-dressing of sheep or cow manure, or with an application of liquid manure once in ten days. The plants must have a good water supply, as mignonette will not tolerate anything approaching dryness at the root. It is well to save seed from one or two extra fine stalks. Keep the night temperature low; 40 to 42 degrees at night is ample.

Shamrocks.

The seedling shamrocks should now be of sufficient size to pot off singly. They sell specially well in small pots; what are generally termed thimble pots and small thumb pots are popular sizes. They are also good sellers in little pans, in which several plants can be placed. Shamrocks want a tolerably cool house; 45 degrees is sufficient. Use care in damping them overhead; also avoid cold draughts, for they are susceptible to attacks of mildew, and affected plants are, of course, practically useless.

Sweet-Scented Verbenas.

When busy with propagation do not overlook the ever popular sweet-scented verbenas. Old plants which have been resting in a cool house can be placed in heat, freely syringed, but not given much water at the root, and they will soon give a nice crop of cuttings, which should be rubbed off with heels and placed in a propagating bench where there is a steady bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees. Under such conditions a large part of the cuttings should root, and if potted off, kept pinched and later repotted, they will make excellent stock for May sales.

Heliotropes.

Be sure to get a good stock of that beautiful bedding plant, the heliotrope. It roots quickly in a warm cutting bench, and from stock propagated now, fine, bushy plants in 4-inch pots can be ready for May sales. Standard heliotropes are always attractive while in flower. Those wanted for Easter should be pinched until February 15; then let the flowers appear. If not needed until Memorial day, continue pinching up to within five weeks of that date. Seedling heliotropes possess greater vigor than those raised from cuttings, and make the finest standards. Last year small standard heliotropes in 6-inch pots met with a remarkably good sale at Easter.

Scented Geraniums.

In common with scented verbenas, the sweet-scented geraniums are popular. If an ample stock was propagated in fall, well and good. If this was not done, however, it is not too late to place a good batch of cuttings in the sand. These root easily and will make nice, salable plants before the middle of May. Scented geranium shoots are in demand in winter, and anyone possessing plants with good shoots can sell them easily. Some varieties of scented-leaved geraniums root less readily from shoots than others, and it will be found that propagation by means of pieces of root is quite effective.

CARING FOR YOUNG PLANTS.

If you have followed our early suggestions you have potted all your cuttings, up to this time, into 2-inch pots, with a view to shifting them into 2½-inch pots in March. After February 20 I would suggest that you pot right into the 2½-inch size from the cutting bed, providing the cuttings are strong and well rooted.

You will soon be getting busy with your spring bedding plants, if you do anything in that line, but do not allow it to cause you to neglect your young carnation plants. Give them a light bench, where there is no drip. Always keep in mind that these young plants will be your blooming stock next season; therefore the best of care should be given them all the time. With the early planting practiced these days, only first-class young plants stand a chance of growing into first-grade plants by benching time.

After they have been potted a few weeks, stand them over, pulling any weeds that may have started and picking off any bad leaves that may be on them. Top any that have begun to run up, before they show the buds. If you have a separate house for your young stock, give them a temperature of about 48 to 50 degrees. They will do quite well, however, in the same houses with the blooming stock; only do not make the mistake of jerking the plants out of the poorest growing bench on the place, to make room for the young plants. The best bench on the place is where they belong.

A. F. J. Baur.

PLANTING A NEW HOUSE.

I have a new greenhouse, 30x100, which I wish to plant with carnations next July. How many plants will be needed to fill the house and how far apart should they be planted? Please tell me, also, how many blooms I should be able to cut from them. The varieties are White Wonder, Victory, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Enchantress.

J. G.

You do not give the width of your benches, so I cannot estimate how many plants your house will hold. We plant seven plants across a 5-foot bed and set the rows ten inches apart, unless the plants are extremely large, in which case we set the rows twelve inches apart. Planted in this way—that is, with the rows ten inches apart—a 5-foot bench, 100 feet long, will hold 840 plants. Victory can be planted more closely, unless the plants are unusually large for that variety. Figuring eight plants across a 5-foot bed would make 960 plants to the bed.

The number of blooms you will cut from such a house will depend entirely on your success as a grower. A good average cut would be about twenty blooms per square foot of bench space. White Wonder will make that many easily. Enchantress should do it without much trouble, while Mrs. Ward and Victory might fall a little below.

A. F. J. B.

PLANTING IN UNGLAZED HOUSE.

Which would be the best red, white and pink carnations for outside blooming in the fall in this New Jersey climate? I am building a greenhouse for carnations and I wish to put the plants right in the soil, before glazing, and glaze the house in September. Will the plants bloom profitably without benches? The soil is clay. I have read in The Review about the owners of movable houses planting in that way. Which would be the best varieties of carnations for such a purpose?

E. C. M.

We have built several houses in the way you are planning to build yours. If your soil is good and the drainage is ample, you need have no fear of the plants not doing well. In fact, you will cut flowers of far better quality during October and November than you would from transplanted stock. The work of caring for the plants will, of course, be more tedious than if the plants were on elevated beds. Set the plants in beds, leaving walks, just the same as if you had raised beds.

Any of the standard varieties will thrive under this treatment. For outside blooming, you will find the Enchantress varieties, White Wonder, Shasta and Dorothy Gordon are all good. None of the standard reds is good for this purpose, unless it be Scarlet Glow. We grow a variety of our own, which we have found satisfactory for this purpose.

A. F. J. B.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Chicago, Ill.—February 6 a petition in voluntary bankruptcy was filed in the U. S. District court by Arthur B. Weeks, attorney at 19 South La Salle street, on behalf of Julia A. Wratkowsky, better known to the trade as Julia Jegen. The schedule of liabilities showed $2,338.04 unsecured, with assets nominally $660. The claims of those in the trade, as shown by the schedule, are as follows:

Poeblmann Bros. Co.	$1,012.35
A. L. Randall Co.	77.86
Kennicott Bros. Co.	120.00
Frank Oechslin	82.55
Raedleln Basket Co.	8.65
W. D. Messinger & Co.	7.25
J. B. Deamud Co.	50.20
Bellevue Place Co.	246.25
Adam Ziska & Co.	27.99
W. W. Barnard Co.	3.75
Wm. Kalous	10.50
Geo. Wittbold Co.	30.20
Jos. Ziska	34.90
Hummel & Downing	44.81
Singler Bros.	(about) 300.00
Batavia Greenhouse Co.	76.25

The schedule of assets shows $64.18 cash on hand and $2.66 in bank; stock on hand, $700; household fixtures, $65; due on book accounts, $660.70. Claim is made for an exemption of $400. The liabilities include $3,700 due Foreman Bros. Banking Co., secured by a trust deed covering property owned and dated August 23, 1911. The business is among the oldest in Chicago. It was established by the late J. A. Jegen more than a quarter of a century ago and

Men You Ought to Know

S. A. ANDERSON.

THE principal duty of the vice-president of a trade society ordinarily is to take charge of the local arrangements for the next convention, the vice-president usually being chosen from the city that is to be the next meeting place. S. A. Anderson's selection as vice-president of the American Carnation Society for the year of the convention at Buffalo insures another fine retailers' department—Mr. Anderson not only is one of Buffalo's leading retailers, but he is so affable and full of energy that he will be sure to get the retailers there to take complete advantage of the opportunity to show the flower buyers of their town not only good carnations, but how effectively good carnations can be used in decorations. No better man could have been found to carry along the work inaugurated by the retail florists at Cleveland this year.

was for many years a landmark at 55 Washington street. In those days the Jegens, father and daughters, did a large volume and were among the most prosperous florists in Chicago. Following Mr. Jegen's death a number of years ago, the business was continued by the daughters, one of whom is Mrs. Ida Jegen Bitters, the death of whose son under the wheels of an Illinois Central train at Windsor Park February 1 was chronicled in last week's issue of The Review. Julia A. Jegen continued the business after her marriage, removing the store a few years ago to 27 North Dearborn street.

BAYERSDORFER WINS CASE.

In the U. S. Customs court January 22, H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, won their case with regard to the duty on immortelle wreaths. The official report of the case is as follows:

"No. 1215. United States vs. H.

Bayersdorfer & Co.; opinion by Montgomery, presiding judge; in an importation of immortelle wreaths the collector assessed additional duties on account of undervaluation, to which the importers protested; the board of general appraisers sustained the protest of the importers and the decision of the board is reversed."

NEED HIGHER TEMPERATURE.

I am enclosing some fern leaves for examination. As soon as the leaves have grown to any size they turn brown. The plants keep sending out new leaves, but these do not amount to anything.

E. C. F.

The ferns appear to have been grown in too low a temperature. If the plants keep pushing up numerous young fronds, there is nothing wrong with the roots. A low temperature and overhead watering along with it would produce just the results you describe.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

PREPARING COMPOST.

In the first part of this year I mixed some fresh cow manure with soil. Do you think this compost will be in proper shape by the last part of May? I intend to grow chrysanthemums in this soil. L. S.

The soil mixed with fresh manure should be in good shape by the latter part of May to grow chrysanthemums, particularly if you will break down the heap and turn it over at least once before that time. This will permit thorough mixing of the manure and soil and get the compost in good condition for planting in. C. H. Totty.

LEAF ROLLERS.

Can you tell me how to kill those insects that lay the eggs that produce leaf rollers? They are numerous on the young chrysanthemum plants and on some carnations that were in the same house, and they are also beginning to appear on the Beauties. I know how to get rid of most of the other kinds of pests, but not these fellows. P. M.

The leaf roller seems to be particularly bad on chrysanthemums in P. M.'s state, Indiana, and in his section of the country generally. Personally, I have never been bothered with this pest so far, and have not had a chance to study its habits to any great extent. The Paris green and sugar solution, as used by Beauty growers, is possibly the most effective for this insect. Sugar helps the Paris green to stick and the sweetness of it seems to attract insects of all descriptions, no matter whether they are thrips or any other of the numerous pests that infest the plants.

C. H. Totty.

MAY BE A SPORT.

I am forwarding to you today by parcel post a chrysanthemum bloom which I have every reason to believe is a sport from a white variety I have been growing. It is a strong grower, reaching a height of three and one-half to four feet. I have had this plant for two years and it always throws the same sort of bloom; that is, in shape and color. Will you find out whether it is a new one or one that has already been named? If a new one, is it worth increasing? The plant from which this bloom was cut has not had any feeding or pampering in any way, being grown in a worn-out carnation soil.

H. K. M.

The chrysanthemum bloom was much wilted when I received it, so I could not identify the variety. There is no reason why you should not have a sport from a white variety. If it is absolutely identical in form and foliage it evidently is a sport, but if the foliage is different I would be inclined to think it is another variety that got mixed with your stock. As a rule a white variety will sport yellow or pink, and a pink one will sport white. Look closely at the foliage and if it is identical with that of the parent, the plant is a sport; if not, it must be another variety mixed with your collection.

C. H. Totty.

EARLY INCURVING WHITES.

Will you kindly give me the name of some good white incurved chrysanthemum that will bloom along with Pacific Supreme? I have grown Touse, but with me it runs up too tall for what head room I have. How long a stem does Chrysolora make? F. M.

The best early incurving dwarf white, according to my mind, would be Beatrice May, which flowers at the same time as Pacific Supreme. It can be grown on the front bench or where head room is limited, as it is dwarfer than Pacific Supreme. Another good early white is White Gloria. This, however, will grow up considerably taller than either of the other varieties mentioned, being as tall as Touse, or even taller. Chrysolora will run approximately three feet from June planting.

C. H. Totty.

LEAF-MOLD OR PEAT?

I am enclosing some leaf-mold just as it was dug from the swamp, with the request that you kindly advise me how I shall prepare it for chrysanthemum compost for use in outside planting.

I also will thank you for information in regard to preparing this mold for general potting soil. G. C.

If the black soil is pure decayed leaf-mold it has value, but if it is, as in so many cases, just a deposit of dead, decayed peat its manurial quality is practically nil. A mixture of one-fourth to one-third of leaf-mold in potting soil for chrysanthemums is excellent. Any excess of this quantity will tend to make the growth rather soft. If, as said before, G. C. is referring to rotted peat, his experiment station will tell him to leave it in the swamps, as it does more harm than good.

The genuine leaf soil, that we rot down for two years before mixing with the soil for potting mums, is one of the best mixtures in assisting the young plants to grow. C. H. T.

POMPONS FOR EASTERN MARKET.

Please tell me which are the best white, yellow and pink pompon mums to grow for the New York market.

J. G.

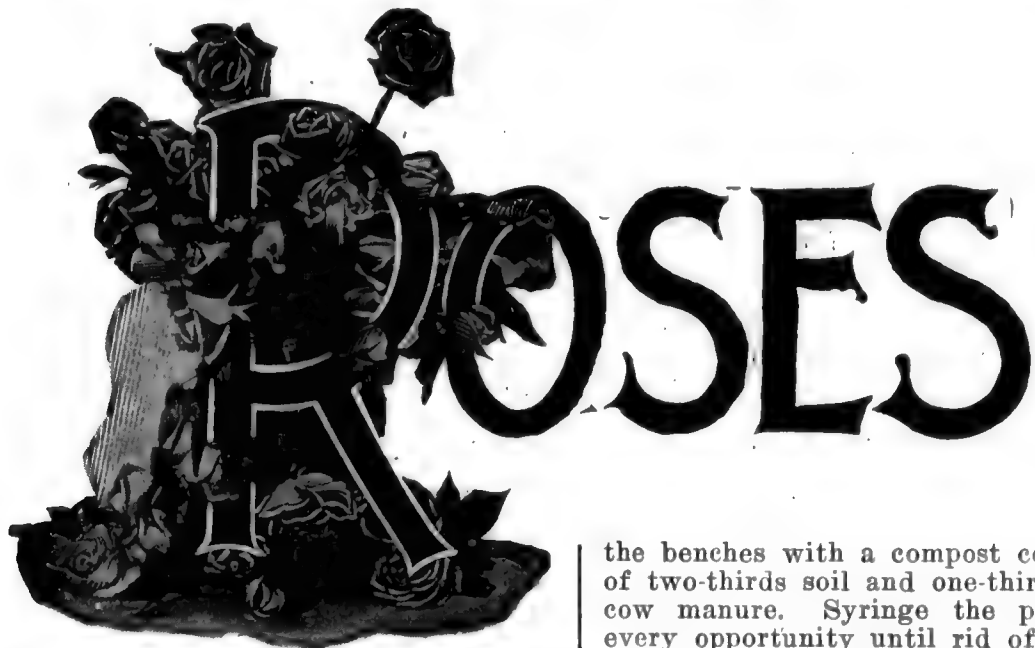

There are many varieties of pompons that can be grown for the New York market. The following in white, yellow and pink are quite largely grown and are all good: White—Queen of the Whites, James Boone and Baby Margaret. Yellow—Baby, Zenobia and Yellow Gem. Pink—Lillian Doty, St. Illoiria and Viola. Pompons can be planted about ten inches apart, with four to eight sprays carried on each plant. If you care to take up some of the newer types of pompons, I would suggest Golden West and Golden Climax as two excellent yellows, and Beth and Ruth as two good pinks. C. H. Totty.

SPLENDID JEANNE NONIN MUMS.

The perfect form and spotless white of the Jeanne Nonin chrysanthemum always arouses enthusiasm, and when it is well grown, there is no white, save perhaps the magnificent Wm. Turner, that can surpass this mum. Contrary to the popular notion of beauties of the feminine gender, Jeanne Nonin has other good qualities as well, and it is the other good qualities, those of keeping well and being a good shipper, that particularly endear it to the commercial growers. For this reason it is that Warrick Bros., of Washington, Pa., call it "one of our greatest money-makers." The illustration showing a bunch of the blooms grown by Warrick Bros. gives further evidence why this variety is so good a profit-bringer. This bunch of twelve blooms measured thirty-two inches in diameter and came, with a large number of others, from their houses at Washington, Pa. Their mums are always in prime condition for Thanksgiving and from that time on furnish a good cut for the market.

WINTERING KAISERIN OUTDOORS.

We are digging some Kaiserin roses which we have been growing under glass for summer blooming. We are placing these outdoors and covering them with some old strawy manure. We set the roses up, bank around them with the manure and throw enough over the top of them to cover them two or three inches deep. The weather is now below freezing; would it be advisable to give them a good watering, or would a good watering while they are frozen do them harm? We are located in Indiana. W. F. & S.

If the Kaiserin roses received a good, heavy watering at the time they were plunged outdoors and covered, they should not need any more attention until spring. As long as the plants are frozen in, they do not absorb any moisture; therefore it is unnecessary to give them any water until the weather moderates and you are ready to plant them out. W. J. K.

ROSES LOSING FOLIAGE.

I have a raised bench of roses that are grafted on Irish Manetti. They were planted last July and were 2-year-old stock. The varieties are Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Russell. The grower who preceded me here never syringed his roses. He had charge from August until Christmas. I should be glad if you could tell me what is wrong with the new foliage. The leaves have dried up at the tips and are dropping off.

When I took charge, the roses had only about three inches of soil and the graft was partly exposed. Was that the reason for the trouble? There was no drainage in the bottom of the benches. The plants had some red spider on them. I am enclosing some of the foliage for examination. I have maintained a temperature of 60 degrees at night and 70 degrees in the daytime. My predecessor kept the temperature at 64 degrees at night and 78 degrees in the daytime. Perhaps this lowering of the temperature may have had something to do with the trouble. C. C.

The rose leaves which were enclosed with the letter were completely dried up and the only thing noticeable was that they had a bad dose of red spider. No doubt this is the cause of the dropping of the foliage. If, as you say, there is only three inches of soil in the benches and the graft is partly uncovered, it would be advisable to fill the benches with a compost consisting of two-thirds soil and one-third rotted cow manure. Syringe the plants at every opportunity until rid of the red spider and no doubt the roses will come out all right. The temperature is all right, except that on cloudy days it should be 62 to 64 degrees. W. J. K.

SUNBURST AND RUSSELL.

My rose house is so small that it is impossible to keep Killarney roses free from mildew, and I have about decided to grow Sunburst and Mrs. Charles Russell next season. I have had a few of both of these this year and they have been free from mildew, though the Sunbursts have lost a good deal of foliage. They get yellow spots and dry up, and the Russells run to blind wood a good deal. In this latter case I find that by pinching I get a bud more quickly than by cutting back to hard wood. I should like to get a few general directions as to how to run these roses during the winter months, with reference to temperature, feeding and watering.

F. D. B.

If your houses, being small, are too low for Killarney, they will hardly be high enough for Sunburst or Russell, as both of these roses are tall growers. Besides, neither of them is as easy to grow as Killarney. A night temperature of 60 degrees, with a temperature 4 degrees higher on cloudy days and 10 to 15 degrees higher on bright days, will be all right for these roses. By reading the rose notes in The Review as they appear, you will find what information you need for these as well as other varieties of roses. W. J. K.

ROSE MRS. F. W. VANDERBILT.

The new rose, Mrs. F. W. Vanderbilt, which is shown in the accompanying illustration, is drawing much attention on account of its attractive and novel coloring and perfect form. Its color is described by the introducers, Samuel McGredy & Son, of Portadown, Ireland, as "deep orange red, shaded bronze apricot red, quite distinct from any other rose in cultivation, a marvelously attractive variety and undoubtedly the finest hybrid tea existing in this novel scheme of coloring." In shape and form the flower is perfect and its petals are of good depth and substance. It is described as a "fine, strong, free grower, blooming freely throughout the entire season, and suitable alike for exhibition purposes, garden culture and decorative work." In addition to having these qualities, it is also quite fragrant. In 1913 it was awarded the gold medal of the National Rose Society of England.

DISPLAY OR CLASSIFIED.

It's All the Same in Results.

The advertisements in The Review, big or little, are alike in that they produce good results. Of course, the man who wants to command attention will use a strong display. Then his results will be like this:

In handing you remittance to balance my account I wish to express my thanks for the business the advertisements have brought me. While I do not propose to advertise extensively in the immediate future, I shall be glad to have you acquaint me with the approach of any special numbers, so that I may avail myself of the opportunity to place an advertisement with you.—Collin Campbell, New York, N. Y., February 2, 1914.

When a man has merely a surplus of stock of standard character, all he needs to do is to tell about it in the inexpensive little liners in the Classified department, where everybody looks when in need of some certain item. Then the results are like this:

I would advise all florists to use The Review in getting rid of their surplus stock, as it is a business getter, and you will hear from me again shortly. But next time I shall offer stock for sale instead of for exchange.—H. T. Neitsch, Houston, Tex., February 2, 1914.

It is worth while noting that these letters, from opposite ends of the country, one dealing with the results from display, and the other with the results of classified advertising, were written the same day and are unsolicited expressions of the advertisers' satisfaction.

LONDON, ONT.

Wm. Dilger, of Detroit, who has done considerable landscape work in this section during the last two years, is organizing a limited company to go into the nursery business. It is proposed to start with 200 acres and increase as demands require. The rapid development of fruit growing in western Ontario calls for immense quantities of stock, the bulk of which is imported, so that it is felt there is an excellent outlook for an immediate home market.

G. M. Fraser, for several years with Gammage & Sons, has severed his connection to enter into partnership with his father in cap manufacturing. J. G. Gammage, eldest son of W. W. Gammage, will assume the position of secretary-treasurer and manage the retail store.

The advent of a cut rate store in this city is causing some speculation by the storemen as to what effect it will have on their trade. Up to the present stock has not been in sufficient quantity to supply the demand. With the bulbous stock becoming plentiful, few orders are now turned away.

Gammage & Sons have several thousand Baby Rambler and other roses that look promising for Easter.

W. W. G.

RALEIGH, N. C.

The weather for the last month has been that of the "sunny south" indeed, equal to that of May. Bulbous stock outside, such as Romans and Paper Whites, is coming into full bloom. The flower business in the south, while in its infancy, is increasing by leaps and bounds. The business of the month of January this year was far ahead of the same month in any previous year.

We feel the relief brought by the new express rates, but there is one thing we still must work for; that is, to get the excessive duty off French and Dutch bulbs.

J. L. O'Q.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

The extremely low temperatures of last week affected the supply of flowers considerably. Roses have been off crop and have been hard to obtain, those available bringing good returns. Carnations have not been overplentiful and the retailer has had to draw mostly on his stock of spring bulbous flowers to fill orders. Lilies have been much in demand and have met the call well. There has been much funeral work during the last few weeks and this has constituted the bulk of the trade, although flowers for the hospitals have had almost as large a demand.

Some handsome lilacs of the Charles X and Marie Legraye varieties have been observed in the stores, as well as spring flowers. The outlook for Valentine's day is exceedingly good and, judging from the present aspect, a tremendous business will be transacted.

Association Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association was held here February 3. There were fifty-two Indiana florists in attendance, which was exceptionally good and the largest meeting ever held outside the capital city. Luncheon was served at the Anthony hotel, where the business meeting was afterward held. A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., showed the new Hadley rose. It arrived in splendid condition and gained much favorable comment. W. R. Pierson was present. A tour of the different greenhouse establishments was made, where, for the most part, the florists found the stock in good shape.

Miss C. B. Flick is contemplating a trip to New Orleans during the Mardi Gras the latter part of February. She will be accompanied by Miss Helen F. Patten, of the Patten Flower Shop, Toledo.

R. R. F.

A UNIQUE PUBLICITY PLAN.

Ordinarily florists sell plants to beautify gardens, but Henry A. Dreer, Inc., has just made a lease of a garden to show plants. It is something entirely unique in the way of florists' advertising.

At Atlantic City there is a new amusement pavilion known as the Garden pier, which is expected to be one of the chief attractions of the ocean front. Between the board walk and the theatre, operated by Keith, is a handsome garden plot. Dreer has leased this for the purpose of making a display of plants and flowers. There are two large square plots, with a smaller circular plot between. The plan is to keep these plots constantly filled to the best advantage, varying the display from time to time. The garden is close to the board walk, in plain sight, where uncounted thousands of people from all over America will pass, so that the advertisement for the house of Dreer will be of a national character. The accompanying illustration shows the garden end of the pier.

LOW RATES HELP BUSINESS.

After one week of experience with the new rates, operative under the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Chicago offices of the big express companies report an increase in business, while the volume of United States parcel post business has shown a slight decrease. Postmaster Campbell said: "It is only natural that we should look for a slight decrease. The express companies call for packages and insure them up to $50. It is not strange, with the new rates, that the express business shows a gain."

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Rainy Saturdays are monotonous in New York. Every week since Christmas has ended in a downpour. Last week was no exception. This week opened with a miniature cold wave, less severe than was anticipated. Clear, cold weather is promised now, and business is expected to show an encouraging improvement during the rest of February. Shipments of all kinds of cut flowers are growing in quantity daily and while the level of prices is declining, the increase in public confidence is growing.

The only shortage of late at all noticeable has been in the rose shipments, but from the present week on, indefinitely, there will be no cause to complain. Prices of all roses have fallen twenty-five per cent from last week's quotations. The finest Beauties were selling Saturday at 50 cents. The quantity of the newer varieties is light and this will hold them around present list prices until after the flower show.

The carnation shipments are increasing daily; only the novelties sold above 3 cents Saturday. A further decline seems sure this week. The lower grades are booked for $1 a hundred. Lilies are becoming plentiful and prices are gradually lessening.

Valley is abundant and prices steady. A slight improvement is noted in selected gardenias. The short-stemmed stock still finds the street merchants the principal outlet. There has been no decrease in the orchid shipments, and prices are abnormally low. Even the finest cattleyas seldom go above $30 per hundred.

Some splendid acacia and lilac arrive daily. There has been no uplift to the violet market and none is expected. The best singles are the favorites. There is no limit to the arrival of bulbous stock of every kind. Daffodils, especially, are abundant and prices are receding rapidly. Freesias and sweet peas are of exceptional quality. Every retail window is gay with forsythia. Tulips, in pots and pans, add to the springlike decorations of the windows.

Club Meeting.

The lecture by W. R. Cobb, sales manager for the Lord & Burnham Co., at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club February 9, was on "Greenhouse Construction; Its Recent Development." The talk was profusely illustrated and held the close attention of the 100 members present. The development of the industry from its beginning to the wonderful structures of today was graphically portrayed. Mr. Cobb received a rising vote of thanks for his delightful and instructive address.

The exhibits all received the thanks of the club. Hadley rose was shown by A. N. Pierson, Inc., in such fine form that the wholesale house where they were on exhibition that afternoon was offered $1 each for them. An excellent pink carnation, Mrs. C. Edward Akehurst, grown by C. Akehurst & Son, of White Marsh, Md., was staged by the Pennock-Meehan Co. Rosette carnations were shown by Head's Bergenfield Nurseries, and Prince Edward carnations were staged by A. C. Begerow, of Newark.

M. C. Ebel, for the essay committee, announced the engagement of Prof. Hadley and "other lecturers of national reputation" for the ensuing meetings of the year.

J. B. Nugent, of the dinner committee, suggested March 25 or 26 as the date of the club's annual banquet and quotations of from $3.50 to $5 per plate were reported from the leading hotels. The matter was referred back to the committee for completion. Because of the flower show a large attendance is anticipated.

F. R. Pierson, chairman of the joint committees of the New York Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of New York, made an eloquent plea for harmony and coöperation to insure the success of the flower show March 21 to 28 at the Grand Central Palace. He told of the $11,000 worth of floor space for trade exhibits already sold, as compared with only $13,000 at the exhibition of 1913; also of the $12,500 premium list and the desire on the committee's part for special prizes. Many of the wealthy members of the Horticultural Society have already subscribed liberally five silver cups among the special announcements. The leading hotels also are donating premiums. Mr. Pierson especially commended the retail florists for their splendid coöperation and enthusiasm. It has been decided to dispose of tickets to the trade at 25 cents each in quantities of 20 to 100, and at 20 cents each for any number over 100. All members of the club will be provided with a non-transferable season pass. President Duckham spoke of last year's record and prophesied the success of the approaching show. Mr. Schling suggested the sending of an invitation to every retail customer on the books, with the monthly statements, 6,000 of which would be his contribution. Mr. Guttman seconded this suggestion. E. C. Vick, of the Sun, a son of the late James Vick, of Rochester, was introduced by A. T. Bunyard and promised the best efforts of his publication in behalf of the exhibition.

Five gentlemen were elected to membership and addresses made by Messrs. Le Clair, Marquardt and Voigt. Those proposed were Messrs. Doering, Morichard, Mabie, Wolfinger, Giessler, Buerlein, Eskesen, Yoiser, Pierkowsky, Christensen and Leo Niessen and Arthur A. Niessen, of Philadelphia.

Various Notes.

The Greek-American Florists' Association's ball takes place Friday evening, February 13, at Terrace Garden. Profuse decorations and a tremendous crowd, as usual, are anticipated. Last year over 2,000 participated in the grand march. Vaudeville will be enjoyed before the dancing.

The sixth annual dinner of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will be held Monday evening, February 23, at the new Hotel McAlpin, at Broadway and Thirty-fourth street. Music, vaudeville and dancing are promised. Messrs. Lehnig, Miller, Schoelzel and W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., form the dinner committee.

Messrs. Wm. Mayer, Maurice Fuld,

C. A. Ladiges and F. J. Le Clair were elected to membership in the New York Florists' Club Monday evening.

The prospects for the spring exhibition, March 21 to 28, are quite encouraging. Over $11,000 worth of space in the trade section has been sold. But of especial interest is the fact that the leading retailers of the city are taking a practical hand in its success. Large space has been already engaged by Max Schling, George M. Stumpp, A. T. Bunyard, David Clarke's Sons, R. G. Wilson, C. C. Trepel and Alex. Warendorff.

The new variegated carnation, Majestic, grown by its originator, Harry Weston, vice-president of the New York Florists' Club, with stems four feet long and blooms six inches in diameter, are seen daily in the windows of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., where they say they get $20 per hundred for them.

L. J. Kervan, Sr., leaves this week for his annual visit to the south and will be away until May, making his home in Florida, as usual.

The landscape department will be a special feature in the new enterprise of Woodrow & Marketos, at 37 West Twenty-eighth street. The firm expects to be well settled in the big store by February 15.

Frank Verona and Paul Meconi have challenged John Donaldson and John Miesem, or any two members of the New York Florists' Club, to a bowling match for $50, the best seven out of thirteen games.

J. K. Allen has recovered from an attack of the grip and is again at his desk.

Messrs. W. E. Marshall and R. J. Irwin are back from their western trips. J. Austin Shaw.

The next monthly exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held February 21, at the American Museum of Natural History. The exhibition committee is authorized to award special prizes for exhibits not provided for in the regular schedule. All are invited therefore to bring in any interesting plant or flower they may have, thus adding variety to the exhibition. Schedules will be sent upon application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York city. A meeting of the society will be held at 3:45, followed by a lecture on "Roses," by Alex. Cumming, Jr.

ROCHESTER VS. BUFFALO.

Florists are not the enthusiastic bowlers they were a few years ago, but nevertheless the sport is strengthening its hold at Buffalo and Rochester, where a series of inter-city games has been arranged, the first match to be rolled at Rochester, February 20. H. E. Bates, who, as well as being chairman of the bowling contingent at Rochester, is local manager for the Lord & Burnham Co., has offered a silver trophy of appropriate design, as shown in the accompanying illustration. The game February 20 will be rolled on the Grand Central alleys, followed by a dinner at Hotel Eggleston.

Terre Haute, Ind.—William W. Arnold has been granted a permit to erect a greenhouse at the corner of Barton avenue and Oak street. The house will be 18x100 feet and is expected to be in operation in about six weeks.

THE HOOSIER FLORISTS MEET.

The February meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association was held at Fort Wayne February 3, with about forty members present. The meeting was held in the Hotel Anthony, where dinner was served. The meeting was cut rather short, owing to the late arrival of President Coles. A committee composed of W. W. Coles, W. J. Vesey, Jr., John Hartje, Oliver Steinkamp, H. L. Wiegand, A. F. J. Baur, Irwin Bertermann, Theo. Dorner, E. G. Hill and Harry White was named to manage the fall show at Indianapolis. The state fair committee, composed of Oliver Steinkamp, Charles Pahud and John Hartje, was also announced. The following new members were elected: Herman Leitz, New Haven, Ind.; Otto Trifflinger and Harry Schaff, of Van Wert, O.; T. L. Knipe, of Kokomo; M. E. Goode, of Alexandria; E. J. Lanternier, C. J. Lanternier and Wm. Markey, of Fort Wayne. Wallace R. Pierson, of A. N. Pierson, Inc., showed a vase of their handsome new rose, Hadley, which has all the earmarks of a winner.

After the meeting the florists visited the Vesey plant, which shows no effects of the flood they had last spring. Their stock is all in fine condition, notwithstanding the cloudy weather. A visit was also made to the Flick greenhouses, where the stock was also found in good condition.

The Indiana State Florists' Association has been invited to meet with the Illinois State Florists' Association at Danville, Ill., March 10 and 11, which should prove an interesting meeting. President Coles and a number of other Indiana florists are booked for an address. A trolley ride to the experiment station of the Agricultural College at Urbana has been arranged, which should prove instructive. Indiana is expected to send a good-sized delegation. H. L. W.

From Another Member.

The florists of Indiana met at Fort Wayne February 3, in the Anthony hotel. A short meeting was held before the banquet, which was served at 1 o'clock. The business session was held directly after the banquet. The main issue at this meeting was the appointing of a flower show committee, to undertake the Indianapolis fall show. The committee consists of W. W. Coles, J. Hartje, H. L. Wiegand, O. E. Steinkamp, W. J. Vesey, Jr., A. F. J. Baur, Fred Lemon, Theo. Dorner, Irwin Bertermann and Harry White. Wallace R. Pierson exhibited his new rose, Hadley, and gave us an interesting talk on advertising and the best way of selling held-over stock. All the florists were greatly interested in the new rose, Hadley. It received commendation on every side.

After the meeting the visitors spent the balance of the day visiting the Vesey and Flick greenhouses. At the close of the day the entire body was entertained at Judge Vesey's home-stead, Miss Margaret Vesey presiding as hostess.

Rugby, N. D.—N. P. Lindberg has just completed another greenhouse, making a total of twelve houses in his range. He has also erected a building which contains a large, new heating plant, a stock room, a shipping room and the business office.

OBITUARY

David Wirth.

David Wirth, a member of the firm of Wirth & Gaupp, proprietors of the North Side Greenhouses, at Springfield, Ill., died Tuesday evening, February 3, at his residence, 116 West Elliott avenue, of a complication of diseases.

Mr. Wirth was born March 15, 1865, at Springfield, Ill., where he resided all his life. He was married September 1, 1892, to Isabelle Wiedlocher, who survives him. He is also survived by two daughters, Edna and Clara Wirth; his mother, Mrs. Conrad Wirth, Sr.; one brother, Conrad Wirth; one step-brother, John Gaupp, and one sister, Mrs. Robert Littrell, all of Springfield.

He was a member of Sangamon lodge, No. 6, I. O. O. F.; Central Illinois Camp, No. 872, M. W. A.; Capitol Tent, No. 1, of Maccabees; Council No. 136, Yeomen of America.

Harry T. Copas.

Harry T. Copas, of Copas Bros., Elyria, O., died at Memorial hospital, Elyria, Monday afternoon, February 2. For the last year his health had been gradually failing and a few weeks ago he was moved to the Memorial hospital. Mr. Copas was born thirty-four years ago in England. He came to this country at an early age. He had been in the florists' trade in Elyria for the last ten years. Being unmarried, he made his home with his sister, Mrs. Charles F. Hupp. He was a member of the local orders of Elks, Eagles, Moose and Woodmen of the World.

He is survived by five brothers and two sisters. The brothers are John, James and William Copas, of Elyria; Fred Copas, of Weldon, Colo., and Robert Copas, of Kansas City. The sisters are Mrs. H. P. Harmon, of Seattle, Wash., and Mrs. C. F. Hupp, of Elyria. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon, February 5, at the home of Mrs. Hupp. Interment was at Elyria cemetery.

Mrs. H. N. Gage.

Mrs. A. L. Gage, wife of H. N. Gage, the Los Angeles wholesale florist, died February 1, at the age of 29 years. She was widely known and highly esteemed in her community and her death cast a gloom over the Los Angeles florists. Her funeral, held February 3, was largely attended, and the floral offerings were notable for their quantity and their beauty.

Mrs. Anne Kent.

Mrs. Anne Kent, wife of John Kent, with C. L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., died at her home in South Knoxville, Wednesday, January 21. Mrs. Kent was 80 years old and had been failing in health for some time. Mr. and Mrs. Kent came to America in 1867. Mr. Kent was in the employ of the late Judge O. P. Temple and later was manager and landscape gardener for the famous Island Home Farm, near Knoxville. At the age of 85 years, Mr. Kent is now in charge of the bedding plants at C. L. Baum's establishment. He has the sympathy of the members of the trade in his bereavement.

Michael McNicholas.

Michael McNicholas, a retired nurseryman of Geneva, N. Y., died at his home on the Carter road, February 3, after an illness of three months. His widow, a son, Thomas McNicholas, and a daughter, Mrs. Daniel F. Lynch, survive him.

Aldert Keessen, Jr.

Report comes of the death of Aldert Keessen, Jr., of the firm of W. Keessen, Jr., & Sons, proprietors of the Terra Nova Nurseries, at Aalsmeer, Holland. He was 64 years old at the time of his death and had many friends among the trade in his country, having been active in this work for many years. He was a member of Holland's most important horticultural society, the Nederlandsche Tuinbouw Raad. The funeral, which attracted a large attendance from those in the trade, was held at Aalsmeer, January 26.

William Algie.

Though an announcement of the death of William Algie appeared in The Review's obituary column last week, the following additional particulars with reference to his career will doubtless still be acceptable. The day of his death, February 1, was within a few weeks of the date at which his duties as co-executor of the Dale Estate would have terminated. As stated a week ago, he had been associated with the estate since the death of Henry Dale, the founder of the business, in 1900. Mr. Algie died suddenly at his home in Alton, at the age of 64 years. The cause of death was acute indigestion and heart disease.

He was fairly well known to the trade throughout Ontario as the co-trustee with T. W. Duggan, the latter having held the position as managing director of the business since the executors were appointed. Mr. Algie did not take any active part in the business, however, but was on hand regularly when matters concerning the firm's interests had to be discussed. Born at Ayr, Ont., he settled down in the village of Alton some forty years ago, and he built up a fine woolen industry, which necessitated a great deal of traveling throughout the country. His name was quite familiar to most knights of the grip, and his after-dinner stories gained for him a reputation as a raconteur that few in the Dominion could equal. He was for many years a prominent member of the Burns Club, and the Commercial Travelers' Association and other kindred societies will miss him at their periodical gatherings. The funeral took place at Alton on the afternoon of Wednesday, February 4, and was largely attended, a special train leaving Brampton with several employees of the Dale Estate on board. Some of the finest designs that were ever sent from the Dale Estate were forwarded on behalf of the deceased's admirers, over 800 cattleya orchids alone being used on this occasion. W. G. P.

I should like information as to where I can buy the scallop shells, Pecten discatus, used for decorating graves.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL, by Wm. Scott, the greatest book ever written for florists, sent by The Review for $5.

...NEWS NOTES...

McHenry, Ill.—John F. Miller has let a contract for the erection of two additional greenhouses on his Rosedale property.

Nashua, N. H.—G. E. Buxton returned from Cleveland with a big batch of orders for his snapdragon, the sales of which and space required will necessitate more glass.

Union Grove, Wis.—C. W. Strout and Mr. Burris, of the Meredith Flower & Vegetable Co., of Libertyville, Ill., were in town recently preparing for the erection of the company's greenhouse here next spring.

Denison, Ia.—Charles Bartscher sent out some mimeographed postal cards to suggest the use of flowers for greetings for St. Valentine's day. He gets out similar cards for the various holidays and finds them a help in getting early orders.

Averill Park, N. Y.—Charles A. Hall suffered a loss of over $1,000 January 29 when a fire caused by the explosion of gasoline in an adjoining garage spread to his greenhouse and burned the young vegetable plants in the house.

Somersworth, N. H.—Commenting upon the snapdragon being popular for winter cutting, G. S. Ramsburg mentions that his shipments of young plants last year numbered 60,000. He has 25,000 potted up for spring delivery. A photo of a plant with forty-four shoots shows a fine specimen, although the average shows up nearly as good. He reports good returns from his ad in The Review.

Washington, D. C.—Representative Slayden, of Texas, has introduced a bill to remove the botanic garden from near the capitol to Rock Creek park and for the further development of the garden under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture. The bill sets aside 400 acres in Rock Creek park for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a national arboretum and botanical garden.

Malta, O.—W. C. Scovell reports that business is running ahead of the corresponding dates of last year, a condition extremely welcome after the local experiences of last March. He has some unusually fine cyclamen this season, some of the orchid-flowering type having developed flowers which, he avers, are four and three-quarters inches across. Among his Primula malacoides, several plants with white flowers have been found, and he thinks this will prove a decided acquisition.

Tampa, Fla.—The honor of being the first to regularly transport cut flowers by aeroplane goes to the Knull Floral Co., which sends daily shipments forty-five miles across Hillsboro bay to its branch at St. Petersburg, Fla. This airship is the only one following a definite schedule and makes two trips a day. The garden annex of the company on the opposite side of the street, which has just been enlarged, is a good advertisement, as it is on the loop that is traversed by every car on each trip. The company is busy booking orders for the Gasparilla ball, February 24, now the largest flower day in this state.

"UNEASY rests the face that wears a frown."—Ward.

PERHAPS some reader can send a few clippings of "Rest in Peace on Both Sides" funeral design joke that appeared weeks ago in this column—we have received only about one copy a day so far this year.

C. W. JOHNSON says carnations ship better when the boxes are lined with manila paper than when old newspapers are used. Guy French says he never had thought of it before, but that the idea seems quite reasonable, as he has noted many newspapers contain considerable hot air.

Or Cackle When a Bloom Is Ripe?

"Joe Hill has his carnation plants trained down so fine that pretty soon he'll insist they punch a time clock night and morning."—Toastmaster Graham at the Cleveland carnation banquet.

Didn't Her Flowers Keep?

A customer tells us she considers it a fortunate thing that the flowers in heaven are of the everlasting variety, as it is obvious that there will be no florists there to look after them.—B. P.

Eight Weeks Awash?

A retailer is reported to have put this tag on his Christmas azaleas: "You can keep me in bloom eight weeks by placing me in the bath tub and letting the water run over my pot."

But the family might need the tub before the azalea was out of bloom.

Something Rare.

The recent scarcity of good bulbous stock inspired the following quip:

Wealthy young man, entering flower store: "I want to give a young lady a bouquet; something swell."

Florist: "What about giving her a daffodil? We heard of one being in bloom this morning. Of course if you didn't want to give anything quite so expensive, we could make you up a bunch of about a dozen orchids."

Insulted the Irishman.

In the days when the American Protective Association was thoroughly hated by every good Irishman, for the organization's anti-Catholic policy, a warm son of Erin, whose father had died, placed an order with a florist for a pillow with the word "papa" inscribed on it in large gold letters. As the Hon. Patrick Casey was a person of some importance and influence, the florist outdid himself in his effort to make good.

On the day of the funeral the pillow was packed and delivered with the utmost care. Imagine the surprise of the florist, therefore, when not ten minutes after the order had been delivered, the Irishman came into the shop in a great rage, threatening to wreck the place. When he had somewhat subsided the florist was able to examine the pillow and read on it in large gold letters, A P A. The first letter of the word had dropped off.

...NEWS NOTES...

Woodfords, Me.—L. C. Goddard finds ten weeks' stocks a paying crop for Memorial day and gives as much space as possible to them.

Des Moines, Ia.—Dr. Wm. Carpenter is closing out the stock of gladioli, etc., of the W. K. Fletcher Bulb & Plant Co. He reports the demand excellent.

Wellesley Hills, Mass.—J. Edison Smith, florist at the Academy of the Assumption, was married January 28 to Miss Bessie C. Dunton, at the bride's home in Dorchester.

Orange, N. J.—The prize-winners on exhibits staged at the nineteenth annual dinner of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, which was reported in last week's Review, were Joseph A. Manda, first; Max Schneider, second, and William Reid, third.

Omaha, Neb.—Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Morgan-Shawler Co., by James W. Shawler and Howard R. Morgan, whose entrance into the florists' business was noted in a recent issue of The Review. The capital stock is placed at $10,000.

St. Paul, Minn.—Mrs. Henry A. Boardman, whose greenhouse plant, known as the Riverside Greenhouses, is one of the largest in the city, opened a retail store in the St. Paul hotel about February 10. J. A. MacLellan, formerly of the Flower Shop, Minneapolis, will have charge of the new store.

Houston, Tex.—The Houston Florists' Club inaugurated a week of cleaning up and planting February 11 with a banquet at the Rice hotel, to which citizens of Houston were all invited. The president of the Chamber of Commerce acted as toastmaster and prominent men of the city spoke. The florists of Houston are boosting trade with the slogan "Clean Up and Plant Something."

Mobile, Ala.—At its January meeting the Mobil Floral and Horticultural Society adopted the suggestion that a question box be placed in the downtown section in which questions on floriculture might be dropped and later answered by the society. George E. Kittle, of G. Van Antwerp & Son, seedsmen, who is secretary of the society, is to receive the questions sent, by mail. H. P. Loding, president of the society, believes this plan will arouse the interest of the public to the benefit of the trade.

Biddeford, Me.—C. S. Strout returned well pleased with his success at the Cleveland show. One might call this the home of Pink Delight, for it proves more productive when carried over the second season than some varieties of carnations do during the first. White Winsor is a favorite with the commission men, as it is an excellent shipper. Enchantress Supreme is supplanting the old variety. White Wonder, Benora and Pocahontas complete the list. Prospects look rosy, as three acres of adjoining property have been secured with the view of erecting more glass. There is no propagating house, as the method of growing cuttings in the same house with equal temperature is most satisfactory.

The Review brings results.

HAVE you got that printed letter-head yet?

It pays to keep one's eye on the "Wanted" ads in the Classified department of The Review; there are a lot of chances there to make a sale.

THE popular demand that plants and seeds be made available at the zone rates of the parcel post will be answered in the near future by an act of Congress.

ALMOST everyone agrees that the better policy is to refrain from selling to those who do not pay regularly, but the number who possess the decisiveness of character to adhere to such a policy is markedly less.

THERE are reports that the Mrs. Russell rose of late has not been performing so satisfactorily as it did in the early part of the season. As most of those who planted it have their plants cut down for wood, its winter blooming qualities will not be widely tested until next season.

WHO CAN ANSWER?

I should like to inquire through The Review if anyone can tell me where I can procure seeds or plants of Torenia Asiatica. The American catalogues, so far as I have access to them, do not list this variety. I have tried to get it through several large European houses, but without success. Possibly some reader of The Review knows where this rare plant is to be obtained.

John Gerard.

CORRESPONDENTS.

The Review is in position to use weekly or biweekly news letters from the following cities:

Baltimore	Utica
Minneapolis	Syracuse
Omaha	Albany
Buffalo	Louisville

Correspondents should be those whose daily duties take them out among the trade.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

A conservative gentleman remarked of last week's market that it was in a comatose condition, a state of suspended animation, insofar as demand was concerned, while one more radical in his views characterized the market as dead. While the demand for flowers never really dies, it probably is true that the week ending February 7 was the poorest of 1914 to date in the matter of total value of sales, the increased supply of stock not sufficing to overcome the declining average price. No one seems able to account for the unexpected decrease in demand, although the high prices and low quality of the stock through January no doubt was in some measure responsible. It has happened before that buyers would give up just at the moment the market loosened up after a protracted period of stringency. Unquestionably orders will come in freely again once the buyers realize that good quality flowers again are to be had without difficulty at prices that let the retailers do business easily and at a fair margin of profit. As a matter of fact, some of the rapid-fire local retailers advertised rose sales last week, offering at $2 and $2.50 per dozen stock that would have cost the lower figure a fortnight ago.

The arrival of the first zero weather of the season February 8 did nothing to improve the situation at the moment, but settled, seasonable winter weather will no doubt benefit many lines of business, that of florists among them.

Quality has been improved all along the line as the result of a little clear, cold weather. Roses are not only coming into crop again after the usual post-Christmas intermission, but the quality is much better than it was, and prices are easier. One may still pay as much money for a rose, but he gets a far better rose. Considering the small quantities planted, Richmond seems to be relatively more plentiful than other roses, although there is no difficulty in getting all the long roses one wants of any variety if one but speaks early enough in the day. The supply is not yet large enough so that a full line always is to be found in every ice-box. Long Beauties have shared in the general improvement in quality, and there are larger supplies of short Beauties, but he is a thoughtless man who expects short Beauties to be of anything better than mediocre quality at this time of year.

More favorable weather has improved the average quality of carnations, but the spread in values continues wide. Some carnations are well worth 4 cents, while others are difficult to sell at one-fourth the price. There are indications that returns to carnation growers will decrease rapidly as the cut of roses increases.

The principal change in the supply since last report has been in bulbous stock. Daffodils have come to reinforce the jonquils, which have themselves become an army. There also has been a large accession to the ranks of the tulips, which now include all colors. Sweet peas, too, have increased but not so fast as was expected; the flood is overdue. Last week there were a great many more violets than there

BEAUTIES

YOU WILL FIND NO FAULT WITH THE STOCK—NOR WITH THE PRICE

HERE are a lot of Beauties on the market at this time of year that do not come up to the quality demanded by the Retailers' customers, but we have no hesitancy in saying that OUR Beauties are first-class, especially the medium and long grades—good short Beauties are almost unheard of in February. If you have sale for good Beauties order of us. Let us help you build up your business.

FANCY ROSES

You can get all the roses you need if you send your order to us. Not many short roses—ours are mostly long roses, stock that is second to none. If you want the best, order our SPECIALS. A full line

CAN FILL RUSH ORDERS ON: VIOLETS VALLEY FANCY CATTLEYA ORCHIDS

These are the flowers that will be most wanted for February 14, and with which we are especially well supplied. We regularly handle more violets than any wholesaler west of New York. The cream of the crops, double and single. Our valley is the celebrated Chicago Market brand—none better and not much so good. Our Cattleyas are home grown, excellent stock.

WIRE YOUR ORDERS—WE WILL FILL.

CARNATIONS

For years it has been recognized that we have the highest average quality of any large supply of carnations—almost all of our stock will meet the needs of the most exacting buyer. It not only is good stock when it leaves us, but it is good stock when it reaches the out-of-town retailer—and it pleases HIS customers.

BULB STOCK

We have a full line—Jonquils, Daffodils, Tulips—the best grade procurable. A large supply.

FREESIA

We have a novelty in fancy pink and yellow Freesia, as well as white.

EASTER LILIES

We can supply fine Easter Lilies every day in the year.

was any need for; the returns, especially in the case of the Hudson river stock that fell below the highest standard of quality, afforded no satisfaction to growers. The price of cattleyas will firm up promptly upon the reappearance of demand, as the supply of good stock no longer is excessive. Valley continues to sell as well as anything else on the list.

There is no special change in the green goods situation. There are all the ferns anyone wants at the price. Adiantum continues weak, Mexican ivy being so largely used in its place. Galax is plentiful. Few asparagus strings are to be had and they seldom are asked for, although asparagus sprays, mostly from Florida, sell steadily.

St. Valentine's Prospect.

Most of the wholesalers said early in the week that they were disappointed with the number of orders booked for St. Valentine's day. Last year the business doubled, as compared with 1912. Another increase has been confidently expected this year. Those who have given the subject thought are inclined to the opinion that the small number of advance orders is due to general confidence that such flowers as are in special demand for corsage work and dollar boxes will be plentiful, and that buyers can fill their requirements on short notice. It is expected that Friday, February 13, will be an extremely busy day with telegraph orders.

The Hadley Rose.

Chicago growers seem to think the new crimson rose, Hadley, will make a hit; at least, it is being bought in considerable quantity for this market. The rose is a new color, fiery crimson.

It comes from the same originators as Mrs. Russell, the Montgomery interests near Boston, although it is being put on the market by A. N. Pierson, Inc. Mr. Montgomery raised a number of seedlings more or less of this color, but thought Hadley much the best. He had not planned putting Hadley on the market this year, but decided to go ahead on short notice when he found others were working up stocks of crimson roses, some of them by rooting wood of his own seedlings obtained through his sales of cut flowers. When Hadley was offered 10,000 were ordered by Poehlmann Bros Co. The Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, also took a good quantity, as did Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst. Last week Wietor Bros., Bassett & Washburn, Peter Reinberg and Sinner Bros. placed orders. George Reinberg, who is not noted for haste in buying novelties, ordered 500 Hadley the first time he saw the flowers. Others also are ordering, so that over 20,000 will be planted here next season.

New Construction Contractor.

Believing that there is a good field for someone equipped to erect greenhouses on contract, George Willens has started in that branch of the business under the name of the Willens Construction Co. His headquarters are at 1527 South Spaulding avenue. Mr. Willens was until recently an estimator for the John C. Moninger Co., and previously had been employed by the Foley Mfg. Co. For the present he expects to confine his operations to the erection of greenhouses under contract, for he has in mind a number of new ideas on greenhouse construction and may eventually start manufacturing greenhouse material. He is a young man of earnest purpose and should succeed.

Various Notes.

The secretary of state has licensed the organization of the Ickes-Braun Mill Co., the capital of $30,000 being fully paid in. Carl Ickes, who is the moving spirit in the matter, says contracts for the building have been let, orders for the machinery have been placed and the expectation is that the new plant will be turning out greenhouse materials in April or, at latest, in May.

A neat monthly calendar is sent to 100 of her customers by M. C. Gunterberg, who says it appears to be a good way of letting people know their patronage is appreciated.

On the first day the temperature dropped below zero this year, Winter-son's Seed Store began the distribution of its 1914 spring catalogue. Hardy perennials are featured.

One of last week's absentees was Al. Lehman, who has charge of the violet department of the E. C. Amling Co.

After a trip that began during the holidays, Richard Parker reached the store of the A. L. Randall Co., February 9, reporting prosperous business conditions all through the southwest.

When Sam Pearce removed to his new place on Higgins avenue, the business at his old stand, 2135 Clybourn avenue, was continued by his old employee, August Dressel, in partnership with William Graff, for a long time employed by O. J. Friedman. The firm name is Graff & Dressel. They are reported as doing nicely.

From Santa Monica, Cal., comes word that Leonard Kill, formerly well known in the trade at Chicago, has been appointed as a member of the board of park commissioners.

The details with regard to the closing of the Jegen store appear under the heading "Business Embarrassments," on another page in this issue. One of the interesting points is that some of the growers appear to have been trying the experiment of selling direct.

The monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club February 5, while there was no special order of business, was thoroughly enjoyed by the members present because of the faculty possessed by President French of bringing out interesting discussion of the everyday trade topics. It was decided that a rose show, similar to the recent carnation

The Eastern Market.

Heavy receipts of daffodils and sweet peas caused a fall in prices last week. The market was unable to consume at fair prices all the daffs and peas that were offered. Daffs fell sharply, while the shorter grades of peas suffered most. The quantity of both these flowers that was sold was surprisingly large. Daffodils always are popular. The heavy cut so early in the season is due to the use of French bulbs, which force earlier than the Dutch. The orchid or Spencer type of sweet peas have so far been preferred to the winter-flowering sorts, although all varieties are in favor.

The wintery western weather has cut down production, putting activity into the market that was missing a week ago. There is an excellent amount of business, with prices fairly easy. Beauties have become more plentiful. White roses have been scarcer than any of the other smaller-flowered sorts. Carnations have developed more splits than at any time this season. The crops are not heavy and prices on good stock are a little firmer. Valley has been dull and rather hard to sell. Paper Whites and freesias are in good demand, but tulips are not. Violets are depressed. Orchids are less in evidence than a week ago, but Cattleya Schröderiana is coming in more freely, Cattleya Trianae less so. The pink spray orchid, Oncidium Schillerianum, makes an excellent foil for Oncidium splendidum. Dendrobium formosum can be had in ford. Mr. Stroud told his hearers that a prize had been offered at Cleveland for the best keeping vase of carnations. Then the competitors, some four or five vases, had been selected from their fellows, from all over the hall. It was found that these vases of fresh looking flowers were all of different varieties and that all were grown by the same exhibitor.

Discussing this point, the keeping quality of carnations, after the meeting, Arthur A. Niessen said that three-quarters of the commercial value of a carnation lies in its lasting qualities. Mr. Niessen thought that culture, variety and weather conditions are the factors responsible for durability in carnation blooms, taken, probably, in the order named.

A point brought out by R. T. Brown, in his admirable address, was that carnation blooms would reach the market in better condition and prove more remunerative were they graded more carefully and packed singly, like roses or chrysanthemums. This, he said, is especially true of the better grades. The wholesalers seem pretty evenly divided on this point, Edward Reid believing the plan worthy of trial, as so many flowers are broken when tied too near the heads; he thinks that if packed singly more care would be taken. Alvah R. Jones, on the other hand, doubted whether carnations could be as well handled by the wholesalers when packed singly as they can be in bunches. Mr. Jones' idea is that speed is a modern necessity, so that unless the carnations are sold in the original boxes, like dahlias, too much time would be wasted handling them unbunched.

The only way to decide the point is to try it.

Two Sixty-six.

No. 266 is given by John Cook, the famous Baltimore rosarian, to his seedling red rose that bids fair to become the rival of Prince E. C. d'Arenberg and of Richmond. No. 266 is, to judge solely from the flower, one of the most beautiful red roses ever seen here. Color, form, size, fragrance, foliage and stem all are worthy of admiration in the single flower shown by Charles E. Meehan this week. It is understood that No. 266 will be sent out next season. Its future will be watched with interest.

The sunny face of Paul Berkowitz has reappeared in town. Mr. Berkowitz returned February 9 from a six weeks' western trip. The new Ward basket, offered by Mr. Berkowitz for the first time, made a hit. You know the rose Mrs. Aaron Ward? Well, the basket is colored to match that rose.

The M. Rice Co. notices a heavier demand for Easter plant baskets this season, due perhaps to the beautiful duotone effects that are being offered.

Casper and George L. Pennock, Lansdowne, Pa., have sent some flowers of a light pink sport of My Maryland to S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

Joseph G. Neidinger has just issued a handsomely illustrated catalogue. Baskets occupy the place of honor, while a special note on the cover calls attention to the new magnolia wreaths.

The Market.

The drop in the temperature this week caused a shortening up of the supply of nearly all flowers. Violets and sweet peas are bringing up to $7.50 per thousand, while a good quality of Spencer type is bringing $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Golden Spur jonquils are bringing $3 to $4 per hundred and are in fair demand. The supply of Easter lilies is about enough to meet immediate needs. Carnations are still bringing $4 and $5 per hundred. The holding up of the price is due in part to the shortage of roses. Ward and Taft roses are to be had in small quantities only and those American Beauty roses now to be had are of poor quality. Gardenias are in fair supply at

Club Meeting.

There will be little or no excitement attending the annual election of officers of the Florists' Club of Washington at the March meeting, due to the fact that there will be no contest except for the office of vice-president. As a result of the nominations made at the February meeting, George H. Cooke will be president for the ensuing twelve months; William F. Gude, treasurer; Elmer C. Mayberry, secretary, and Theodore Diedrich and Adolph Gude, trustees. For the position of vice-president the names of O. A. C. Oehmler and R. L. Jenkins have been presented. William F. Gude addressed the club on the subject of the William R. Smith memorial. He made no definite statements in this regard, but from the trend of his remarks it would appear that he favored a building which would be the home of the S. A. F.

The names of H. Witt and J. Hamlin, of Silver Hill, Md., the latter a fellow of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, were submitted for membership and the applications turned over to a committee of which Messrs. Diedrich, Jenkins and Oehmler are the members. A letter from George W. Hess, acknowledging the receipt of a congratulatory letter from the club, was read. A vase of Hadley roses was exhibited by A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., and a certificate of merit was awarded the growers.

Various Notes.

George H. Cooke did all of the decorating incident to the inauguration of Governor Stuart, of Virginia, at Richmond, last week. It required 300 American Beauty roses, 600 Killarney roses, 600 carnations, 75 bunches of Adiantum Farleyense and about 75 gardenias to complete the decorations. Mr. Cooke will duplicate the work at a reception to be given by Governor Stuart February 20.

Among the visitors last week was William E. McKissick, formerly manager of the local house of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., who is now manager for the Leo Niessen Co., of Baltimore.

M. J. McCabe, of Good Hope, D. C., is producing some good snapdragon and is showing Victoria with spikes approximating nine inches in length and stems five feet long. His carnation crop is also well worth mentioning. He expects soon to put in 15,000 plants and will offer the cut flowers to the trade. Mr. McCabe has eighteen houses at the present time, five being given over to carnations, four to roses, one to gardenias, two to Easter lilies, and the others to miscellaneous flowers.

The Du Pont Flower Shop was incorporated last Saturday by Elmer C.

The supply of flowers for St. Valentine's day should easily be sufficient. Large quantities of violets are coming in and it will require some special occasion such as this to clean them up even for a day. The sweet pea cut is large and most of the blooms are of the highest quality. Orchids and valley, judging from advance orders, are particularly in demand for St. Valentine's day. Red rose receipts are rather limited,

The Market.

Trade, for the most part, has been slow and unsatisfactory. Though the florists have been busy decorating for balls and various affairs, much of this work has been donated for charity balls. Carnations thus far are slow in blooming. The best roses are not selling fast. Our wholesalers are selling more short roses to be used for funeral work.

Sweet peas are of good quality. Daffodils are abundant and selling fast. Tulips, freesias, narcissi and hyacinths are selling well, also. The fad for the spring flowers is keeping such potted plants as primroses, cyclamens and azaleas in the background. The market for violets is quiet at present. The double violets are not so scarce as the singles. Calla lilies are showing perfect blooms.

country. The contract will be let within a few days.

Those who know that O. W. Frese celebrated a birthday anniversary January 29 never would suspect that it was his forty-eighth, except for the fact that some may recall that Mr. Frese has been connected with the cut flower business in Chicago for thirty-five years.

Having severed his connection with A. L. Vaughan & Co., Frank Farley is understood to have gone to Indianapolis to take a retail position. Mr. Vaughan has not yet filled the vacancy.

The establishments of the John C. Moninger Co. and Adam Schillo Lumber Co. were for a time threatened by a fire that destroyed a grain elevator near them February 7.

The material used for decorating both the Chicago and the New York automobile shows was supplied by L. Baumann & Co.

The conservatory at the rear of F. O. Franzen's new store, at 5319 North Clark street, of Moninger construction, already has proved too small and will be extended when the weather permits.

Des Moines, Ia.—In order to get people acquainted with its new retail store the Iowa Seed Co. recently advertised that on a certain day a goldfish would be given free to every visitor who brought in a clipping of the ad with the visitor's name and address written on the margin. There were over 3,000 visitors. After the supply of fish ran out due bills were issued good for a fish at a later date. Charles N. Page says it proved a good scheme to make people talk.

Situation Wanted

Working foreman, honest and reliable man, married, no drinker, with 18 years' best experience in carnations, mums, sweet peas, cyclamens, fine ferns, lilies, bulbs and bedding plants, wants steady position with respectable firm; I am able to take full charge and manage a place successfully; give full particulars. Address No. 463, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

Situation Wanted

15 years in growing carnations, roses, mums and sweet peas, some knowledge of cattleyas; now employed at good wages; can take charge; require at least 30 days' notice; best of references as to character and ability; strictly temperate; age 36, married, one child; American.

Address No. 451, care Florists' Review, Chicago

SITUATION

By working foreman, first-class grower of roses and cut flowers, also good on pot plants; 22 years' experience; age 37, married; reference; good manager; know how and will produce A No. 1 stuff; wages, $20.00 per week and house. Address No. 465, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

HORTICULTURIST SEEKS POSITION

As farm or estate manager. College training and lifelong experience in all branches. In N. W. at present. Distance no objection. Married. References. Address No. 472, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

THREE SPECIAL OFFERS

On account of sickness, will make the three following offers, any one of which will bear investigation—any one of which is a money maker. We have been in business for 30 years; have 15,000 feet of glass in good repair, some only two years old. Same stocked with general assortment of cut flowers and plants. Are near two cemeteries.

FIRST OFFER

Will sell the greenhouses and stock outright for any reasonable offer and give long lease on land.

SECOND OFFER

I will sell the stock and rent greenhouses.

THIRD OFFER

I will sell half interest in both greenhouses and real estate, or half interest in greenhouses and stock alone.

I want to give my whole attention to the store and through it can use all the cut flowers and plants you can raise. Have never yet been able to supply the demand.

Address No. 439, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

TEN PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh is in the midst of a blizzard. The weather last week was not so bad, but business seemed to slump for some reason. Beauties are still scarce, but roses are gradually getting more plentiful, although they are still short of the demand. All other stock is quite plentiful; bulbous stock and violets are a glut, more coming in than the market will take care of. The wholesale houses complained about the slump in trade, which probably was due to larger receipts rather than to a slump in prices.

The retail shops are all looking fine these days. Since they have the baskets with the zinc liners, all are arranging baskets of flowers for window decoration, and there are some fine effects shown.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, February 3. The following officers were elected: President, Neil McCallum; vice-president, E. C. Reineman; secretary, H. P. Joslin, Bellevue, Pa.; treasurer, T. P. Langhans, and assistant secretary, W. A. Clarke.

There were some exhibits of plants and flowers shown by local growers, but the important feature was an illustrated lecture on the practical use of explosives for farming and gardening, by E. Rutledge, Jr., of Coraopolis, Pa. Mr. Rutledge will willingly give this lecture or practical demonstrations to any society within reach of this city, if the society will look after his transportation.

August Frishkorn was scheduled to give a lecture on Dutch bulbs as they are grown, cured and handled in Holland, but A. Colyn, of C. Colyn & Sons, Voorhout, Holland, who is a member of the club, being present, gave a most instructive talk on the subject, as only one who has grown up in the business could do. He explained the business almost from its inception to date, giving much inside information as to why some make failures in growing bulbs in this country and assuring all they should be able to make money growing them.

Various Notes.

The McCallum Co. has leased the building next to its present location and is busy moving. The company will have a more convenient store room for handling its trade, as well as more room for the various side lines of wirework and supplies.

The Homestead Cut Flower Co. has sold its store in Homestead, Pa., to J. M. Johnston, of McKeesport. This will give Mr. Johnston three stores, the other two being at Braddock and McKeesport.

A. C. Miller, who has stores in Homestead and Duquesne, reports trade satisfactory since the first of the month, although January was a little slow. A large part of the business in these towns is funeral work.

W. Drews reports business in Braddock, Pa., booming. He has a large line of funeral work from Braddock and the adjoining towns.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is handling Chas. Koenig's cut of lilacs, which are fine, and some of the finest freesias that ever came into this city.

The house of orchids has been in full crop since December 1, with no appearance of being exhausted.

In the United States District court Charles P. Orr sentenced Edward Schelske to serve sixty days in the Allegheny county jail on indictments charging fraudulent use of the mails. Mr. Schelske, a florist, was alleged to have defrauded dealers all over the country. Clarke.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The demand at the wholesale markets was not so brisk last week; still, a great deal of stock in all grades was consumed. The supply at the wholesale houses was of the best, with hardly any scarcity, except in roses, and they will be along shortly in large supply. We had a few days of extremely cold weather last week that put a stop to transient trade among the downtown florists. Several of our Kirkwood growers had their consignments frozen on the way into town. This week opened clear and cold, just the kind of weather for a good crop of violets, for which the demand will no doubt be greater than ever this year for St. Valentine's day. Some of the wholesalers are booked up heavily for the end of this week, with top prices at 75 cents to $1.00 per hundred for extra fancies.

Roses have been in good demand all week, with no advance in prices over last week's quotations. Carnations have been plentiful and the best stock sold at $3 per hundred in small lots. The quality of these is excellent all through. Fancies in Wards, Beacons and Enchantress are in best demand. The bulbous stock that came in was of good quality and especially so in tulips, valley and Easter lilies. Callas dragged somewhat in demand, but the other stock sold well. Sweet peas are plentiful now and the demand good, with top prices at 75 cents for extra long fancy. These, too, should be in big demand at the end of this week. Asparagus, smilax and ferns are abundant and the demand good.

E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week in the interest of his firm, with good success.

G. M. Thost and his son, of De Soto, Mo., who consign their stock to the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., spent a day in the wholesale district February 5.

S. A. Witt, local manager of the Spencer Heater Co., has returned from a two weeks' trip to headquarters at Scranton, Pa., and his office at 1407 Olive street is now open for business.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has a great many orders booked for violets for St. Valentine's day. Large consignments of these are expected daily this week. Prices are somewhat advanced over last week.

George Angermueller says the demand for supplies for St. Valentine's day has been active all week for both the local and outside trade.

All of our local seedsmen are now busy mailing their spring catalogues.
The recent cold snap made things rather dull in counter sales.

The display rooms of the Kewanee Boiler Co., of Kewanee, Ill., at Twelfth and Olive streets have been done away with, and the office has been moved to 1205 Chemical building, with Otto
Dieckman as manager.

The coldest weather this winter came on short notice February 6 and, with a 40-mile gale blowing all night, taxed the capacity of our local growers' boilers, but no damage was reported, except that a number of consignments came in frozen February 7.

Oliver K. Sanders, manager of the Sanders Nursery's retail store, on Clara avenue, reports a good run of society work of late. C. C. Sanders says he expects a good trade in nursery stock when the weather opens up.

Henry Berning handled a nice lot of bulbous consignments last week, which included Von Sions, jonquils and tulips, all of good quality. The supply promises to be as large for this week.

The County Growers' Association held an interesting meeting February 4 at the Eleven Mile House. President Vennemann presided and some interesting discussions took place. All the officers were present and the attendance was large.

of his own make are having a great run. They are used for table decorations and are quite attractive.

There seems to be some prospect for a fall flower show at present. The publicity committee is, at present, undivided as to the advisability of holding one. The Florists' Club meeting this week will undoubtedly decide the question.

The west end and south end florists are all making attractive St. Valentine's day window displays and expect a large business for that day.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold its regular monthly meeting February 16 at Beers' hotel. The annual banquet will take place sometime this month.

The Tree-Planting League held a meeting last week and decided on the planting of several thousand sycamore and maple trees as soon as the weather opens. The league will be assisted by City Forester Julius Koenig in this work.

The Grand avenue florists are making unusually attractive window displays for St. Valentine's day. Among the most noted are those of M. M. Ayres, R. J. Windler, Schoenle Floral Co. and C. Bergstermann. They all have a number of advance orders booked.

Dwight Davis, our park commissioner, was in Chicago last week showing his skill as a racquet player. With his partner, he won in the doubles.

Albert Gumz, of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., was laid up a few days last week with sickness, but is back again at his post.

opened at the Coliseum February 9, showed some extra fine floral decorations.
The usual bunting decorations were not allowed this year, thanks to Frank Robinson, the manager.

The Florists' Club publicity committee held a special meeting at the home of R. J. Windler, chairman, on Magnolia avenue, February 8. After a good deal of discussion it was decided to canvass the trade in regard to a fall flower show. A full report of this meeting will be made at the club meeting this week.

A number of suburban growers visited the wholesale district last week. They were Geo. Hecht, Paul Scheider, Hugo Werner, W. J. Pilcher, H. Emunds, Edwin Denker, John Connon, Joe Hauser, W. A. Rowe, P. Schneider, Hugo Gross, Geo. Madsen, Geo. Hartman, A. Jablonsky, Jr., G. M. Thost, A. Ahner, A. Meyer and R. Wolzburger. J. J. B.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

The weather lately has been changeable, with little sunshine; stock, therefore, has not been overabundant. Roses are scarce. Killarney and White Killarney are poor at this time of the year. Milady is good, as is also Mrs. Aaron Ward, but Lady Hillingdon is scarce. Carnations are not so good as they have been. The choice crop was cut for McKinley day. Cut white lilac is rather plentiful for so early in the season. Cattleyas are selling well and the supply is good. Lilies of the valley are fine. There is an abundance of bulbous stock, such as tulips, in red, yellow, pink and white, and all varieties of daffodils. Dutch hyacinths are rather scarce as yet. There are a few freesias to be had. Trade, which has been rather quiet since the first of the year, is picking up gradually, and last week was a good, busy week. Flowering plants are moving at a strong pace at present. There are good lilacs, cyclamens, azaleas, a few primroses, potted tulips and daffodils. Boston ferns are also selling well.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was held Tuesday evening, February 3, with a large attendance. Prof. White, of the floricultural department of Cornell University, was present and invited all the members of the club to visit the state florists' convention, to be held in Ithaca next month. Leon Neubeck read a paper on "Fertilizers," which was excellent and started a lengthy discussion. Lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

The new indirect electric lighting system, which was installed in W. J. Palmer & Son's branch store recently, is giving splendid satisfaction.

Special sales for Saturdays are quite the thing now, since bulbous stock and violets are plentiful.

William L. Keller and George B. Hart, of Rochester, called on the trade here recently.

The trade congratulates William F. Kasting upon his appointment as postmaster. His desk and office were literally loaded with floral tributes from his many friends.

S. A. Anderson had an elegant window display last week. It consisted of daffodils in pots with yellow pot covers and fronds of polypodium mingled here and there. The firm has been executing some fine table decorations recently. One was made up of cattleyas and oncidiums. Another was a French creation of a center standard from which were suspended golden baskets filled with red roses and white lilacs.

Le Roy Bates, of Akron, N. Y., was a visitor in the city recently.

Joseph Sangster, of Jefferson street, showed a fine St. Valentine's day window. The main feature was an immense red heart pierced by a correspondingly large arrow. Cyclamen plants are selling well with him.

Recent visitors were R. Shoch, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; Stephen Green, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Mr. Smith, of W. J. Boas & Co., Philadelphia; William Lake and M. Adler, of New York city. R. A. S.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

THE onion set situation at Chicago has changed little in the last couple of weeks; yellows are a little scarcer and reds a little easier, that is all.

FEBRUARY has started well for the mail-order seedsmen. In a majority of cases orders are as numerous and as large as in other years, but the days of phenomenal increases for the older houses appear to be past.

BURGLARS entered the seed store of Leifer Bros., at Little Rock, Ark., on the night of January 28, and took the loose change left in the two cash registers, and a few miscellaneous articles. Charles Leifer discovered the burglary when he opened up the store and noticed the panels in the rear door were broken out.

C. E. KENDEL, secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, says he believes practically every seedsman will favor putting seeds into parcel post on the same basis that books were put in by a recent departmental order taking effect March 15. This would let parcels of eight ounces or less go at the present flat rate.

As security for a loan of $1,500,000 the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title & Trust Co. covering its warehouse and the tract of ground, 78x263 feet, at the southwest corner of South Clark and Sixteenth streets, and the site of its new warehouse at West Thirty-fifth street and the drainage canal. The loan is for twenty years and bears five per cent interest.

THE January seed business did not, as a rule, break any records. Of course some of the younger western and southern houses got good increases, but the old, well established concerns had only about the usual run of January business in spite of generally mild weather. Some of the catalogues were later than usual this season, which is a reason why mail orders were not unusually numerous.

THE market for gladiolus bulbs is unsettled; really, it could be said there is no market. The Hollanders are quoting such prices that buyers who expect to resell are afraid to accept offers. The larger American growers feel that as the planting season approaches the market will settle down, that prices will become stable and that a good business will be done. The prediction is made by those in close touch with the situation that there will be no surplus, except, perhaps, of America.

WHILE the seed trade's advertising in the general magazines has decreased year after year until this season it is entirely negligible, the special publications are getting a heavier run of seed advertising than ever before. Country Gentleman seems to be especially favored and it will be interesting to note if its high priced space will pull any better than the other high priced publications coming from the same presses. The full back page of Country Gentleman, printed in colors, was used last week by Burpee and the week before by Henderson. Both these houses appear to have increased their advertising appropriations this season.THE United States Seed Co., of San Antonio, Tex., has obtained a permit to do business in the state of Missouri and will establish an office in St. Louis soon.THE rainfall in the Lompoc valley of California to January 26 was 18.46 inches. All along the coast reports indicate damage to crops by excessive rains.THE Hubert Bulb Co., of Norfolk, Va., has been awarded the contract for supplying bulbs, seeds, plants and ornamental trees to the United States Naval hospital at Norfolk.THERE are about 100 Holland bulb travelers abroad in the land and there is not one of them who will admit that business is not the best ever. It seems to be against the ethics of the guild ever to acknowledge that orders are less easily come at.A UNIQUE feature of the 1914 general catalogue of A. C. Kendel, Cleveland, now on the press, is a garden record blank. Pages bound in the book are appropriately headed and ruled for a complete record of one's gardening operation: varieties, dates of planting, distances apart, dates of maturity, production, and other details. C. E. Kendel believes that the result will be that those who receive the catalogue will keep it not only through the season but from year to year.BILLS ON SEED POSTAGE.The following is the amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill offered by Senator Kenyon for the purpose of putting seeds and plants into the parcel post:AMENDMENTIntended to be proposed by Mr. Kenyon to the bill (H. R. 11338) making appropriations for the service of the Postoffice Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, and for other purposes, viz.: On page 26, after line 3, insert the following:That hereafter fourth-class mail matter shall embrace seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants, and the provision contained in the Act approved August 24, 1912, continuing said articles under the provisions fixed by section 482 of the Postal Laws and Regulations, is hereby repealed.For the same purpose several bills have been introduced in the lower house, that of Mr. Dillon, the last one so far reported, being as follows:A BILL, H. R. 12745,Permitting seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants to be placed under parcel post laws and regulations.Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following provision contained in section 8 of the parcel post Act, approved August 24, 1912, namely: "That this reading as follows: "The postage on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants shall be charged at the rate of 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, subject in all other respects to the existing law," be, and the same are, repealed.

Sec. 2. That hereafter the postage rate on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants shall be governed by the parcel post rates.

All the bills to put seeds and plants into the parcel post zone rate system have been referred to the committees on postoffice and post roads. No doubt a public hearing will be granted before any bill is recommended for passage.

CANNERS USE MANY SEEDS.

The importance of the canners' trade to the seed sellers was shown by W. C. Langbridge, of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., in his address as president of the Machinery and Supplies Association, at the opening of last week's canners' convention at Baltimore.

"While I have no official statistics at hand," said Mr. Langbridge, "I am informed that twenty years ago the entire output of canned peas in the United States did not exceed 250,000 cases annually, or 6,000,000 cans, while in 1913 the pack was nearly 9,000,000 cases or upward of 200,000,000 cans. The corn pack of 1913, which was the smallest in many years, and little more than half that of 1912, amounted to 7,300,000 cases or 175,000,000 cans. The tomato pack of 1913 was 14,200,000 cases or 342,545,000 cans. These are the three leading items in canned vegetables, but many more millions of cases of miscellaneous items were packed."

Surely, to produce 200,000,000 cans of peas requires some little seed.

Mr. Langbridge, who is widely known in the seed trade because of his travels in the interest of the Jerome B. Rice Co., was unanimously reelected president of the Machinery and Supplies Association.

GALLOWAY ON FREE SEEDS.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture B. T. Galloway recently explained to the house committee on agriculture the reason for recommending the discontinuance of the congressional free seed distribution. The new estimate was $175,000 for new and rare seeds. Of this, $100,000 will be appropriated for the purchase and distribution of new and rare seeds, $55,000 for the investigation and improvement of grasses, clover and other forage crops, and $20,000 for the propagation and testing of rare and new seeds. In this item were consolidated the dry-land seed, the forage crop work and the congressional seed work. He said the congressional seed distribution had been handled for ten or fifteen years "so as to make it a credit to the department." The department had tried to get the best seeds available and he thought it had succeeded. "The seeds we are sending out are good, as good as any that can be obtained in the country," he said. The time had come to decide whether it was proper to continue the work or whether enough of that work had been done and it was wise to turn the money into some other field of activity. A statement filed by Dr. Galloway said:

"We desire to have the committee understand that we are not urging this new plan of handling the seed work. We believe the work that has been going on in the distribution of miscellaneous vegetable and flower seeds

The "SPENCER" Type of Sweet Peas

Burpee's Unequaled List for 1914—Arranged Alphabetically, Choicest Re-selected Stocks Grown on "Floradale Farm."

SPENCER SWEET PEAS are a great specialty with us! We were the first to grow the seed in America—the stock having been entrusted to us before introduction, even in England, of the original Countess Spencer. We have grown "the original Beauty" and its many "sportive" children with painstaking care each season since. There are but few other growers,—either in England or America,—who can supply an equal assortment of True RE-SELECTED "SPENCERS" that are uniformly of such choice quality. Seedsmen and planters generally can see how superior our stocks now are by the trials at FORDHOOK FARMS next June or July, while those who may be in California are invited also to inspect the growing crops at our FLORADALE FARM in the beautiful Lompoc Valley. Every planter's garden, however, is really a trial ground and we shall be quite content if any "Doubting Thomas" will send us only a portion of his order and note the difference in character of flowers produced!

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1914

The most complete catalogue published for Market Gardeners, Truckers and Florists. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye © placed after what is known to be best. In addition full descriptions are given many new and most valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1914 contains 148 pages with hundreds of halftones and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalogue we have condensed an experience of thirty-five years both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market), you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalogue, but if you are a private planter please do not ask for a copy, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Trucker and Florist.

"SEEDS THAT GROW"

serves a useful purpose. It was thought from the expressions made last year in Congress that the time had arrived when this type of work might be abandoned and another line inaugurated. If the committee desires to continue the work as formerly conducted, the department will exercise every precaution to have the work done well. The work is now on a good business basis. The best seeds obtainable are secured and every precaution is adopted in order that only good seeds may be sent out."

KELWAY ON BOARD.

Kelway & Son, the well-known English seed growers, have addressed the following letter to a number of leading American seed and nursery firms:

We should like to call the attention of leading American seedsmen and nurserymen to the Anglo-American Exposition, London, 1914.

The exposition is planned to commemorate 100 years of peace between, and of progress in the arts of, our respective countries, and it is hoped to bring about an adequate representation of American and British horticulture in the beautiful grounds and buildings of the White City, near London.

Owing to the connection of our firm with the seed trade of your country and to the fact that our Mr. James Kelway is a member of the executive of the horticulture, arboriculture and forestry committee, we feel particular interest in sending this reminder, and we hope that you will wish to be represented by an exhibit, which we feel sure will be heartily welcomed on this side.

The address of the American Executive Committee is: Anglo-American Exposition, Woolworth Building, New York City.

ANOTHER BILL TO LOWER RATES.

Representative Tribbitt, of Georgia, has introduced a bill in Congress to reduce the postage rates on agricultural, horticultural and dairy products by applying the parcel post to such articles. The bill authorizes the post-office department to transport as mail, parcels of agricultural, horticultural, dairy and poultry products up to fifteen pounds in weight, at the rate of 2 cents for the first pound or fraction thereof and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction of a pound. The carrying of such products is to be extended to all mail routes, on trains, in cities and towns, star routes and rural routes, including all mails now being operated within the United States.

MR. LEONARD'S HOBBY.

When the seedsman visitor at the Chicago headquarters of the Leonard Seed Co. inquires for the chief, the chances are better than even that he will be piloted upstairs to a big room made small by the fact that it is almost completely filled by row upon row of sweet corn drying on hangers. There, in a space by the window that gives him just enough room to work, S. F. Leonard is busy day after day sorting and resorting the stock seed ears of his new Narrow-grained Evergreen corn.

It is so much the usual thing for the man with the novelty to be all wound up with it that the visitor is quite prepared to find Mr. Leonard more deeply interested in it than in most other things. But Mr. Leonard is not the only one interested in the Narrow-grained Evergreen; over 100 canners are planting it for trial this season and the quantity offered for sale was quickly taken up. It looks like a good thing for many, and when W. W. Tracy visited Mr. Leonard's selecting room a few weeks ago he picked out an ear that he said was, he thought, the most perfect he ever had seen. That ear now is on exhibition in the Cannery Association laboratory museum in Washington.

It was only a few years ago that Mr. Leonard ran across some narrow-grained ears of Stowell's Evergreen. It seemed to him to meet the needs of the canners, as told to him by some of his customers, so he began selecting to purify and fix the type. Excellent progress has been made and this year the crop was approximately 500,000 ears, all close to the type. Mr. Leonard has personally selected those closest to about twenty-four to the ear, as against about fourteen rows in Stowell's. The kernels not only are long but are remarkably free from starch, one of the disadvantages of Stowell's Evergreen from a canner's point of view. Mr. Leonard thinks the narrow-grained strain will be widely used by canners who have been using the old type of Evergreen and that it will also be used by many who have used Country Gentleman. The latter is not so easily placed with farmers in some sections, because Evergreen yields more heavily and, making a larger stalk, leaves the farmer more feed than he gets from Country Gentleman.

PREPARING FOR CONVENTION.

The American Seed Trade Association will hold its annual meeting in Washington this summer, and the local Chamber of Commerce, which is making arrangements to entertain the organization, has made a $100 contribution to the fund to pay for the incidental expenses of the convention, which meets June 23, 24 and 25. F. W. Bolignano, the local seedsman, who is a member of the chamber, is on the executive committee of the association.

Vegetable Forcing

LONG RADISHES FOR FORCING.

Please tell me which is the best long radish for forcing. C. B. G.

Leicle and Long Scarlet Short Top are both excellent long radishes for forcing. C. W.

TOMATOES FROM CUTTINGS.

I have some tomato plants which I rooted from top cuttings taken from my early ones, which were in full crop. Will these plants be as good to put on the benches as the ones grown from seed? W. F. G.

Tomato plants from cuttings will come into bearing earlier than those raised from seed. However, they have not the vigor or productive qualities of seedlings. The same holds good of cucumbers. The fruit will average considerably smaller than that produced on seedlings. C. W.

SWEET POTATOES.

Will you be so kind as to give me a few hints in regard to raising sweet potatoes in the greenhouses, so I can propagate cuttings from them? Please advise as to whether or not the tubers could be started under a light bench; name the best varieties and the time to start them; in fact, give all directions. There is a big demand for sweet potatoes here and, as I have had no experience with them, the information will be greatly appreciated. F. W. M.

Sweet potatoes cannot be successfully started under a greenhouse bench. They should be started on the bench itself, or in a hotbed. The last named is a satisfactory and generally adopted plan of propagation, as the stimulus from the warm manure will soon start a nice root action and growths will speedily follow. Lay the tubers in a single layer all over the bench (one with some heating pipes below will be the most satisfactory) and then cover with three or four inches of light compost. Soon a thick mat of slips will cover the bed. These are carefully removed from the tubers and used to plant out in the fields, eighteen to twenty-four inches apart in the rows, running the rows four feet apart.

The smallest sized slips give just as satisfactory results as the larger ones. Two crops of cuttings can be taken off, and a bushel of roots will yield 2,500 to 5,000 cuttings. Jersey Sweet and Nansemond are preferred in the cooler northern states as being good keepers,

Album OF Designs

[SECOND EDITION]

It sold so much better than was expected that the First Edition, intended to last a year, was sold out in eight months.

This Album was published in response to many requests from Florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book to be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it is not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it will be when ready for use. With this Album you can show the finished work, in beautifully printed pictures.

The Album has been THOROUGHLY REVISED for the Second Edition and contains a large number of designs not shown in the wonderfully successful First Edition.

NINETY-SIX PAGES, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear.

75c PER COPY POSTPAID
$6.00 PER DOZEN BY EXPRESS

The price has not been raised for the Second Edition, although everybody says the First Edition was worth more money, and this is a better book in every way.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

The Outdoor Workshop Where the Horticultural Ornamentation of the Panama-Pacific Exposition Is Being Prepared.

ORNAMENTING AN EXPOSITION.

The work of beautifying the grounds of the 1915 exposition at San Francisco is well under way. A glimpse of the place where the greater part of the work is done, showing how far the work has progressed, may be obtained from the accompanying illustration. In one corner of the Presidio military reservation, just south of San Francisco, John McLaren and his assistants are experimenting and planning, and there they are growing the trees, shrubs and plants with which they intend to make the horticultural effects of the exposition the greatest ever produced. An outline of their plans was given in the nursery department of The Review for December 18, 1913. A more detailed account is impossible at this early date, for experiments are still going on and the plans will not be fixed until the planting is completed.

Two interesting features in the operations at this horticultural workshop may be noted in the illustration. One is the manner in which the large specimen trees are boxed. The trees are first side-boxed, and after the roots have been cut three inches of space is allowed between the ball and the sides of the box. This three inches of space is filled with good surface soil in order to start root action. The plants are mulched and watered for a period of from four to six months, and then the bottom of the box is put on. This method has been found quite successful in transplanting large trees.

The other feature is the columns or pillars of living green foliage which are being attempted. Several of these in the experimental stage are shown in the illustration. These columns are faced with long, narrow boxes of soil. In order that the soil may not fall out when the boxes are placed in position, a wire screen is fastened over it and the young shoots trained through the network. In order, too, that the soil may not be washed out by watering in the usual way, the water is allowed to seep through from the back, or base, of the boxes. How successful this plan will be cannot be yet determined, but no efforts are spared in the attempt to produce the unique effects which will be possible by this method.

We shipped cut buds to New York, Chicago and many other cities. The rose was the hit of Fifth avenue and its fame spread throughout the country, resulting in a demand for the buds in every store that caters to the good trade. It is in great request for corsage bouquets, Colonial bouquets, boutonnieres, etc. Appreciating that because of our distance from the largest markets we can not handle the demand for cut buds, we have prepared to supply young plants to growers who know a money-making novelty when they see it.

Business is only fair and collections continue to be troublesome. One retailer said he had more than twice as much on his books this year as last, although the total amount of business done was not up to last year's record. The tie-up on the railways continues and it proves a great hindrance to business, as much of the freight and express is held up.

attractive list of their roses and other specialties, grown at Montebello. The packing season is now in full swing there and keeps all busy.

Jacob Dieterich received a carload of Japanese stock recently, including excellent aspidistras and prostrate junipers.

C. Winsel reports business improving along all lines and he keeps his trucks busy between the store and his two nurseries, one at Washington street, the other at Montebello.

Theodore Payne has made extensive improvements at his store, including a new balcony, which provides much needed additional space.

Death, the great leveler, visited the home of H. N. Gage February 1, removing one of nature's gentlewomen in the person of Mrs. Gage. I am sure that nothing that has happened for many years has cast such a gloom over our market as this sad event, and the world is the poorer for the loss of a true woman. A devoted mother to her child, a helpmate in the truest sense of that good old word to her husband and a loving companion to her parents, Adah Littel Gage will long be remembered and mourned by them. Knowing her as we all did, it is impossible to do justice to her splendid and noble character. Personally I can only offer the sincerest sympathy of which I am capable to Mr. Gage and Mr. and Mrs. Littel, in the hope that time will soon soften their great affliction. Mrs. Gage was 29 years of age. The funeral, February 3, was largely attended and many striking and beautiful pieces were sent by friends.

The usual monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held at Kruckeberg's hall February 3. The attendance was not as good as usual, and this was unfortunate, as the paper, or rather informal talk, by D. W. Coolidge, of Pasadena, on "Tropical Fruits in California," was a most interesting and instructive one. Mr. Coolidge pointed out how few of the really tropical species and varieties are really suitable for this climate, and at the same time he recommended others of a hardier type, such as the feijoa. There was an interesting discussion afterward, in which many of the members took part. A proposal to lower the dues of the society was held over for fuller discussion and a motion to adjourn was carried earlier than usual.

Walter Armacost & Co. are sending in exceedingly good winter sweet peas, in a number of colors. Those in the rose-pink and salmon shades are particularly fine. They are of Zvolanek's famous types of winter Spencers. Some elegant Lilium Harrisii are also coming from this firm.

T. F. M. Williamson keeps up an elegant window show at the corner of Figueroa and Washington streets and says he is well satisfied with business this season. These window displays are perhaps the best form of advertising and Mr. Williamson has kept it up ever since he started business.

J. W. Wolters' store was unusually attractive last week, the window being finely decorated with a number of tree branches, such as almond, peach and cherry.

The Los Angeles Flower Market has fitted up the new store in fine shape and both C. Morton and F. Sperry expressed themselves as more than pleased with business done so far.

Business conditions are about the same as last reported. There is a daily clean-up in all lines. Roses are coming in a little better in quantity as well as in quality; a few days of sunshine have wrought wonders. Carnations are still scarce, with a steady demand. Valley has been exceptionally fine this season. Orchids are plentiful, especially cattleyas. Easter lilies have moved well this season. Callas, while rather scarce, have been used considerably. Tulips, narcissi, freesias, mignonette and daffodils move the best of anything and are used a great deal in table decorating. White lilac, while scarce, has proved a good seller.

claim of overvaluation. Mr. Bodley is at a loss what to do, as he has improvements and considerable glass on the land, and to stock up now might incur a large loss if the deal goes through.

A. Byron has the finest double violets in this section, which are eagerly snapped up by particular customers.

Mid-year graduations in the high schools took place last week and created a large demand for flowers. The special inducements offered by some of the florists to secure class bouquet contracts cannot be too harshly condemned, as one florist said he lost money on every order taken. E. R. C.

Rahn & Herbert Co. is said to be using with excellent satisfaction a new pot washing machine invented by C. S. Fowler, and which is to be manufactured and put on the market by the Fowler-Hotchkiss Co. It is stated that the success of the machine results from the unique way in which water is carried to the inside of the pot, and to the character and durability of the brushes, which clean the inside and outside of the pot at the same time, with as great rapidity as the operator is capable of maintaining. Rahn & Herbert Co. operates its machine with water power, but an electric motor can be used for propulsion, and hand power machines will be manufactured.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Since the last writing a shortage of stock has changed into a serious oversupply. Business has fallen off to a marked degree in the last ten days, while a few days of bright weather have increased the cut of all kinds of blooms. Much bulbous stock is now on the market and helps to make an oversupply. Potted plants are moving well, as there is no great quantity of this stock procurable. Carnations are of poor quality. Many of the growers report a large percentage of splits, Beacon being particularly bad in this respect.

Various Notes.

A. A. Hinz has returned from his trip through California, having had an exceedingly pleasant time.

The Florists' Club's social night, January 29, was well attended. The evening was spent at cards and refreshments were served.

Mr. Welfare, lately of Chicago, is visiting a brother in this city. He expects to locate in this vicinity if suitable arrangements can be made. He has had several years of experience in the retail business. J. L. S.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE death of Aldert Keessen, Jr., the veteran nurseryman of Aalsmeer, Holland, is noted in this week's obituary column.

J. H. CHATLIN, representing the Southern Nursery Co., of Winchester, Tenn., was a visitor at Paducah, Ky., recently.

NOTICE of the death of Michael McNicholas, a retired nurseryman of Geneva, N. Y., will be found in this week's obituary column.

WILLIAM A. PETERSON, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, was one of the originators and pushers of the "Go to Church Sunday" wave that swept over the country two weeks ago.

THE Stamford Seed & Nursery Co., of Stamford, Conn., has filed articles of incorporation with a capital of $6,000. The officers are: President, George W. Woundy, of Stamford; secretary, Benjamin H. Mead, of New Canaan, and treasurer, George B. Cannon, of Stamford.

WILLIAM C. BARRY was reelected president of the Western New York Horticultural Society for the twenty-fourth consecutive term. John Hall was reelected secretary and treasurer for the twenty-fifth term, and Samuel Fraser, of Geneseo, and F. H. Lattin, of Albion, were elected vice-presidents.

A NUMBER of nurserymen are on the program of the meeting of the Texas State Horticultural Society to be held February 19 and 20 at Dallas, Tex. Among them are J. W. Stubenrauch, of Mexia, who will deliver a paper on "The Peach," W. B. Munson, of Denison, who will speak on "Recent Developments in the Grape Industry in Texas," L. N. Dalmont, Plainview, with a paper on "Horticultural Conditions on the Plains," and J. B. Baker, of Fort Worth, who will give "Practical Suggestions on Growing Roses for the Home." E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinney, will present the report of the delegates to the International Dry Farming Congress and the American Pomological Society.

CONNECTICUT ASSOCIATION.

Annual Meeting.

The Connecticut Nurserymen's Association met at the Hotel Bond, Hartford, Conn., February 4, for the annual business meeting and election of officers. Plans were discussed for the entertainment of the New England Nurserymen's Association, which will meet at the Hotel Bond, February 24 and 25. President Burroughs called the meeting to order at 11 o'clock and gave an interesting address on nursery interests of the state. Three new members were admitted, as follows: Walter E. Campbell, of the Elm City Nursery, New Haven; G. H. Hollister and Ed. A. Brassill, Hartford.

Dr. William E. Britton, of New Haven, state pomologist, spoke on the desirability of uniform laws for the investigation of shipments of nursery stock between states. President Burroughs read an interesting paper on the first nursery in the United States, which was located at Flushing, L. I., and was established in 1730. Charles Adams, of Springfield, spoke on the coming meeting of the New England Nurserymen's Association in this city. Following the business session luncheon was served at the Hotel Bond.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected: President—T. E. Burroughs, of Deep River, reelected.

Vice-President—Charles Turner, of Hartford.

Secretary—F. L. Thomas, of Manchester, reelected.

Treasurer—W. W. Hunt, of Hartford, reelected.

President Burroughs appointed the following committees:

Legislative—E. F. Coe, of New Haven; J. R. Barnes, of Yalesville; Stephen Hoyt, of New Canaan.

Executive—C. H. Sierman, of Hartford; W. W. McCartney, of New Haven; Gustav H. Minge, of Hartford.

Entertainment—W. W. Hunt, of Hartford; Charles Turner, of Hartford; C. R. Burr, of Manchester.

DAMAGES FOR REFUSING TREES.

The general rule of law that when one who has contracted to buy goods announces in advance of delivery that he will not receive them, the seller cannot recover the full contract price, holding the goods subject to the buyer's order, and is limited to a claim for damages for breach of contract, is held by the New Mexico Supreme court, in the case of the Roswell Nursery Co. vs. Mielenz, 137 Pacific Reporter 579, not to apply to trees which have been specially prepared for the buyer and are practically useless in the seller's hands. The court said: "The plaintiff had received an order for certain fruit trees 1 and 2 years old and, before the desire of defendant to change or modify the order was received, had ordered a part of the trees from another nurseryman and had dug up other trees from his own nursery, cutting them back and putting them in the heeling ground ready for shipment. It also appears that undisputed testimony to the effect that inability to deliver the trees would result in their total loss, was introduced. Under such circumstances we do not think the general principle should apply, but, on the other hand, that the case falls more fairly within the exception generally invoked in the case of manufactured articles." S.

A NURSERYMAN'S VIEW.

After writing to the postmaster general regarding the extension of the parcel post rules so that they will apply to "seeds, bulbs, cuttings, scions, roots and plants," we have had in reply from the third assistant postmaster general a letter which reads in part:

"In answer to your letter of the second instant, which the postmaster general has referred to me, I have to inform you that the act of July 24, 1888, fixes the special rate of postage of 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof on parcels of seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants, and the parcel post law provides that it shall not in any way affect such special rate. It is understood that this provision was inserted in the parcel post law

Polish Privet (Ligustrum Pollshi)

A NEW HARDY VARIETY FOR THE NORTH

Introduced by IRVIN INGELS (Nurseryman), La Fayette, Illinois

Block of LIGUSTRUM POLISHI from hardwood cuttings, planted April, 1913. The identical stock offered, 18 to 24-inch, two or more branches, $1.50 per 10; $12.50 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Price of hardwood cuttings on application.

Imported from Poland, Russia, by the Iowa State College over twenty years ago. The two original plants may yet be seen growing on the Exp. Grounds of the College at Ames, Iowa.

Tested out for twelve years at the Nebraska State College, and pronounced absolutely hardy.

Was not injured in the least by the winter of 1911-12, when every other variety in existence was severely injured, and in many localities killed outright.

Points of merit possessed by no other variety yet introduced:—

EXTREME HARDINESS—VIGOROUS AND DENSE GROWTH—DARK RICH GREEN FOLIAGE—NEARLY EVERGREEN—HOLDS COLOR TO END OF THE SEASON—IDEAL FOR TOPIARY DESIGNS—TESTED FOR HARDINESS IN ILLINOIS, IOWA AND NEBRASKA—EASIEST OF ALL PRIVETS TO GROW FROM HARDWOOD CUTTINGS.

Interested parties should send for our POLISH PRIVET CIRCULAR, which gives full description and history of this valuable hardy variety, also testimonials from different State Colleges and a number of Hort. Exp. Sta. in the Dominion of Canada, where it is being grown for trial. It gives prices on the different sizes of both one and two-year olds, also hardwood cuttings.

"It has been under observation on our Exp. Grounds for a number of years, and for our conditions has proven hardier than the California Privet, and is to be recommended in preference to it as an ornamental hedge plant for use in the north."—A. T. ERWIN, Iowa State College, Ames.

"I consider it a very valuable privet for the north."—SEYMOUR G. NELSON, of the Swain Nelson & Sons Co., Chicago.

"We consider it as being the best all-round, general purpose hedge for Nebraska conditions; we consider it perfectly hardy."—V. V. WESTGATE, Nebraska State College, Lincoln.

"We find it perfectly hardy, and consider it a most valuable addition to our list of hardy shrubs for hedging."—A. BRYANT & SON, Princeton, Ill.

at the instance of the seedsmen of the country."

Now, why these items should carry a higher rate of postage than other merchandise, at the instance of the seedsmen of the country, we are unable to understand.

Why consideration to all these items should be given simply upon the recommendation of the seedsmen, when they only handle seeds, is another thing that looks "queer," at least to the writer's way of thinking.

There undoubtedly must be a misunderstanding somewhere as to the seedsmen generally having recommended that the rate of postage be held higher on these items than on other merchandise, and an instant's thought convinces one that it is not right, inasmuch as a pound of seeds mailed at the office of anyone in the trade costs as much if to be handed out to a customer one block away, as it would if sent over various lines of railroad to the most distant parts of the country.

We wish to ask every seedsman, nurseryman and florist to write immediately to his congressman and to the postmaster general, asking immediate legislation for the purpose of having the parcel post rates apply to seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants. This is certainly important, and, in justice to both the seller and buyer of such items, an urgent request should be made upon these officials that this error be given prompt legislation and correction.

Valdesian Nurseries,

By Geo. W. Jones.

[The "misunderstanding" is on the part of the writer of the above. At the time the parcel post law was passed the flat rate was lower than the zone rate on the average day's mailing of every seedsman who took the trouble to make an exact comparison. Since that time modifications in the regulations have made the flat rate less advantageous, or even disadvantageous, and it is about to be changed. Several bills for that purpose are pending in Congress.—Ed.]

NOTES FROM AALSMEER.

Aalsmeer, Holland, where, as history boasts, gardeners had already established themselves as early as the seventeenth century, is now one of the most interesting places on earth from a horticultural standpoint, especially to one who receives its products in far-away America. With its canals, dividing all properties there, from which in reality the gardens found their being, it has exceptional economical shipping facilities. Nursery stock is loaded here on boats directly from the packing sheds and transported from there alongside the ocean greyhounds at Rotterdam, where they are taken aboard directly from the holds or decks. This is by far the most direct and economical way possible, compared with other nursery centers. With its new railroad connections, it is now readily accessible at any time, regular boat service augmenting the rail service.

While in the writer's boyhood Aalsmeer was the main source of geraniums, fuchsias and other cheap pot-plants, together with some boxwood and fruit trees, its present specialties are boxwood and lilacs for forcing. A couple of weeks ago I witnessed two auctions of cut lilacs, with a small sprinkling of snowball and Prunus triloba branches, which totaled over 6,000 guilders, or $2,400. This gives an idea of the immense quantities of lilacs grown. I am told that over 6,000,000 branches of lilac are shipped to the social centers of Europe from Aalsmeer alone, finding their way to Constantinople, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Berlin, London, etc.

These lilacs have stems from two and a half feet to four feet long. I have had the pleasure of watching a certain bunch of cut lilac for two weeks, which speaks well for the high keeping qualities of lilacs as cut flowers. It seems that we, with all our roses, carnations, etc., are neglecting this class of flowers, which are of great artistic value to the decorator. Boxwoods and taxus are nowhere to be seen as in Aalsmeer. One finds them there in all their commercial sizes and forms, together with all the curiosities into which they can be formed. Rhododen-the sad duties most of Aalsmeer's hor-

The winter is quite severe and there is general fear not only that the ship-but that some of the stock will have suffered considerably. This is a quite universal opinion in all Europe.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The demand for cut flowers last week showed an increase over the preceding one. It is interesting to note that so far this season business as a whole has been in excess of the corresponding season of a year ago. Funeral work continues active and well distributed, while social demands add to the general run. Preparations for St. Valentine's day were prominent on all sides and numerous special orders for the day were booked early.

Various Notes.

Ernest Carl has the sympathy of a large circle of acquaintances in the death of his wife February 4.

Robert Johnston, with Johnston Bros., who has been on the sick list, is able to be about again.

The new rose, Prince E. C. d'Arenberg, which S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, are introducing, is attracting much attention and florists from all parts of New England and the middle states are visiting the greenhouses.

Cornelius C. Sullivan, with T. O'Connor, had a narrow escape from serious injury February 7. One of the firm's automobiles, in which Mr. Sullivan was riding, collided with another machine.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Solon Astle, dahlia grower of Auburn, in the loss of his wife last week.

James Burke, of Warwick, is on duty again after a serious illness.

Mrs. Timothy L. O'Connor and daughter left last week for a month's stay in the vicinity of Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Fanny Butcher has sold to Eric A. Bonevier the range of greenhouses, with land and buildings, on Pitman street, which the latter has mortgaged back to Mrs. Butcher for $5,000.

The Everett Forestry Co., to be located in this city, filed articles of association February 2 at the office of the secretary of state. The concern is capitalized at $50,000 and is to engage in general forestry, nursery and agricultural work. The incorporators are Charles J. Everett, Hugh F. Cameron and Arthur A. Thomas, all of this city.

G. W. Glines has great success with Carnation Pink Delight, which is more prolific with him than Gloriosa. White Wonder is his most profitable white. One house, 50x300, was recently planted to carnations. Its record for one year reads thus: 2,000 dozen lettuce set out in September and cropped in January; followed by 600 bushels of beet greens cleared by March 1; in turn succeeded by a crop of 900 bushels of Cucumber White Spine and 300 bushels of beet greens. Mr. Glines has about 100,000 square feet of glass in constant use. His health has not been good for some time, but is now improving.

Hub. This year's crop calls for the sowing of a half-ton of beets for greens and the setting out of 5,000 cucumbers of the selected White Spine variety. From seed beds they are potted two in a 5-inch pot and when about a foot high they are planted out, two in a hill.

The hills are four feet apart for spring and three feet apart for fall cropping.

A. A. Pembroke tried the plan of re-planting a house, 60x450, to carnations in the same soil, adding some sheep manure and removing the top. Judging by the heavy crop, it is a success and means a considerable saving in soil and labor. A part of this house is covered in with cheesecloth for the purpose of protection from drafts and makes an ideal propagating place. It does away with a special house and the cuttings make exceptionally fine growth. Pink Delight, considered one of the most difficult to root, has a loss of ten per cent. White Wonder is another highly profitable variety. Sales slips show these two kinds have not sold for less than 5 cents this season. Rosette, Benora and Commodore complete the list of leaders. Lady Northcliffe is an excellent variety, both in size and color, and will be grown more extensively next season. A bed of Calendula Orange King is a good investment.

Keeping a Reputation

IT is one thing to get a good reputation but another thing to keep it. The quality of the stock we have sent out from year to year has made an enviable reputation for itself and we have that reputation to maintain. It hasn't been luck; it's been hard, consistent work to make it. Judging by our spring prospects, that reputation will be made good.

Our novelties of the season in Roses are Killarney Brilliant and Hadley.

In Chrysanthemums, Indian Summer, our bronze sport of Chadwick, and the new Pompons—Golden Climax, Golden Harvest, Golden West, and Western Beauty. For pot plants the new bronze Grey-stone.

Our bedding plant stock is large and in excellent condition.

If you have received our trade list look it over. It includes things you will want. If you haven't it, send for one, using printed stationery, or give reference, to prove yourself a florist.

A. N. PIERSON, Inc. Cromwell, Conn.

adequate demand. Beauties still are scarce and the few long-stemmed flowers arriving are making fancy prices. Other roses are more abundant and, while they have cleaned up well, prices are a little lower. Carnations are beginning to accumulate, although there is little surplus of such varieties as Pink Delight, Gloriosa and Benora. White varieties are getting decidedly druggy. Violets are coming in much more freely, but the demand is poor and prices are low for the season.

Sweet peas of the best quality sell well and there is an abundant supply. A lot of short-stemmed flowers sell at low prices. The Spencers make double the price of the grandifloras. Dutch bulbous stock is in heavy supply and is getting hard to move. Lily of the valley is hanging fire also; a big demand for this is looked for on St. Valentine's day. Marguerites are coming in more freely. There are too many lilies. Mignonette from several growers is unusually fine. Forget-me-nots, wallflowers, calendulas and other miscellaneous flowers are abundant. Cattleyas continue in heavy supply, with low prices for the season. Gardenias sell better. The call for green stock is not at all robust.

CONTINUED

Last week we told a part of the history of Silver Pink Snapdragon from seed—how we purified the blood of the parent plant and caused it to produce pure stock. No matter what else was done we practically conquered the plant and gave to the public something worth while—something that makes snap growing easier and far more profitable. That we shall have imitators I have no doubt, but you are assured that seed grown in the ordinary way and from common varieties will NOT be successful. Neither will seed from seedlings be of any value. We shall hold on to the original parent stock and produce seed each year as we need it. We have had exceptional luck this season and have increased the size of the packets. All parts of the work are under our personal supervision and every stage of seed production is carefully guarded. We do not sell seed in bulk and pure stock can only be had from us or from some seedsmen in original packets only. Don't be deceived.

We now have ready splendid, well branched plants for Memorial and later. The price is only $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1,000, by express. Seed, trade pkt., $1.00; 3 pkts., $2.50; 7 pkts., $5.00, by mail for cash.

Compare the accompanying picture with any that you have seen. Your judgment will quickly decide for you—BLOSSOMS, not foliage. Increase your bank account.

Silver Pink makes a superb bedding plant. Sow now for Spring stock.

tors, others chosen being E. MacMulin, Samuel Wax, N. Silverman and F. H. Houghton. The meeting was largely attended and was enthusiastic.

John McFarland has 7,000 giganteum lilies coming along in fine shape for Easter. He has a large daily cut of lily of the valley and gardenias.

Perry E. Green, of Quincy, has been elected overseer of the poor for Quincy and took office February 2. If Mr. Green makes a success of his new office, as he undoubtedly will, he will earn the plaudits of a large number of fellow florists.

Noted in the windows of H. R. Comley, on Park street, February 7, were nice plants of chorizema, Crinum Moorei and Daphne odorata.

Robert Montgomery's rose houses at Natick look fine at present. He grows Sunburst, Mrs. Ward, Killarney and White Killarney, Richmond, Russell and Hillingdon.

Thomas Roland is sending in fine plants of Erica melanthera, camellias, acacias and genistas.

The project for a large municipal horticultural building located on the Back Bay fens, approved by ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, for which he sanctioned an appropriation of $25,000 on the last day of his administration, the money to come from the interest of the $5,000,000 Parkman fund, has been promptly vetoed by the new mayor, J. M. Curley. A building to cost $150,000 had been planned, but the incoming mayor believes that there is no pressing need for such a building. It will undoubtedly come later, however.

William C. Stickel, of Lexington, is an excellent carnation grower. He has 25,000 plants this season. Pink Delight is particularly fine, but so are White Wonder and Gloriosa. Other varieties grown are Beacon, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Rosette, Yellow Prince and Yellowstone. Matchless and Champion will be planted next season.

S. J. Goddard says he is more pleased with winning the prize for the vase of carnations showing the best keeping qualities at Cleveland than he is with any of his other awards. The five best preserved vases happened all to be Mr. Goddard's.

Work is being rushed on the new wholesale flower market at 260 Devonshire street, for the Boston Coöperative Flower Market. Such large growers as McAlpine Bros. and J. A. The corporation has the privilege of doubling its present floor space of 13,000 to over 25,000 feet whenever necessary.

The Willow Hill Greenhouses, West Roxbury, always grow genistas particularly well, and their plants this season are finer than ever.

Penn had a pleasing innovation last week in one of his large show windows. This was enclosed at the back with fine mesh wire netting; a groundwork was laid of sheet moss. One or two well-branched small trees without foliage rose from this, and on the branches or fluttering about the enclosed space was a large flock of Hartz mountain canaries. A huge bowl of Taft roses at one end were the only flowers. This window attracted notice from practically every passer-by. Great prepara-

The Market.

Market conditions all through the week were most satisfactory; prices were up and stock was scarce in some of the seasonable flowers. There is no great supply of roses from the local growers. The stock from out of town has been good. American Beauties have been a little scarce. There has been an overflow of carnations; some are weak in stem, but the majority are in fine shape, with good, large blossoms. Gardenias are arriving more plentifully, but orchids do not sell as fast as they might. Easter lilies are scarce, but callas are more plentiful. Violets have sold well. Paper Whites are not so plentiful of late. Tulips are plentiful in yellow, red and white, and sell well. The first lilac came in toward the end of the week. Mignonette is scarce. There are plenty of sweet peas in about all shades. There are plenty of Romans. Little is seen of freesias. Valley is in good demand and is plentiful. The supply of green stock is not quite up to the demand and is somewhat inferior.

Various Notes.

Miss Lillian Wheeler is now in the employ of J. B. Keller Sons, at North Clinton street.

We are sorry to report that Charles Gow, with H. E. Wilson, has been indisposed all week from the dislocation of his knee-cap. He is steadily improving.

Congratulations are in order for Mr. and Mrs. J. Suhr. A baby boy was born January 27.

Mrs. H. E. Bates does not seem to be making as rapid progress as could be wished for. She has suffered two relapses, but at the time of writing her condition is improving slowly.

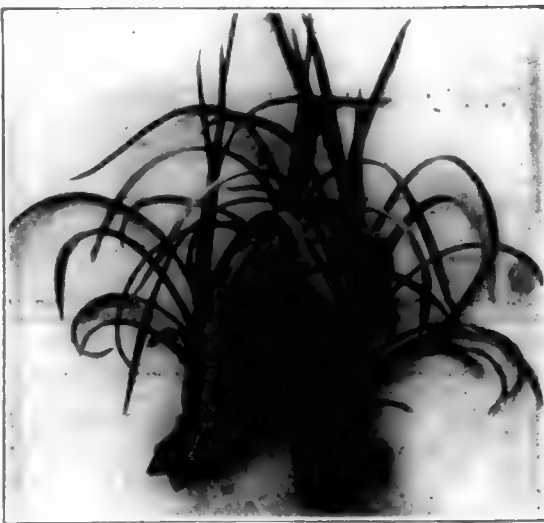

About twenty florists from Buffalo are expected to take part in the bowling tournament at the Grand Central alleys February 20.

NEW PINK ROSES

Mrs. George Shawyer... One of the best Roses that has been introduced in years. It is a very rapid, strong grower and with us produces more flowers per plant than Killarney. It is exceptionally well adapted to the grower that retails his stock.

Grafted Plants only.....$12.00 per 100

CECILE BRUNNER, The Baby Pink Rose

This is a beautiful little Rose coming in sprays of three to five buds and has been a great success with the retail florists of this city, as it combines in beautiful effect with so many other flowers in all kinds of work. Every grower should try some of these—not only in the greenhouse but in his garden. It is a very prolific bloomer and if carefully protected in the winter, should be a money-maker both outdoors and under glass.

Grafted Plants.....$12.00 per 100
Own Root.....8.00 per 100
" " .....35.00 per 500
" " .....60.00 per 1000

Both of the above varieties are not novelties but have been thoroughly tried out.

Rhea Reid, Killarney, White Killarney, Bulgarie and Richmond

All carefully grafted on selected English Manetti.....$10.00 per 100

Ready about April 1st, in 2½-in. pots. All of our plants are well hardened off, ready for shifting into larger pots or planting direct in the benches.

The flowering quality of our plants is well known, as we select only flowering wood for scions—no blind wood used at all.

The Market.

Roses are easing up and the store men are not quite so afraid to take an order. Beauties, of course, are a rarity in this city at present, only seen occasionally. Carnations are quite plentiful and in some instances of such poor quality that it is next to impossible to dispose of them. Bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful as the spring draws near. Tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and Paper Whites are available in sufficient quantities to supply the demand. Some exceptionally fine sweet peas are being shipped in, Spencers bringing as high as $2 per hundred. Violets are quite plentiful, among them some fine singles. Easter lilies are about equal to the demand, while callas are scarce. The usual line of green goods may be had.

Various Notes.

Thomas Browne, well known as the originator of Philadelphia carnation, left February 5 for Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer are expected to return from Cuba about February 20. Harry Breitmeyer has been at home for the last week, due to sickness.

Albert Stahelin, of Redford, Mich., has placed his order for a Cole touring car. E. A. Fethers also is much interested in new cars these days.

Louis Charvat cleaned up the market on valley February 9, having a special order calling for hundreds of this flower.

The publicity committee of the Detroit Florists' Club held a special meeting February 9 to complete plans for co-operative advertising for St. Valentine's day. Many of the downtown stores have attractive window displays appropriate to St. Valentine's day.

About four weeks ago the wives of some of the local florists announced that they were going to give a dancing and card party, the profits to be used in erecting an outdoor porch for the Van Leuven-Browne hospital for crippled children. The party was held February 4 and was so successful that the ladies now intend organizing as the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Detroit Florists' Club and meeting once a month. Mrs. E. A. Fethers, assisted by Mrs. Robert Rahaley, Mrs. Albert Stahelin, Mrs. Albert Pochelon, Mrs. Hugo Schroeter, Mrs.

John Warncke, Mrs. George Asman, Mrs. E. A. Scribner, Mrs. Chas. Plumb, Mrs. J. K. Stock and others, cleared a tidy sum. A vote of thanks was extended A. Miller, of Chicago, whose donation of a fern netted them $20. Chas. Plumb also received a vote of thanks for his donation of a number of plants which, when sold at auction, brought in about $50. Fred Pautke was largely responsible for the large prices obtained for these plants and himself donated $5 toward defraying expenses. The hall was most elaborately decorated, the work being done under the direction of the ladies with the assistance of leading florists.

New Rose, Killarney Brilliant

THE MOST VALUABLE ROSE INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

We consider this new rose—a sport from the original pink Killarney—the most valuable rose that has been introduced in many years. It is well named Killarney Brilliant, on account of its brilliant color.

It is a great improvement on the original pink Killarney; first, because of its much more brilliant color, it being almost crimson in bright weather, while in midwinter—in dull, cloudy and foggy weather,—when the original pink Killarney loses its brilliancy and becomes badly faded, Killarney Brilliant is as bright and deep a pink as the original variety at its best. In addition to its great superiority in color, the flower is almost twice as large, having from twenty-five to forty full-sized petals.

It has the same desirable color that Killarney Queen possesses, but has double the number of petals, making it a very double and a fuller flower; and it is also very much more productive, having the same habit of growth and the same freedom of bloom as its parent.

We have watched Killarney Brilliant growing during the past winter, planted in the same house with the original and the double pink Killarney, and when those varieties faded so as to be almost unmarketable, Killarney Brilliant was superb. We are thoroughly convinced that it will immediately supplant the original Killarney as the standard market variety, and that every up-to-date grower will be compelled to plant it, on account of its great superiority. A prominent rose grower, who has seen it growing, says it is the only rose he has ever seen that needs no advertising; it sells itself.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

Market conditions remain about the same as they have been for the last few weeks. Carnations are more plentiful than they have been and the quality is fine. Roses are still scarce, and although the quality of the stock is really better than can be expected, the light cut keeps the supply away below the demand. Wisconsin grown violets are in greater supply than they have been for some time, and as the stock is extra fine, they are cleaned up as soon as they appear on the market.

American Beauties are practically out of the market at this time. It is extremely hard to get any to supply part of the regular demand for this stock. Bulbous stock is fine and is a big factor in the sales end of the market just now. Trade in general is good and everyone reports a steady business, but nothing extraordinary.

Various Notes.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club, at its meeting Thursday, February 5, listened to an interesting talk by F. W. Sivyer, of the County School of Agriculture. The club was fortunate in getting Mr. Sivyer to address the members. His subject was "Soil Fertility," and he handled it in a most able and instructive manner.

JOY!

You must have heard about it. We know it sounds good. It sounds so good because it happens to be true.

This is a Carnation that did not get a reputation over night. We have been handling it for a little over two years and ought to know something about it.

IT'S A REAL RED

Perhaps we should call it Scarlet, because it is a live, glowing Red.

Better still, it is the kind of Carnation that proves the florist's friend. Shipped over a distance, it will look as good on arrival as when sent. This feature appeals to us because we know what it means to the man who is depending on us.

JOY has been described by Mr. E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, Ill.—the man who raised it—as “a strong grower, early, very free and continuous bloomer, with strong calyx and good stem.” That should be good enough for anybody. Don't wait for the other fellow to tell you about it. Send your order in now.

LANCASTER, PA.

The weather during the last month in this section has been mild, with only one night when the temperature dropped to zero. There was no snow worthy of mention during the month. In the last week or two there have been many sunny days and stock has improved wonderfully.

Something over 10,000 rooted cuttings of Carnation Matchless have been distributed among the Lancaster county carnation growers. The Lancaster Florists' Association secured for them a liberal discount from the list price, through cooperative buying. The cuttings are arriving in good shape and the prospects for the gold medal winner are good. Of the new varieties of carnations distributed last season, Enchantress Supreme is making many friends. Those of us who have it growing side by side with the parent variety can appreciate this valuable acquisition to the Enchantress family.

At H. A. Schroyer's store, on North Duke street, there has been a fine showing of potted plants of every seasonable variety, including some excellent bulbous stock, in addition to a full line of the standard cut flowers, all grown at his greenhouses on Harrisburg avenue.

Fred J. Michell, Jr., of Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, was a recent visitor.

The World's Best Cannas

Get them at Dreer's

We try out all new introductions for at least two years before endorsing or rejecting same, and if they are not improvements over existing sorts, or decided novelties, we do not offer them to you.

The following varieties of recent introduction stand out prominently as the best of their respective types and colors, and you will make no mistake in accepting our endorsement of the ten varieties here offered.

SPECIAL.—Note the reduction in price of the three leaders—Hungaria, the ideal pink, Gustav Gumpfer, yellow, and Mrs. Alfred Conard, popular salmon pink.

Gustav Gumpfer. Another season's trial strengthens us in again recommending this as the ideal rich yellow bedding Canna; the flowers of good size are held well above the foliage, the fine trusses always clean looking; in habit of growth very uniform; color a rich golden-yellow, a shade that has been missing heretofore and which can be seen as far as the eye will carry; 3½ to 4 feet. 20 cts. each; $1.25 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $65.00 per 1,000.

Hungaria. The ideal pink bedding Canna; flowers large, in good sized trusses, produced early, freely and continuously, in color not unlike that of the Paul Neyron Rose. Compared to all other pink varieties, it possesses a softness and refinement not found in any other sort; 3 to 3½ feet. 20 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1,000.

Louis Reverchon. This was one of the best dark-leaved red-flowering varieties in our trials during the past three years. A block of about 2,000 plants attracted great attention. The flowers are very large, of a cochineal-red color, very freely produced on vigorous plants with light bronze foliage; 4½ to 5 feet. 10 cts. each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1,000.

Meteor. There are two varieties of Cannas being sold under the name of Meteor, one a German introduction which can be bought very cheap. We offer the American variety and it is the Canna you want, as it is the best red flowering Canna in commerce. 30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Mrs. Alfred F. Conard. A most remarkable variety, with exquisite salmon-pink flowers of largest size in erect and abundantly furnished heads, so freely produced as to keep a superb showing of bloom for months above the rich green foliage; 4 feet. 20 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000.

Rosea Gigantea. Extra large flowers, borne in such abundance that the mass of color on each plant is truly amazing; individual petals are 2½ inches across; a deep, rich rose, almost a coral-carmine. 10 cts. each; 75 cts. per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1,000.

Maros. The best white bedder, in color about the same as Mont Blanc Improved, but produces not only three or four times as many flowers, and, as the old flowers shed themselves, it always presents a clean and tidy appearance. Maros in our fields attracted great attention, forming great broad clean bands of white. Its habit is perfect, filling every requirement of a tip-top bedder. 15 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1,000.

Uhlberg. Entirely distinct and one of the freest-flowering varieties we have ever grown. The flowers expand very full and are of a soft rosy-carmine; the throat of the flower is of a creamy-yellow and the edges of the petals, which are slightly crimped, are also pale yellow. This variety attracted much attention at our trials; 3 feet. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

Undine. Unquestionably the best of its type, and we heartily recommend it either for massing or as single specimens in the border. Its growth is dwarf and graceful, with green foliage, and its flowers, which are produced very freely, are of a bright orange-scarlet broadly edged with golden yellow; a most satisfactory variety in every way; 3½ feet. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

William Bates. A splendid free-flowering pure yellow Canna that has attracted much attention. The size of its flowers, of its trusses, its habit of growth are all that can be desired; a variety that will become a great favorite; 5 feet. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

The varieties Meteor and Uhlberg will be supplied in growing plants, all others in roots.

Twenty-five at hundred rates; 250 or more at thousand rates.

We will supply 1 each of the set of 10 varieties for $2.00.

We will supply 6 each of the set of 10 varieties for $8.00.

We also have an immense stock of the standard varieties of Cannas and we shall be pleased to quote special prices on your requirements.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business last week was about the same as that of the week before. The supply of cut flower stock is rather short for the demand, especially in roses. The retail business had a heavy run in funeral work, but decorations were not so prominent, so that business was about even with that of the week before.

The wholesalers are making every effort to divide the stock so as to take care of as many of their customers as possible; it is hard to supply all they want. Beauties have become extremely scarce and prices are advancing on all grades. Roses are not so plentiful as they were last week. Richmond was the least in demand, while white roses took an unusual run, which kept the wholesalers cleaned up as fast as they could get them. Pink roses went the same as last week.

Good carnations are much in demand and short in supply. The cut for the last week in this locality was not nearly as heavy as that of two weeks ago. There are a great many seconds, but they are always cleaned up by evening. Sweet peas are not so plentiful, but they are good, considering the weather conditions, and are bringing good prices. Jonquils, tulips, daffodils and other bulbous stock are becoming more plentiful, which helps out a great deal.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray has been doing a great deal of decorating. His decorations have increased this year considerably over last year. He had a pretty window display of white lilac and spring flowers.

Arthur Newell reports that his January business showed a decided increase over last January. Funeral work kept him rather busy last week.

Henry Kusik & Co. report that stock is hard to get. They are getting more from the north than they were two weeks ago. Easter supplies and wire goods are selling well and orders come in fast.

Business across the state line has increased in the last two weeks. There is plenty of funeral work and decorating. Chas. Zapse, of Chicago, a brother of Mrs. T. A. Moseley, was in the city visiting.

R. S. Brown & Son have started to ship bedding stock to the south. Business has shown a big increase over last year and they expect to sell more bedding stock this year than ever before.

Wm. Foith is cutting some good carnations and sweet peas. He expects to get a nice cut from his roses in several weeks.

The Alpha Floral Co. has placed a large brass sign across the bottom of the display window. The company is making many changes in the store. The large ice-box door was turned around so as to make it more convenient for customers to enter.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports business good. The company is cutting plenty of carnations and in a few weeks expects to commence cutting a good many roses.

W. J. B.

South Portland, Me.—Niles Nelson expects to rebuild as soon as possible. The houses were erected about twenty-five years ago by his father.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

The Market.

The general market was brisk during the early part of last week, and all the trade had plenty of orders and work to use a large supply of cut flowers. Home-grown flowers are scarce, with the exception of carnations, of which some excellent Enchantress are shown by one of our growers. The sudden drop in temperature last Thursday caught nearly everybody unprepared, but no serious damage is reported by any of the growers, with the exception of Chas. Adams, who reports that he fears the loss of a fine lot of ten weeks' stocks and some other semi-hardy perennials.

Various Notes.

The Tri-State Floral Co. intends to erect one, if not two, 200-foot houses this season. The intention is to use one for carnations and the other for roses.

The Hernando Floral Co., operated by O. S. Benham, has leased the plant to the Aberdeen Floral Co., of Aberdeen, Miss., which took charge February 1 and will enter the Memphis market with a general line of pot plants, decorative designs and cut flowers.

The complaints anent the city park commissioners, noted before in these columns, are crystallizing into definite shape and something may be expected to happen at an early meeting of the city commissioners. G. W. A.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was fair during the last week. Stock is becoming more plentiful. Roses are improving in quality and quantity. Carnations are soft and a little short in supply. Beauties are of fair quality and find good demand. Spring flowers, jonquils, tulips, hyacinths and freesias have found a good call. Lilies are becoming more plentiful and find ready sale. Violets, valley, peas and lilacs also meet a good demand.

Various Notes.

Robert Fohl, formerly with E. A. Nelson, has taken a position with A. Wiegand's Sons Co.

500,000 CARNATIONS.

We are devoting our whole plant to the production of rooted carnation cuttings. Our stock plants are grown cool and for cuttings only. Experience proves that cuttings grown from this kind of stock are stronger and far superior to cuttings taken from flowering plants. You can be sure that orders placed with us will be filled with the very best stock.

CYCLAMEN.

200,000 GIANT FLOWERING CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS AND BLOOMING PLANTS.

For the last 18 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first prize at the Cleveland show and first and second at Toledo, early November, when blooming cyclamen were scarce.

STRONG AUGUST SOWN SEEDLINGS, once transplanted, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

BLOOMING PLANTS, 5, 6 and 8-in., 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50 each. Cash with order. Cultural directions with all orders.

C. Winterich, Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS.

Giant flowering from very best strain obtainable; these are twice transplanted and are sure of giving satisfaction. Early planting will make best plants for next Christmas.

SOOT AS A FERTILIZER.

I should like to know whether I can use the soot taken from the combustion chamber of the boiler, and of what value it would be to garden stock or to plants grown inside, such as carnations, lilies, etc. How much should I use at a time, and how often?

W. H. D.

The soot from soft coal is useful for spreading over the land. It contains some nitrogen and proves distasteful to worms and other soil pests. Under glass it can be used either separately or mixed with cow or sheep manure. Place these in a bag and soak in a barrel of water. Dilute this water when applying it to pot or bench crops. Soot alone is valuable for putting color into foliage which has become sickly and yellow. Our native soot is not equal in fertilizing qualities to the imported article. Scotch soot has a large sale in America.

Williamson called John Brown, of Stamford, to the stage and presented to him a beautiful silver loving cup ornamented with horn handles. The presentation was made in behalf of the exhibitors at the recent show in Stamford, as a token of appreciation of the able manner in which Mr. Brown managed the show. Mr. Brown thanked the donors and assured them

DO YOU KNOW VERMINE?

John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., writes: "I suppose you will be glad to know that VERMINE is giving excellent satisfaction. Our greenhouse foreman says that it is the only thing that he has ever used that will kill white ants in the benches."

Valentin Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., write: "We wish to say that we find VERMINE an excellent thing. We used it on a bench planted with Smilax to kill root lice or maggots, which ate the roots, and after two applications our Smilax is taking on new life and has started off to grow."

The Gardner Nursery Company, Osage, Iowa, writes: "We will use VERMINE on our out-of-door fields of strawberry plants, if the inside test continues as satisfactory as it now seems."

W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass., writes: "I have used VERMINE and found it effective against root maggots, cut worms, earth worms, ants and other ground pests."

VERMINE is applied one part to four hundred parts of water by thoroughly soaking the soil. It will protect your crops from the ravages of vermin underground without the slightest injury to vegetation.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

BETTER ADD ANOTHER FLOW.

I am building a greenhouse, 21x125 feet. The side walls will be boarded, without glass, and will be six feet high. The side beds will be solid. There will be two benches in the center, each five feet wide, and there will be three walks, each twenty inches wide. I have been thinking of heating the house by running two 2½-inch flow pipes, one on each purlin, with three 2-inch returns on each wall and one 2-inch return under each bench. I want to grow tomatoes and bedding plants. We seldom get more than 17 to 20 degrees of frost here, near the coast of British Columbia. The boiler will be at one end of the greenhouse. A. O.

The radiation described would be sufficient for ordinary bedding plants, but for the best results with tomatoes a slight increase in the amount would be found desirable, with the outside temperature 10 to 15 degrees above zero. The addition of one 2-inch return pipe would bring the amount of radiating surface in the house up to about 900 square feet, which is rather more than can be handled to advantage by two 2½-inch flow pipes. Hence, instead of putting in another return pipe, it would be advisable to run a 2½-inch flow pipe just under the ridge

BOILER IN RESIDENCE CELLAR.

I expect to build a small greenhouse, 10x25, at the east side of my residence, connecting the heating pipes of the greenhouse with a hot water heater in the basement of the residence. What size of pipes shall I use for the flow and return, and how many and what size of pipes shall I use for two benches four feet wide, running the full length of the house? The winter temperature outside, in this part of Iowa, averages about 10 degrees above zero. The temperature wanted inside will be about 55 to 60 degrees. C. B.

The data furnished are hardly sufficient to warrant a really definite reply, as the amount of radiation will depend upon the number of square feet of glass and exposed wall surface. If the house does not contain more than 300 square feet of glass and the walls are not more than four feet high, a temperature of 60 degrees can be secured in zero weather by using one 2-inch flow pipe and three 1½-inch returns under each of the benches. Unless the top of the heater is below the level of the floor of the greenhouse, it will be well to run the flow pipes upon the wall plates.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

With almost a sunless January, stock still is scarce and not of standard quality. Roses are short and those that come in are soft. The supply of carnations also is light. Violets and sweet peas are in better supply. Green goods are not abundant.

Various Notes.

At the Whiting greenhouses carnations are off crop at present, but they have been doing well this season. A good crop of double violets is being picked. The young rose stock in the grafting frames is looking fine.

At John Coombs' place they are busy preparing for the Easter rush. A large quantity of bulb stock is being brought on.

Louis Barton, of Elmwood, was fortunate in having a good cut of roses all through January. He is running a dairy on the side, as he was unable to secure fertilizer for his roses.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., is cutting a good crop of gardenias of high quality. The grafting department is running in full force; young rose stock is already being shipped. William Buggie, who has had charge of the carnation department for a number of years, has been appointed postmaster of Cromwell. The best wishes of the craft go with him to his new position. R. C. Cleans a building of Rats and Mice in short time, keeps it cleaned, for it is always ready for use. Made of galvanized iron, can't get out of order, lasts for years. Large number can be caught daily. Go to Catcher mornings, remove device inside, which only takes a few seconds, take out dead rats and mice, replace device—it is ready for another catch. Small piece cheese is used, doing away with poisons. Catcher is 18 inches high, 10 inches in diameter. When rats pass device they die, no marks left on them. Catcher is always clean. One of these Catchers set in a livery stable in Scranton, Pa., caught over 100 rats in a month. One sent prepaid to any place in United States upon receipt of $3.00. Catcher, 8 inches high, for mice only, prepaid $1.00. On account of shipping charges being prepaid, remittance is requested with order.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Knoxville Florists' Society held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, February 3. C. P. W. Nims, with A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., who was a visitor at the meeting, was elected to honorary membership. The matter of organizing a state floricultural society, to be affiliated with the state horticultural society, was discussed, and the secretary was instructed to write to the florists of the state, asking for their cooperation in the movement.

C. L. Baum reports retail business rather dull for the last few days, but he has been having enough wholesale trade to clean up all his stock. Roses are still off crop, but carnations are coming in finer than ever. Orchids are looking fine. Karl P. Baum, on his return from Nashville, Tenn., reported having seen some fine stock in that city, especially cyclamens, carnations and roses.

A. H. Dailey reports business fair, with plenty of funeral work. He will cut the last of his mums for St. Valentine's day, and will have plenty of violets and sweet peas.

Mrs. Rosa Hall Ryno reports having had several good orders from out of town. Funeral work and receptions have kept her busy of late.

Addison J. McNutt has a large number of orders booked for St. Valentine's day, for which he will have a large cut of sweet peas and violets. He says funeral work just keeps him going, but aside from that business is quiet.

Notice of the death of Mrs. Anne Kent, the wife of John Kent, of C. L. Baum, will be found in this week's obituary column.

C. P. W. Nims, of A. H. Hews & Co., of Cambridge, Mass., who is now in his forty-first year on the road, was a visitor here last week. Other visitors were: George Maunz, of Reed & Keller, New York city; Mr. Snyder, of the Louisville Pottery Co., Louisville, Ky., and Harry Strauve, Jr., representing Ottolander & Hooftman, Boskoop, Holland.

A. J. M.

GREAT FALLS, MONT.

M. Langohr, of Bozeman, was a visitor in this city a few days last week, coming over from Lewistown, where he had also spent a few days among the establishments of the florists. Mr. Langohr is taking a little trip over the state.

The Electric City Conservatory reports that January this year was the best January on record.

The latest reduction in express rates will be a great benefit to the florists of this city and Montana in general, who receive shipments of cut flowers from the east. The express charges were always a big item in getting flowers from so great a distance.

THE CHAMPION POT-WASHER

In this machine we have at last achieved a scientifically constructed Pot-washer for Florists. It gets plenty of water in the right place.

Its combination spring steel cutting brushes clear off the green, germ-infested mold to the tune of 600 to 1000 pots an hour.

It makes the pots pleasing to the eye of the customer and comfortable to handle. Plants grown in Champion Washed Pots will come out in repotting with their delicate root systems uninjured.

These machines are made to run with either electric, water or boy power. The water or the "juice" will cost from 1c to 2c an hour; boy power usually comes higher.

If you have 55 lbs. or more water pressure, you will find the water machine mighty good, for it is absolutely fool-proof. You just ought to see it GO! And it doesn't cost much.

Sixteen Agricultural Colleges give endorsement, and we want to tell you also what users say. Write for these at once and a lot more we have to tell you.

The Champion Pot-washer will do a big share towards keeping your plants free from disease.

NEW ORLEANS.*The Market.

The winter season is nearing its end, and carnival balls and receptions are following one another in rapid succession. Although the money spent for plant decorations and cut flowers for these occasions is less than in former years, the business done by our retailers has been quite satisfactory. The competition among them is keener every year, yet the end of each season finds all of them in the field. The show windows and store decorations of nearly every florist are becoming more artistic and elaborate, and no doubt help to some extent to increase the business. Advertising in the daily papers is done more now than formerly, but not on so great a scale as by northern members of the trade.

The extremely warm weather all through the month of January brought on the various crops of bulbous stock in rapid succession, and the stock on hand at present exceeds the demand. Outdoor-grown sweet peas and single violets are plentiful and of fine quality. The predicted cold wave reached the city February 7, but, luckily enough, was not so severe as was expected. As we have freezing weather all over the northern part of Louisiana and a strong northwestern wind is blowing, another day or two may tell another story. If the temperature should only reach the 28-degree mark the loss in outside stock would be enormous.

Various Notes.

Henry Cook's nursery is surely in fine condition, and his Adiantum Farleyense is the best seen here. He expresses himself well satisfied with the season's business.

C. W. Eichling reports a good business in every line. His first lot of grafted pecan trees from his Bayou Lacombe nursery is on the market and finds eager buyers on account of the fine quality. R. E.

ELBERON, N. J.

The Elberon Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting February 2. This being carnation night, the carnation growers of the Elberon section of Long Branch, N. J., turned out in large numbers and made a creditable exhibition.

C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., was a welcome visitor, acting as one of the judges. He complimented the growers on the quality of the flowers, especially White Wonder as grown by George Masson, and Beacon as grown by Thomas Hambleton. They were superb. Mr. Sperling, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., was also in attendance and complimented the growers on their skill.

The society is in a flourishing condition, thanks to the worthy treasurer, Anton Bauer.

Following is a list of the awards:

Twelve white—First, George Masson, with White Wonder; second, D. C. Kelly, with White Perfection.

Twelve light pink—First, George Masson; second, Thomas Hambleton; third, D. C. Kelly, each with Pink Enchantress.

Our President's First Ad.

AS President of this company, I prefer to keep in the background, but our ad man has been doing too much talking that's over people's heads; and too little about the things we have to sell.

We have had several talks together and finally he suggested my trying a hand at it. So that's exactly what I am going to do.

First there's the question of getting started right—half the troubles are because trouble enough isn't taken about that.

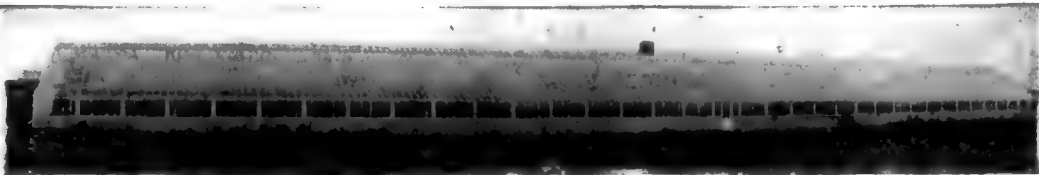

If we are willing to spend our good money coming to talk over with you the various problems of your proposition and explain to you just how we can meet your wants, it does seem to me that you are turning down a good thing when you don't write us whenever the building bee is buzzing in your head.

Heating, for instance—think of the costly "fix-overs" and trouble that a little trouble, in starting right, would have saved.

If you have a regular twister of a problem, I'll take a hand in it myself.

"We go anywhere for business."

GREAT GREENHOUSES GO DOWN

UNDER WEIGHT OF HEAVY SNOWS IN THE EAST

The Longest Greenhouse in America, at Madbury, N. H., and the Widest House, at North Wales, Pa., Both Give Way

BY a strange coincidence the longest greenhouse in America, and the widest, the two largest glass roofed structures in the world, both collapsed St. Valentine's day. One of these houses was that of Wm. H. Elliott, at Madbury, N. H. It was 60x1,360, and about one-third went down. The other was the famous house of the Florex Gardens, at North Wales, Pa. It is 172x750 and the way it looked the day after the storm is shown in the accompanying illustration.

Worst Storm in Years.

The heaviest storm in many years swept over the north Atlantic states February 14. From Philadelphia north into New England the fall of snow was the heaviest known within the period that the greenhouse industry has had its great development. The test put upon glass roofs was the most severe that has been known since the big modern houses have come into existence. The snow was deep and wet and in addition to its great weight there was the pressure of a high wind. Small losses were numerous and that there were not more of them, and more important losses, is a splendid testimonial to the stability of up-to-date greenhouse construction.

The Collapse at Madbury, N. H.

About noon February 14, during the height of the fiercest snow storm New England has experienced in some years, a section of William H. Elliott's mammoth greenhouse, at Madbury, N. H., collapsed, owing to the tremendous weight of snow lying on the roof, added to a cyclonic gale with an average velocity of sixty miles per hour. At Madbury the snow lay from three to five feet on the level, many drifts being ten to fifteen feet deep. The fallen part of the house measures 60x400, being practically one-third of the big house, which measures 1,360 feet long, and contains about two and one-half sections, one being devoted to carnations and the balance to roses.

None of the working force was in the collapsed section when it fell, but those in an adjoining section said it seemed to fall from the ridge. By means of canvas and boards a temporary partition was at once made at the broken end and, unless a severe cold wave arrives, Mr. Elliott says he will save the balance of the house. In spite of his heavy financial loss, Mr. Elliott is optimistic and will rebuild as soon as weather conditions permit. He has not lost his faith in wide houses. The fallen house had been erected about six years ago, from Mr. Elliott's own plans, all the construction work being carried out by his own mechanics under his own direction. Probably none in the growing business had made more of a study of greenhouse construction than Mr. Elliott, and he was practically the pioneer builder of big, roomy houses such as are now in vogue. At no time in the past had the fallen house shown any sign of weakness, but cyclonic snow storms are sometimes too much even for the best built houses. Zero weather followed right in the wake of the snow storm.

The Collapse at North Wales.

The collapse of the famous house at the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., occurred at about 6 a. m., February 14, following a heavy fall of snow that later turned to ice, the pressure on the glass being increased by the high wind. The house is 172x750 and about forty feet to the ridge. The south side for about half its length gave way. From the appearance of the wreck as shown in the illustration it appears that that part at the ridge gave way, as the roof toward the eave is practically intact. The management of the Florex Gardens declined to make any sort of a statement with regard to the catastrophe and it is, of course, impossible to estimate the loss at this time.

The house contained about 70,000 rose plants, Killarney, White Killarney, My Maryland, Richmond, Bride, Sunburst and Mrs. Ward. It was severely cold at the time of the accident and steadily for several days after, but it is hoped to save the plants. The north side of the house will stand without repair and arrangements were made February 16, with the King Construction Co., R. O. King being on the ground, for the prompt rebuilding of the south side. The work will be pushed with great vigor.

In this connection it will be of interest to note Mr. King's description of the plans for the first big house at North Wales. At the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Toronto in 1907 he said in part in a paper read to the convention: "This house is a great departure from present standards and will set a record for wide houses which is not likely to be surpassed for some time, or at least until we can profit from the success or failure of the gentlemen who are willing to experiment on such a grand scale.

"Beginning with the glass, it is desired to lay it with the supporting bars twenty-four inches apart. Referring to the table, it is found that the average weight required to break the glass is thirty pounds per square foot. This is equivalent to about one foot of wet snow. The glass is hardly likely to be called upon to stand more than this, so the question of strength against dead weight can be considered settled.

"The framework of the house must be made strong enough to carry somewhat more weight than the glass could stand, so that the glass would break before the framework collapsed, the design, complete, leaving the glass the weakest member, as it should be, for it is seen that although the breaking strength of the glass is thirty pounds per square foot, and the breaking strength of the truss work is the same, yet the glass is not uniform in strength, whereas the trusses are, and as thirty pounds is an average, it follows that half the glass would be broken by the time this load would be reached and if half the glass is broken, half the weight has gone with it, so our framework stands to be subjected in the limit to only one-half of its breaking load."

TO KILL LEAF ROLLERS.

I have noticed recently in The Review several inquiries about leaf rollers. I have had a big fight with them on roses and have found that the best and most efficient means of killing the pests is arsenate of lead, used at the rate of two pounds to fifty gallons of water, preferably soft water. It takes continuous spraying to kill them, because the eggs are always hatching out. Kill the female miller on sight; it is easily distinguished, being spotted brown and prone to fly a great deal.

The manufactured arsenate of lead is usually good if freshly made, but loses its strength somewhat with age. The government bulletins give formulas for making it cheaply, and of course it is more highly efficient when freshly made.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Boston, Mass.—Edward J. MacMulkin filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy February 13, in the United States District Court, in this city. The bankrupt, who has for some years been in business at 194 Boylston street, and who also operated large greenhouses at Norfolk Downs, Mass., states that he owes $83,937.27, and that his assets are of an uncertain amount. To unsecured creditors he owes $56,861.34, and $9,340 to secured creditors. The remainder of the liabilities consists of taxes, $302.09; wages, $482.25, and notes and bills amounting to $16,951.59. There are 150 unsecured creditors. Among the largest are the Federal Trust Co., $6,588; C. H. Worster, Boston, $9,184.05; George R. White, Boston, $3,352; Waban Rose Conservatories, $2,797. The largest of the secured creditors is Francis J. Carney, of Boston, with a claim of $5,000. Three Boston creditors, with aggregate claims of $531, instituted involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against the company February 13, on the ground that the firm committed an act of bankruptcy by making an assignment to William D. Gooch December 23, 1913. Mr. MacMulkin is well liked in horticultural circles, and his many friends hope to soon see him rehabilitated.

TEXAS FLORISTS TO ORGANIZE.

Under the leadership of the Houston Florists' Club, the florists of Texas are preparing to form a state association. A letter has been sent out by the state organizing committee calling a meeting of all florists, landscape architects and others commercially interested in floriculture at Waco, May 4 and 5. The movement is the result of a canvass by letter of the florists of the state, who are strongly in favor of such an organization, which will materially help the trade in that section. The organizers are enthusiastic and urge the florists of the state to help organize the largest state florists' association in the United States at this meeting, which, they say, will no doubt be the greatest gathering of florists ever held in the south. Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, is chairman of the organizing committee. The other members are I. M. Johnson, Geo. M. Cosh and Henry Kuhlman, Jr., of Houston; T. J. Wolfe, of Waco; J. B. Baker, of Ft. Worth; Otto Lang, of Dallas; C. H. Steding, of Galveston; C. Hauser, of San Antonio; O. Olson, of Austin, and H. O. Hannah, of Sherman.

PREPARATIONS AT DANVILLE.

The arrangements for the joint meeting of the state florists' associations of Illinois and Indiana at Danville, Ill., March 10 and 11, are rapidly being completed. Entries of cut flowers for the exhibition have been received from forty-eight florists and the entries of plants are coming, too. Although there is to be no trades display, there will be booths, 7x10 feet, along both sides of the Armory, under the balconies, in which dealers in supplies can show their wares. A small rental is charged for these booths, and all but three have been taken.

The regular March meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association has been suspended to make way for the big joint meeting and prospects are for a large attendance of members of the visiting society. In expectation of large numbers, the Danville florists are making elaborate arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors. The trip to the University of Illinois on the second day is being made a feature, and at the banquet the same evening Danville's "grand old man," Joseph G. Cannon, will be a guest of honor by vote of the local club.

The decorations of the Armory will take a large quantity of greens, for it is planned to use wild smilax to set off the flowers. The center of the floor will be filled with palms and other decorative plants. The ends of the hall will be occupied by the cut flower exhibits. It is expected that a number of the new carnations will be shown here during the meeting.

FLORICULTURE DAY PROGRAM.

A most interesting and instructive program has been arranged for floriculture day, March 18, by the floricultural department of the Massachusetts Agricultural college. The speakers on the program are all specialists and men of prominence. Florists and gardeners from all parts of the state have expressed a desire to attend these lectures. The program for the day is as follows:

"Opportunities in Floriculture," by Prof. Arno H. Nehrling, Massachusetts Agricultural college.
"Professional Horticulture," by Harry A. Bunyard, secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society, New York.

"Growing Plants From Seeds" (especially trees and shrubs and in particular ericaceous and coniferous plants), by T. D. Hatfield, gardener on the Hunnewell estate, Wellesley, Mass.

"Commercial Rose Culture," by W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass.

"Some Phases of Outdoor Rose Culture," by Eber Holmes, Montrose, Mass.

"Methods Used in Improving Plants," by Edward J. Canning, formerly curator of the botanic gardens at Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

"Glass Houses in the Middle West" (illustrated), by Prof. A. H. Nehrling.

CARRIED OVER CYCLAMENS.

How should the unsalable or surplus cyclamen plants of this year be treated from now on, to be used next season? How early should they be started in the coming summer? They are from seeds sown in August, 1912. M. B.

Cyclamens can be carried over successfully. A common mistake is in drying them off as soon as they are through flowering. Keep them well watered until early in May; then water more sparingly. In July shake out and repot. By this time most of the foliage will have died away. After shaking out and repotting, grow them along in a coldframe through the summer, leaving the sashes off on all pleasant evenings. C. W.

CHEIRANTHUS OR WALLFLOWER.

Please give a few cultural directions for cheiranthus, German goldlack. Mention the time for sowing, with something about the summer treatment of the plants, and state whether they should be planted out or grown along in pots. M. B.

As "goldlack" is the common German name for wallflower, it is presumed that you refer to the well known old garden favorite, the common wallflower, or Cheiranthus Cheiri. Sow in April. Plant outdoors in May or June, selecting rich soil. Keep the ground well stirred all summer, and dig up and pot any needed in October. Wallflowers are vastly better when planted out than when cramped through the summer in pots of inadequate size. C. W.

FLIM-FLAMS FELLOW FLORISTS

FACES FEDERAL PRISON

United States Postoffice Inspectors, on information supplied by The Review, arrest florist charged with using the mails to defraud

THIS is the tale of a florist who appears to have found easy money too great a temptation. Also, it is an admonition, if there are others similarly inclined, that they would better not try any tricks on readers of The Review.

It is the story of August Pajonk, once an honest florist, now a man of many aliases, in jail for want of a bondsman and facing a term in federal prison. He was arrested at Pittsburgh last week, by C. H. Clarahan and A. E. Germer, from the office of General James E. Stuart, chief postoffice inspector at Chicago, who went to Pittsburgh as the result of information placed in their hands by The Review. Pajonk was given a hearing before the United States Commissioner at Pittsburgh February 12 and was held under $5,000 bonds to await the action of the Federal grand jury.

How Pajonk Operated.

Apparently Pajonk had intended doing an honest business; he advertised and took orders with the idea of picking up the stock to fill them. But it was not so easy or so profitable as it had promised to be—the temptation was great, with a pocketful of other people's money and no home ties, to pull out, change names, and try it over again somewhere else. Pajonk succumbed.

Pajonk knows the trade thoroughly. He made just one mistake: he overlooked the zealousness with which The Review guards the integrity of its advertising columns. That was what got him the chance to defend himself on the charge of using the mails to defraud.

When Pajonk slipped he rented a postoffice box at La Grange, Ill., just outside of Chicago, under the name of August Miller. He sent two small classified ads to The Review, accompanied by cash, for publication over the La Grange address. There were nearly 1,000 separate classified ads in that issue, originating all over America, and it is a matter of simple impossibility for the publishers to have intimate acquaintance with all the advertisers. But when a Chicago florist, a day or two later, dropped in at The Review office and remarked that he went to La Grange to buy some of the advertised stock, and couldn't locate the advertiser, it was enough to arouse suspicion. There doubtless are many honest florists whose places of business are not easily found, but if they are not known in their home towns they have to show The Review before they can use its advertising columns. Consequently, the ads never appeared a second time.

Pajonk Moves On.

An investigator from the office of The Review went to La Grange. The postmaster had received no complaints. There was not the slightest evidence that anything was wrong; only no August Miller could be found. The postoffice inspector was asked to keep an eye open, and in a few days reported that the mail was no longer being taken from lock box 54 at La Grange. Miller had moved on.

Then a complaint came that afforded a basis for action. A florist wrote that he had sent an order for geranium cuttings, accompanied by a postoffice money order; a typewritten acknowledgment had been received, stating that the stock would be shipped in a few days, but it hadn't arrived. Investigation showed that the money order had been cashed.

But the man had gone!

Unfortunately, there were other complaints. The lock box at La Grange had received much mail.

A moth nearly always comes back to the flame, until, finally, it scorches him. And it seemed likely that this man, having had the spending of unearned money, would try for more of it. He did—almost immediately. This time the name used was Albert Frei and the address was 2509 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh. Although written with a typewriter and signed on the machine, the communications of Miller and Frei were so similar in appearance as to leave no doubt they were written by the same man. Consequently, The Review did not print the Frei advertisement. Although the advertisement promptly appeared in another paper, The Review turned its order over to the postoffice inspectors. Right on the heels of it there came another advertising order, this time signed Fred Klein, Colona, Pa. The Klein letter was so like the others in appearance that the postoffice inspectors started at once for Pittsburgh. The arrest followed in due course. The Fred Klein advertisement appeared in another trade paper February 14, even after "Klein" was in jail.

Identity Established.

When the postoffice inspectors searched the room in Pittsburgh they were able to establish the identity of the man who used the names of Miller, Frei and Klein. He is August Pajonk, who is well known in the trade. At the opening of 1911 Pajonk was working for W. N. C. Klein on the Six-Mile Ferry road, near Fairhaven, Pa. A little later he went to Pittsburgh and within a few days went to work for J. L. Wyland at Allison Park. In December he joined the forces of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., at Crystal Farm, Gibsonia, Pa., but he did not stay there long, going thence to W. F. Lauch, at New Galilee, Pa. In May, 1913, Pajonk went back to Mr. Klein, at Fairhaven, but in August he removed to Spartanburg, S. C., where he worked a few weeks for C. A. Moss. Then he made his unfortunate excursion west, landing in Chicago in September. He landed at 5433 North Seeley avenue, working for Peter Schousboe and other florists in the northwest part of the city.

August Pajonk.

Alias August Miller, alias Albert Frei, alias Fred Klein, alias Miss Anna Klein, alias Miss E. Schwartz.

Because of the vigilance of The Review, Pajonk's operations were cut short. He abandoned La Grange after only about three weeks, but the post-office inspectors have acquired a considerable number of letters, which will be held as evidence until after Pajonk's trial, when they will be returned to the writers. Anyone who has sent money to Pajonk, either as August Miller, La Grange, Ill., Albert Frei, Pittsburgh, or Fred Klein, Colona, Pa., should write to C. H. Clarahan, post-office inspector, Chicago, Ill., stating the facts.

One of the curious points established is that Pajonk has fifteen bank accounts, in eight small banks in Chicago and in seven banks at Pittsburgh. The combined balance is about $1,000.

Alleged Matrimonial Swindle.

The arrest of Pajonk got into the newspapers all over the country because the inspectors uncovered what they consider conclusive evidence that in addition to his operations among florists, he was working what they call a matrimonial swindle. They found papers to show that he was advertising in German papers as Miss Anna Klein and as Miss E. Schwartz, matrimonially inclined. It is asserted that when he got a nibble he sent a photograph of a good-looking woman, representing it to be that of the advertiser, asking that

THE MEDAL OF MERIT.

The accompanying illustration was prepared from a photograph of the gold medal which was awarded to Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., for originating Carnation Beacon. The conditions under which the medal is awarded, by the American Carnation Society, are as follows: "Whenever a seedling variety shall manifest superiority, commercially, and maintain such superiority for three or more years, the directors may recommend that the originator be given a special gold medal, to be called the Medal of Merit." This medal is considered the highest honor that could be paid an originator and is supposed to be awarded only in exceptional cases. This is the first medal awarded under this provision, although it was adopted at the convention in Washington, D. C., in 1908.

GETTING THE PRICE.

The True Test of Salesmanship.

The real test of salesmanship is the ability to get the price. If you have confidence in the concern you work for and in the goods you sell, there is no reason why you should not stand pat on the price. I have known salesmen, says Harold A. Holmes, in the Caxton Magazine, who could make an admirable presentation; they could show their goods to the best possible advantage and hold the attention of the prospective customer up to the point where he asked for the price, and right here they always fell down. They name the price in a faltering way, as if they were ashamed of it, and with their nerve rapidly oozing away, suggest that the price is low. Sometimes, to make matters even worse, the salesman will sug-valuation and presumes to say what the goods shall sell for, you are cheapening the goods and reflecting discredit on your employer.

The salesman who permits himself to haggle over the price is lost. The buyer recognizes him as a putty man that he can pinch into any mold that he chooses. When a buyer suggests that he might buy some of your goods if you would cut the price, it is just the time for you to stand pat. By showing your independence you give the best proof that your line has the merits you claim for it. By letting a man see that you don't have to meet his figure you convince him that plenty of others are meeting yours. There never was a bigger fallacy than the notion that a salesman can't get along without occasional concessions to buyers.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

The postmasters testify to the decadence of St. Valentine's observance, but florists almost universally declare that more flowers were used February 14 this year than ever before. Some of the eastern cities suffered severely because of heavy storms February 14, business falling short of expectations, but over the rest of the country, there was a big increase in St. Valentine's day sales. In the news-letters in this week's Review it is generally reported that St. Valentine's day now has become established as one of the important special flower days, to be reckoned with when it comes around again. There was a notable increase in the demand for blooming plants, and baskets were used much more largely than heretofore. In many cities practically every cut flower was sold. Everywhere red was the favorite color. Corsages heretofore have been the popular St. Valentine's day purchase, but this year, while corsages sold well, they by no means monopolized attention.

St. Valentine's day was made by the florists themselves, insofar as flower sales go. A year or two ago it amounted to little in a flower way. The Review pointed out that the sentiment on which St. Valentine's day is founded afforded a splendid opportunity for working up flower sales, and showed how it could be done. The result was that thousands of florists advertised in newspapers, by mailing cards and by means of special window decorations to remind the public of the appropriateness of flowers for use as valentines. The publicity this year was far greater than that employed last year and the sales of flowers were correspondingly greater.

DUTCH BULBS FOR EASTER.

I have my hyacinth, tulip and narcissus bulbs buried outside. They are covered with about eight inches of soil and that is covered with manure. At this time they have pushed above the pots from one to two inches, and I am afraid they are coming too fast for Easter. How can I keep them back? Should I remove the manure and put on more soil, thus burying them deeper? The location is southern Pennsylvania. W. F.

Leave your bulbs alone; they are all right where they are. If they were not started one or two inches by this time, I am afraid they would make a sorry showing for Easter. Remove them to a coldframe about the middle of March.

carfare be sent so that she might come on to be married. A quantity of photographs, letters and other material was confiscated, so that apparently The Review has aided in the protection of the lovesick as well as being the means of checking the operations of one of the few florists in whom cupidity has overcome the sense of responsibility.

The Review does not undertake to decide the merits of controversies between reputable florists who disagree as to the quality or value of the stock they buy and sell, but it is keenly alive to see that all those who use its advertising columns conduct their business with its subscribers in such a manner as to be above suspicion.

gest that his house does not authorize him to cut the price. This suggestion arouses a suspicion in the mind of the prospective buyer that there is more than one price.

The buyer is always actuated by one motive—to get the lowest price possible. The salesman who names his price in a hesitating manner is always on the defensive, because he has opened up the way for the buyer to "beat down." Any supernumerary can dispose of goods if he permits the buyer to dictate the terms, but it takes a real salesman to defend his employer's right to a legitimate profit. Your firm puts a just valuation on its goods—if you submit to the buyer who ignores that

The majority will be much better and stockier if grown there than if placed in a greenhouse. Three weeks will suffice to bring any into flower, and even then it may be necessary to retard some in a cold cellar. Everything depends upon the weather we get in March and April. C. W.

CROP FOR COLD GREENHOUSE.

We have some houses in which we grow our late mums, and in which we later bench our mum stock plants for propagation. The stock plants require less space than blooming plants, thus leaving a vacancy of several hundred feet of bench space between November 25, when the mums are cut, and February 10 to 25, when our houses become crowded with spring stock. I should like to use this waste space for cuttings in sand and wish to know the kind of cuttings I can root where no more than a temperature of from 40 to 45 degrees can be had. Will pansies germinate well in this temperature? How about rooting verbenas cuttings? How about forcing gladioli, violets or some other crop? Could perennial phlox be propagated here? T. N.

Pansies would grow and flower satisfactorily in a temperature of 45 degrees, but seed germination would be slow. A temperature 5 degrees higher would be much more satisfactory. Single or double violets would probably be the most satisfactory crop you could grow to flower between November 25 and February 25. The singles would be better than the doubles, as they are hardier and could be kept in a cold-frame until you were ready to house them. If your Dakota climate were sufficiently mild they could be covered with hay or straw and kept outdoors until Thanksgiving. It is not advisable to let them have a lower temperature than 26 degrees before housing.

Gladioli could be grown in the temperature mentioned, but you could not plant and get the crop off earlier than April. If grown in flats they could later be moved to another house, when you needed the space they occupied. Cuttings of perennial phlox will root at a minimum of 45 degrees, especially if a little bottom heat is afforded. Some varieties of evergreens and deciduous shrubs could be propagated in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees at night; the trouble is, they would take longer to root, in most cases, than you could afford to wait. I think single violets would pay you the best, using Princess of Wales. C. W.

FLORISTS MEET AT ITHACA.

Farmers' week at Cornell University Agricultural College, at Ithaca, N. Y., February 9 to 14 failed to attract the usual attendance this year and the meeting of the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs also was slimly attended. President W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, laid aside his work as postmaster to be present, but Secretary John Young, of New York, was prevented by illness from attending. Papers were prepared for the occasion by Prof. A. C. Beal, Irwin Bertermann, Prof. M. A. Blake, Prof. E. A. White, Prof. A. C. Hotles and others.

The flower show which was a part of farmers' week was one of the most successful ever held. The hall was attractively decorated with southern smilax and artificial pink roses by one of the short course classes. A large number of varieties of potted plants and cut flowers were contributed by various commercial growers, and this made a valuable feature of the week. The hearty coöperation of the commercial people is gratifying to Prof. White, who considered the exhibit made by the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, as of special educational value. The following is a list of the exhibitors and the materials shown:

United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y.—Carnations Gloriosa, Enchantress, Pink Delight, White Enchantress, Benora, White Wonder, Beacon, Eureka and Rose-pink Enchantress; Roses Richmond and Mrs. Charles Russell.
W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, N. Y.—Carnation White Wonder; Roses Sweetheart and Irish Fire Flame; freesias.
Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, L. I.—Carnation Matchless.
Anton Schultheis, College Point, N. Y.—Potted tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, malus, Tausendschon roses, azaleas, lilacs, camellias, ericas and chorisemas.
W. H. Siebrecht, Astoria, N. Y.—Collection of tulips and narcissi.
E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.—Carnations Beacon, Gloriosa, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Yellow Prince, Commodore, Benora, Pocahontas and White Wonder.
Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.—Carnations White Enchantress and Mrs. C. W. Ward; Roses Killarney, Richmond and My Maryland; Cattleya Trianae, narcissi and tulips.
S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Carnation Philadelphia.
E. C. Ludwig, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Collection of tulips and narcissi.
S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Large collection of florists' ribbons, pins and other retail supplies; cut flowers of narcissi, sweet peas, tulips, freesias and mignonette.
The Montgomery Co., Hadley, Mass.—Rose Hadley.

going thence to W. F. Launch, at New Galilee, Pa. In May, 1913, Pajonk went back to Mr. Klein, at Fairhaven, but in August he removed to Spartanburg, S. C., where he worked a few weeks for C. A. Moss. Then he made his unfortunate excursion west, landing in Chicago in September. He landed at 5433 North Seeley avenue, working for Peter Schousboe and other florists in the northwest part of the city.

Because of the vigilance of The Review, Pajonk's operations were cut short. He abandoned La Grange after only about three weeks, but the post-office inspectors have acquired a considerable number of letters, which will be held as evidence until after Pajonk's trial, when they will be returned to the writers. Anyone who has sent money to Pajonk, either as August Miller, La Grange, Ill., Albert Frei, Pittsburgh, or Fred Klein, Colona, Pa., should write to C. H. Clorahan, post-office inspector, Chicago, Ill., stating the facts.

One of the curious points established is that Pajonk has fifteen bank accounts, in eight small banks in Chicago and in seven banks at Pittsburgh. The combined balance is about $1,000.

Alleged Matrimonial Swindle.

The arrest of Pajonk got into the newspapers all over the country because the inspectors uncovered what they consider conclusive evidence that in addition to his operations among florists, he was working what they call a matrimonial swindle. They found papers to show that he was advertising in German papers as Miss Anna Klein and as Miss E. Schwartz, matrimonially inclined. It is asserted that when he got a nibble he sent a photograph of a good looking woman, representing it to be that of the advertiser, asking that

THE MEDAL OF MERIT.

The accompanying illustration was prepared from a photograph of the gold medal which was awarded to Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., for originating Carnation Beacon. The conditions under which the medal is awarded, by the American Carnation Society, are as follows: "Whenever a seedling variety shall manifest superiority, commercially, and maintain such superiority for three or more years, the directors may recommend that the originator be given a special gold medal, to be called the Medal of Merit." This medal is considered the highest honor that could be paid an originator and is supposed to be awarded only in exceptional cases. This is the first medal awarded under this provision, although it was adopted at the convention in Washington, D. C., in 1908.

GETTING THE PRICE.

The True Test of Salesmanship.

The real test of salesmanship is the ability to get the price. If you have confidence in the concern you work for and in the goods you sell, there is no reason why you should not stand pat on the price. I have known salesmen, says Harold A. Holmes in the Caxton Magazine, who could make an admirable presentation; they could show their goods to the best possible advantage and hold the attention of the prospective customer up to the point where he asked for the price, and right here they always fell down. They name the price in a faltering way, as if they were ashamed of it, and with their nerve rapidly oozing away, suggest that the price is low. Sometimes, to make matters even worse, the salesman will sug-valuation and presumes to say what the goods shall sell for, you are cheapening the goods and reflecting discredit on your employer.

The salesman who permits himself to haggle over the price is lost. The buyer recognizes him as a putty man that he can pinch into any mold that he chooses. When a buyer suggests that he might buy some of your goods if you would cut the price, it is just the time for you to stand pat. By showing your independence you give the best proof that your line has the merits you claim for it. By letting a man see that you don't have to meet his figure you convince him that plenty of others are meeting yours. There never was a bigger fallacy than the notion that a salesman can't get along without occasional concessions to buyers.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

The postmasters testify to the decadence of St. Valentine's observance, but florists almost universally declare that more flowers were used February 14 this year than ever before. Some of the eastern cities suffered severely because of heavy storms February 14, business falling short of expectations, but over the rest of the country there was a big increase in St. Valentine's day sales. In the news-letters in this week's Review it is generally reported that St. Valentine's day now has become established as one of the important special flower days, to be reckoned with when it comes around again. There was a notable increase in the demand for blooming plants, and baskets were used much more largely than heretofore. In many cities practically every cut flower was sold. Everywhere red was the favorite color. Corsages heretofore have been the popular St. Valentine's day purchase, but this year, while corsages sold well, they by no means monopolized attention.

St. Valentine's day was made by the florists themselves, insofar as flower sales go. A year or two ago it amounted to little in a flower way. The Review pointed out that the sentiment on which St. Valentine's day is founded afforded a splendid opportunity for working up flower sales, and showed how it could be done. The result was that thousands of florists advertised in newspapers, by mailing cards and by means of special window decorations to remind the public of the appropriateness of flowers for use as valentines. The publicity this year was far greater than that employed last year and the sales of flowers were correspondingly greater.

DUTCH BULBS FOR EASTER.

I have my hyacinth, tulip and narcissus bulbs buried outside. They are covered with about eight inches of soil and that is covered with manure. At this time they have pushed above the pots from one to two inches, and I am afraid they are coming too fast for Easter. How can I keep them back? Should I remove the manure and put on more soil, thus burying them deeper? The location is southern Pennsylvania. W. F.

Leave your bulbs alone; they are all right where they are. If they were not started one or two inches by this time, I am afraid they would make a sorry showing for Easter. Remove them to a coldframe about the middle of March.

gest that his house does not authorize him to cut the price. This suggestion arouses a suspicion in the mind of the prospective buyer that there is more than one price.

The buyer is always actuated by one motive, to get the lowest price possible. The salesman who names his price in a hesitating manner is always on the defensive, because he has opened up the way for the buyer to "beat down." Any supernumerary can dispose of goods if he permits the buyer to dictate the terms, but it takes a real salesman to defend his employer's right to a legitimate profit. Your firm puts a just valuation on its goods, if you submit to the buyer who ignores that infatigable he sent so that she might come on to be married. A quantity of photographs, letters and other material was confiscated, so that apparently The Review has aided in the protection of the lovers, as well as being the means of checking the operations of one of the few florists in whom cupidity has overcome the sense of responsibility.

The Review does not undertake to decide the merits of controversies between reputable florists who disagree as to the quality or value of the stock they buy and sell, but it is keenly alive to see that all those who use its advertising columns conduct their business with its subscribers in such a manner as to be above suspicion.

A Part of the Cut Flower Display at Ithaca During the Meeting of the Federation of New York Floral Clubs.

The majority will be much better and stockier if grown there than if placed in a greenhouse. Three weeks will suffice to bring any into flower, and even then it may be necessary to retard some in a cold cellar. Everything depends upon the weather we get in March and April. C. W.

CROP FOR COLD GREENHOUSE.

We have some houses in which we grow our late mums, and in which we later bench our mum stock plants for propagation. The stock plants require less space than blooming plants, thus leaving a vacancy of several hundred feet of bench space between November 25, when the mums are cut, and February 10 to 25, when our houses become crowded with spring stock. I should like to use this waste space for cuttings in sand and wish to know the kind of cuttings I can root where no more than a temperature of from 40 to 45 degrees can be had. Will pansies germinate well in this temperature? How about rooting verbenum cuttings? How about forcing gladioli, violets or some other crop? Could perennial phlox be propagated here? T. N.

Pansies would grow and flower satisfactorily in a temperature of 45 degrees, but seed germination would be slow. A temperature 5 degrees higher would be much more satisfactory. Single or double violets would probably be the most satisfactory crop you could grow to flower between November 25 and February 25. The singles would be better than the doubles, as they are harder and could be kept in a cold frame until you were ready to house them. If your Dakota climate were sufficiently mild they could be covered with hay or straw and kept outdoors until Thanksgiving. It is not advisable to let them have a lower temperature than 25 degrees before housing.

Gladioli could be grown in the temperature mentioned, but you could not plant and get the crop off earlier than April. If grown in flats they could later be moved to another house, when you needed the space they occupied. Cuttings of perennial phlox will root at a minimum of 45 degrees, especially if a little bottom heat is afforded. Some varieties of evergreens and deciduous shrubs could be propagated in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees at night; the trouble is, they would take longer to root, in most cases, than you could afford to wait. I think single violets would pay you the best, using Princess of Wales. C. W.

FLORISTS MEET AT ITHACA.

Farmers' week at Cornell University Agricultural College, at Ithaca, N. Y., February 9 to 14 failed to attract the usual attendance this year and the meeting of the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs also was thinly attended. President W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, laid aside his work as postmaster to be present, but Secretary John Young, of New York, was prevented by illness from attending. Papers were prepared for the occasion by Prof. A. C. Beal, Irwin Bertermann, Prof. M. A. Blake, Prof. E. A. White, Prof. A. C. Hotles and others.

The flower show which was a part of farmers' week was one of the most successful ever held. The hall was attractively decorated with southern smilax and artificial pink roses by one of the short course classes. A large number of varieties of potted plants and cut flowers were contributed by various commercial growers, and this made a valuable feature of the week. The hearty cooperation of the commercial people is gratifying to Prof. White, who considered the exhibit made by the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, as of special educational value. The following is a list of the exhibitors and the materials shown:

HAVE YOU TOLD UNCLE SAM ABOUT YOUR INCOME?

Flourishing Florists must file their income tax returns before Monday, March 1, or pay a fine of from $20 to $1000

THIS article will not be of interest to any florist who cleared less than $2,500 in the last ten months of 1913, but to those who are liable to the new income tax, and who have not yet done anything about it, this hint will be timely. The negligent are liable to fine after March 1. The fine can not be less than $20 and it may be as much as $1,000.

The law will hit a lot of florists, and it will prove more than the work of a few moments to prepare a return that will give the taxpayer the benefit of his legal exemptions and at the same time stand the scrutiny of those who look out for the government's interests.

Who Must Make Returns.

If you have already obtained from the collector of internal revenue in your district a blank for making the return, designated as Form 1040, you will have seen that, like all official documents, it has an imposing front, but, for use, the proper place to start is at the back. On the fourth page are instructions, and the first paragraph states that the return shall be made by every citizen of, and every person residing in, the United States who had a net income of $3,000 for the taxable year. But as the taxable year of 1913 comprises only the last ten months, from March 1 to December 31, the law really applies to all who had a net income of $2,500 in the last ten months of 1913.

Read the instructions if you want to; if you don't, begin filling in page 2 at once.

The reproductions of pages of the return given herewith show how A. F. Lorst filled out his blank.

How to Schedule.

The only money this florist received as a "salary, wage or compensation for personal services" was $80 he received for contributing a weekly news-letter to The Review and $40 for some lectures he gave before women's clubs, etc. This makes a total of $120 on line 1. Referring to his books, he finds the total receipts at his retail store for the ten months were $18,600. On some real estate deals he made a profit of $1,500, which is entered with the business receipts on line 2. From the rent of the rooms over his store he received $300 during the ten months and this goes on the next line. On the outskirts of the town is a greenhouse plant in which he is a silent partner; his share of the profits, not the total receipts, of the concern was $2,000. The $4,000 the partners cleared on the greenhouses was expended in the erection of new glass at the plant and A. F. Lorst received none of the profits, but the whole of his share, $2,000, must be entered under the head of "gains and profits derived from partnership business."

Being a thrifty person, our taxpayer has saved some money, which he invested in bonds and mortgages. In the ten months' period he received $600 interest from these, but $50 of this was bond interest that was taxed at source after November 1. So he enters $550 on line 5 under the heading A and $550 under B. It was not long ago that a neighbor who had moved to Canada interested him in a Canadian corporation, in which he invested some money, from which last year he received $200; this finds a place on the next line.

He received $60 last year as his share of the income on certain real estate, which, according to his father's will, is not to be divided until two nephews of the taxpayer, orphans before their grandfather's death, shall be of age. This $60 is entered on line 7 as his income received from fiduciaries, the last word being merely a long-winded legal name for a trustee or executor. As interest on his bank account he received $40, which he enters on line 8, as the source is not specified elsewhere on the page. To the totals of the two columns, A and B, he adds $120, which he received from stock in a corporation which paid a corporation tax last fall. His gross income is therefore $23,540.

General Deductions Large.

A. F. Lorst was required to put down the total receipts from his business as part of his gross income. Now on page 3, under the head of general deductions, he enters first the expense of carrying on his business. Salaries, stock, running expenses, etc., make, according to his books, a total of $14,200. He has several notes and mortgages out and pays on them interest amounting to $445. His last year's taxes were $280. An automobile, on which he did not have sufficient insurance to cover his loss, was completely destroyed by fire last August. The loss, $700, is entered with the preceding items under general deductions. He tried to clean up his books last fall and found $420 worth of debts which, either by legal proceedings or declarations of insolvency on the debtors' part, were proved to be worthless. This, with an allowance of $1,800 for wear and tear and depreciation of his property, brought the total under general deductions to $17,845.

Turning to that imposing front page, our taxpayer, after filling in his name and address, enters the total of page 2, $23,540, as gross income and the total of page 3, $17,845, as general deductions. The difference, or net income, is $5,695. The $120 received from stock of a corporation which had been taxed, and $50 on which the tax had been paid at the source are next deducted, as well as the specific exemption of $3,333.33, for our taxpayer as a married man. It should be made clear, though it is not by the report blanks, that the specific exemption this time is only $2,500 or $3,333.33 for single and married persons respectively, as only five-sixths of the stated exemption of $3,000 and $4,000 is allowed, because the return covers only ten months, instead of a full year. These three deductions amount to $3,503.33, leaving as the taxable income, $2,191.67. A. F. Lorist has, therefore, no need to bother about the few lines devoted to additional taxes on incomes of five and six figures. One per cent of his taxable income is easily figured and entered at the bottom of the page as $21.92.

If a wife has enough income of her own to bring the combined income of herself and husband into the taxable class, they both must file returns. If there is any doubt as to whether one's income is taxable, it is best to be on the safe side by filing a return. Though it may be a heavy tax on the brain, it will not afterward be felt so severely as would be the effect on that vital spot, the pocketbook, of a fine of $20 to $1,000.

GOLDEN SPURS NOT FLOWERING.

Will you tell me what is the matter with my Golden Spur narcissi? I brought some flats in before Christmas, putting them under the benches until the plants were from four to five inches high. I have been bringing some in every week. They have grown quite tall, but have no blooms. The buds that appear are like blisters and do not amount to anything. I have 1,500 bulbs and it looks as though nearly all of them are worthless. Do you think it was the fault of the bulbs?

J. G. S.

The trouble, probably, has been due to giving the Golden Spurs some wrong treatment. You do not say whether you are growing French, Guernsey or Dutch bulbs. The French bulbs are easily forced for Christmas and the early part of January. The Guernseys immediately follow them. The Dutch, which are by far the most largely grown, cannot be flowered with success earlier than January 20 and it is a common error to start these too early; such batches always show a greater or less percentage of blistered buds. I think your later batches will flower all right. Too early housing, before the growths are sufficiently started and when the roots are inadequate, invariably results in at least partial failure. Also be careful not to overwater your plants; under benches they are liable to get considerable drip, and nothing will more effectively spoil them.

C. W.

TREATMENT FOR AMARYLLIS.

I have a lot of amaryllises, secured last year as blooming bulbs, but only a few of them bloomed. I had them in a coldframe all summer and when I took them in last fall they were in splendid leaf. I placed them, in the pots, on the greenhouse floor, away from drip. They got no water except the moisture of the house. They have kept green all winter, although the soil is dry in the pots. A few of them showed signs of life, so I put them on a bench and watered slightly. What treatment do they need?

L. H.

Your treatment has been correct in nearly every respect, and, provided your bulbs are of real blooming size, there is no reason why a large proportion should not flower this season. It is not necessary to completely dry off the plants, as many imagine, but I like to have the plants lose most of their foliage. If you had put them on their sides last October or November, it would have been a little better for the plants, provided they could be in a fairly dry atmosphere, although if space would permit they could be kept on the bench right along.

Before starting up the plants, repotting should be done where necessary. If your bulbs were only potted last season, however, all they should require would seem to be the removal of some of the surface soil and a top dressing of fibrous loam and dried cow manure. Also, examine the drainage and see that it is all right. Start in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. The flower spikes will usually show before you need to place them on the bench. The flowering period is usually January, February and March, although they can be had in December and April. Amaryllises are of easy culture. In summer they are best plunged in a bed of tanbark, leaves, or cocoanut fiber refuse.

C. W.

Spanish Iris.

Continue to bring batches of Spanish iris into gentle heat, so as to ensure a steady succession of bloom. These bulbs are not infrequently planted in beds or benches in a cool house, but as they need to occupy such spaces a long time before flowering, a far better method of culture is to place them in flats five or six inches deep, where just as fine spikes can be produced, and the plants can be better advanced or retarded. The latter part of March is as early as iris can be had in flower. As it will not stand hard forcing, a temperature of 50 degrees at night should not be exceeded.

Lilies for Easter.

Just a few words as a reminder to the many growers of lilies for Easter. Remember that we are now in February, and that Lent comes February 24. If your plants are to be on time for Easter, which comes April 12, you should be able to see and count the buds plainly when Lent arrives. If your plants seem early, it is easy to keep them a trifle cooler. On the other hand, it is not so easy to have late ones on time. Therefore, give more heat now. In the case of giganteum let the temperature run up as high as 65 degrees at night. Usually this variety is quite dwarf and more heat will help to lengthen its stem, which is something of an advantage. Continue to weed out and throw away any diseased plants; it does not pay to hold on to these. Give additional space to all plants as needed, and remove the more backward ones to the warmer end of your house. Be sure to keep aphids in check by either spraying or fumigation.

Fuchsias.

Kept-over fuchsias which have been resting can now be started up in heat and sprayed freely. They will soon produce an abundance of cuttings. These root quickly and will make good plants for spring sales, as they make rapid growth. Fuchsias cannot be depended upon here as bedding plants except to a limited extent, but in piazza boxes in partial shade, or planted outdoors where an occasional watering can be given and where they can have the benefit of shade from trees or buildings, they can be depended upon to flower all summer. Any location which suits tuberous-rooted begonias will prove equally good for fuchsias.

Spiræas.

Spiræas, or astilbes, as they are botanically termed, make desirable Easter plants, and, as they can be bought cheaply and no particular skill is needed to produce good plants, they can be profitably sold at a moderate price. They all like plenty of heat and abundant moisture. Given these conditions and a little care in occasionally spacing them apart, it is a simple matter to produce fine plants. The old S. Japonica is now largely discarded in favor of such improved sorts as Gladstone, astilboides, floribunda, grandiflora, etc. All these latter must go into heat at once to be in on time. A temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night and plenty of water will cause them to grow rapidly. As the flowers expand it is best to give them a somewhat cooler house.

S. Queen Alexandra requires, with other pink and lavender varieties, a longer season than the aforesaid white ones, and Easter stock should have been started early in February. They do not flower so well for Easter as a little later in the season, but their beautiful colors commend them to critical buyers. If spiræas are in active growth, it is safe to stand them in pans of water. There is no fear of this causing any loss of foliage, as in the case of marguerites and hydrangeas. Spiræas are perhaps the only plants which are not injured if stood in saucers kept full of water. All the pink sorts should have some shade while opening; bright sun will bleach their flowers almost white.

Lilium Candidum.

Far fewer of the Madonna lilies are grown for Easter than of the Easter lilies proper. Many annually are disgusted after buying big, handsome bulbs which produce weak stalks, carrying a few miserable, narrow-petaled flowers. If growers would but insist on having candidums from the north of France, and taboo the brand now commonly sold, they would soon find an increasing call for candidums, for, if the true broad-petaled variety is once seen properly grown, no substitute can ever be tolerated, and pots of this, the purest, most regal, and delightfully fragrant of lilies, would sell on sight. Candidums will not stand hard forcing; under such conditions the flowers would come puny and half sized. Do not exceed 55 degrees at night, and 50 degrees will suit them better. If you can see and count the buds five weeks prior to Easter, you can depend upon their being in on time.

Calceolarias.

Calceolarias must all be in flowering pots now, or they will be somewhat late. Give them the coolest house you have; anything clear of actual frost will be suitable. Keep the plants well elevated to the light; spray lightly on warm, clear days; fumigate once a week to keep aphids in check, and they will grow satisfactorily. Pinching of the rugosa varieties should now be discontinued. These plants can be carried along easily until the middle or end of May. For Memorial day trade, C. Golden Gem and C. Stewarti, a yellow hybrid between the herbaceous and shrubby sections, are invaluable, and the wonder is that florists do not give more attention to them.

GERANIUM CUTTINGS DYING.

Will you please tell me the cause of my trouble? I bought rooted cuttings of geraniums and transplanted them into 3½-inch pots. I have kept them moist and the temperature up to 65 degrees, and we have lost about one-third of them. Was it because the plants were forced? F. G.

I am not at all surprised at one-third of your geraniums dying; I am surprised that a much larger proportion did not die. In the first place, 3½-inch pots are far too large for mere rooted cuttings. It would have been all right to have used 2¼-inch pots and shifted the plants to 3½-inch pots after they had become well rooted in the smaller pots. The cuttings in such large pots could not take up the plant food in so large a compass, and, being constantly moist, they first lost their roots and later damped off. A temperature of 65 degrees for young geraniums is far too high; 50 degrees at night is ample, and they must have plenty of fresh air and not be treated like tropical subjects. Always water sparingly until the plants are well rooted around.

NEW ZONALE GERANIUM.

We are sending one truss of a geranium. Many florists have looked this over and have pronounced it to be a new one, and we have seen nothing just like it. You will note we had to cut the bloom down to get it into the box. In growth it has all the properties of the parent, Ricard, being strong and robust and standing up well under all conditions. It is a free bloomer the year around. We now have plants that are never without from one to four large trusses of flowers, and they are exceptionally good for Christmas flowering. We have had chances to sell all the stock, but we will not dispose of it, as we feel from the various opinions given that it will pay us best to work with it and get a good stock. We should like to have your opinion on this bloom. E. G.

The geranium truss arrived perfectly fresh. It is certainly well worth retaining. The truss is large and the color brilliant. It seems to be quite distinct, and I should say you would do well to propagate it as largely as possible. C. W.

STREAK DISEASE ON SWEET PEAS.

I should like to know how to get rid of the disease called streak disease of sweet peas. Could the richness of the soil have anything to do with it, and what are the first signs of it? What, if anything, will prevent it? C. I.

The cause of the streak disease is unknown, nor is any remedy yet known for it. At one time it was believed that the punctures of aphides caused the disease. This has been disproved, but it has been further proved that they carry the infection from diseased to healthy plants. Plants showing the disease should be pulled up promptly and burned. The National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain has recently offered a cash prize of 10 guineas and a special gold medal to any person who can prove that he or she has a certain cure for the streak disease, and both here and abroad the experiment stations are investigating this malady, but, as before said, comparatively little is as yet known about it. C. W.

SWEET PEAS UNDER GLASS.

I should like to get some information about the culture of sweet peas. We have a house, 14x100, running north and south, without benches. There is enough head room for sweet peas anywhere in the house. What varieties would you suggest to be sown at once, and how much manure should be mixed in the soil? How much seed will be needed for each row, and how far apart should they be thinned out? How long will it be from sowing to picking, and how long will the picking last? We can give plenty of air. Is a temperature of 45 degrees at night enough? What diseases trouble sweet peas most, and how can we prevent them? H. Y. S.

Give the border a liberal coating of rotten manure; if you have cow manure, it is preferable to horse manure. Let it be three to four inches thick. Dig the border at least two spits deep, mixing the manure in well. In your somewhat narrow house you cannot grow more than three rows. Let one go directly down the center, the others five feet away. This arrangement will allow a 2-foot path along the sides.

Among the best of the true winter-flowering varieties are Christmas Pink, Mrs. F. J. Dolansky, Mrs. Wm. Sim, Watchung, Mrs. A. Wallace and Florence Denzer. These are all grandiflora varieties. There are new Spencer winter-blooming varieties offered by A. C. Zvolanek in large variety, which bloom freely, but the seed is still high priced. However, you might sow your center row with Countess Spencer and White Spencer, and the other rows with the earlier varieties. The Spencers will come in nicely later on. The midwinter varieties will start blooming in eight to ten weeks, and, with good care, they will flower for three months. Countess Spencer and White Spencer will be later, but will give you much finer blooms when they do come. For three rows, each 100 feet long, sow one and one-half pounds of seed. Of course, you will not need anything like all the plants which will germinate. Thin them out three to four inches apart, and you will get better branched and more vigorous plants. If half the seed were used, you would probably have sufficient plants, but if you wish to economize on seeds, sow in flats and later transplant the seedlings three to four inches apart.

A temperature of 45 degrees at night will be all right for a start, but when flower buds appear advance it to from 50 to 52 degrees at night. Several diseases affect sweet peas, but none so seriously under glass as outdoors, as moisture, temperature, ventilation, etc., can be regulated to suit the plants. If seedlings are left too thick or hilled up, stem-rot may occur. Streak disease is not so common inside as outdoors. Bud dropping is due to excessive feeding, too low a temperature or too much moisture. It, however, is most common in midwinter. Mildew is caused by cold draughts; careful ventilation will prevent it. Aphids must be controlled by fumigation or spraying. Red spider sometimes appears, especially near heating pipes; an arid condition favors its spread. C. W.

SWEET PEA BUDS DROPPING.

We started sweet peas the latter part of August in solid beds with cinder bottoms for drainage. We enriched the soil with rotted horse manure. The sweet peas grow well and have good flowers, but suddenly the buds dry up and we do not get any flowers for some time. We have a carnation house next to them which we fumigate with Nicotice. Will the fumes hurt the sweet pea flower buds, or what do you think is the cause of the buds drying up? The varieties of sweet peas we use are: Mrs. Alex. Wallace, Mrs. Sim, Snowbird, Dolansky and Zvolanek. R. K.

There is always more or less danger of sweet pea buds dropping in midwinter, when we have our most severe weather, accompanied frequently by long dark spells, and unless houses are modern and of best construction, snow may lie on the roofs a considerable time. With such climatic conditions to contend with, a loss of buds is almost certain unless the temperature of your house can be kept up to 50 degrees as a minimum. To correct the trouble, let it run 2 or 3 degrees higher. It can advance to 60 degrees on cloudy days and to 65 or 70 degrees on clear days. Your soil was evidently well prepared, but extreme care in watering is needed from December to February. It is better to water too little rather than too much. The fumes from Nicotice should not harm the sweet peas, although they will not stand as strong fumigation as many other plants. C. W.

THE COST OF LABIATA.

The price of freshly imported plants of Cattleya labiata has been steadily advancing for years. Where one once could buy a case of cattleyas for $40, now he is asked to pay $75, or even $80. Great as is the difference between these figures, it does not indicate the full advance, for the plants which were supplied at the lower price were much finer than the plants now to be had. When labiata was $40 per case, the case contained forty plants. Now the same size of case contains about sixty-five plants, much smaller and much less worth while having.

There is a possibility that some fortunate individual will discover a new source of supply for Cattleya labiata, but if this does not come to pass, those in touch with the situation feel sure the price will keep on mounting until it gets to the point where no commercial grower can touch labiata. Indeed, already the reluctance of the commercial man is seen in the fact that the cut flower markets are not nearly so well supplied with the blooms during the labiata season as they are at other times during the year, when the cheaper varieties are in bloom.

FUMIGATING ORCHIDS.

The oracular statements made by horticultural inspectors and commissioners are often amusing to a thinking man, but, unfortunately, they are also extremely disturbing to one who has business to transact. Take, for instance, the case of fumigating orchids for cattleya fly, noted on page 18 of The Review of February 5. What in the name of all that is incomprehensible is the reason for fumigating orchids that are supposed to be, or suspected of being, infested with fly? It might, and probably would, seriously damage the plants, but, unless there happened to be a chance mature fly loose in the cases, it certainly would not harm the fly any.

The embryo fly in imported cattleyas is usually safely ensconced in the base of the old bulbs or in the flower sheaths, absolutely out of the way of fumes of hydrocyanic acid gas or gas of any other kind that may be turned in by the worthy, painstaking and active, but often misguided officers, who are zealous in guarding against any possible foreign importation of pests, but are frequently shortsighted when it comes to observing the many pests running wild in their own country. The writer has suffered more than most growers from the depredations of the cattleya fly, but those who think its numbers will be lessened by fumigation of the plants at ports of entry have surely to "guess again."

H. R. Richards.

[The article on this subject in The Review of February 5 sought to convey the idea that the federal horticultural board had "guessed again" and had abandoned the idea under consideration, of requiring fumigation of imported cattleya plants.—Ed.]

SLOW GROWTH AFTER CROP.

I should like to know how to make Killarneys break better after cutting a crop of blooms. The weather has been cloudy and I have been running them on the dry side. I pinched them to get long stems for the Christmas crop and cut beyond this pinching to two eyes. Now the top eye only starts and some of them go blind. I have plenty of half-rotted cow and horse manure. I also have plenty of fresh cow manure, if you think it could be used. The soil is a good clay sod. I run the temperature at 58 to 60 degrees at night, 65 degrees on cloudy days and 72 degrees on sunny days.

I have also had trouble with Melody. The plants have not moved for two months and most of the last growth they did make went blind. These were young stock, benched in June. I also have some Richmonds that act in the same way. I should like to know whether the cloudy weather is the cause, or something in the growing.

J. A. & S.

The unusually long spell of cloudy weather has shown its effect on all stock in the greenhouses, and roses have suffered about as much as any. During this weather the temperature in the houses has been kept between 58 and 64 degrees for whole weeks, to prevent soft growth, and the consequence is that the roses are taking a rest. As soon as we get some sunshine and can give the plants a higher temperature during the day, they will no doubt get busy again. While most roses made some growth after the crop was cut, the growth naturally was weak and a large percentage of the shoots went blind. This blind wood will help to strengthen the plants, support the new growth and encourage the plants to break from the bottom.

As soon as the roses start new growth they will require feeding. A light dose of half rotted cow manure, well dissolved with water and spread thinly over the benches, will be beneficial, but while the plants are standing still it will be well to omit any feeding.

W. J. K.

A START IN ROSES.

We have had experience with carnations, but wish now to try roses. We wish to know what would be the best commercial varieties to grow in a house 28½x100, containing four 5-foot benches. What proportion of each color is likely to be needed to supply ordinary store work? Will good light soil, that produces good carnations, do for roses? How far apart should roses be planted? Do grafted plants grow more readily under a beginner's treatment than own-root stock? Are there any good, practical books on rose growing, as useful as Ward's book is to carnation growers?

T. K. G.

A house 28½x100, containing four 5-foot benches, would hold about 1,500 rose plants, planted five rows to the bench and sixteen inches apart in the row, or seventy-five plants in a row. The safest varieties for a beginner to plant would be Killarney, White Killarney and Mrs. Aaron Ward, in the proportion of one-half Killarney and one-quarter each of White Killarney and Ward. The Wards should be planted in the warmest part of the house.

The soil for roses should be heavier than a light carnation soil. If the subsoil is clay, about one-third of this, mixed with two-thirds of the light soil, would make a good mixture for roses, with plenty manure, preferably cow manure, and the addition of some bone meal at the time of planting. Though grafted stock costs more than own-root, the varieties mentioned grow so much better and more quickly at the start if grafted, that it is good economy to buy the grafted plants.

As to a practical book on rose growing, the one best suited to your purpose would probably be "Commercial Rose Culture, Under Glass and Outdoors," by Eber Holmes; price, $1.50. It is for sale by The Review, as is also the little book entitled "The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing," which costs 25 cents.

W. J. K.

OUTDOOR ROSES IN THE SOUTH.

I want to plant out 100 roses for cut flowers during summer, here in central Alabama. Will you please tell me what size of plants to purchase for quick results? Would stock from 4-inch pots be large enough? Give me the names of a few good red, white, pink and yellow varieties. What kinds would do best in our soil, which is a heavy clay loam?

H. A. C.

Stock from 4-inch pots, if kept well mulched and watered, would give you fair results, but if you are willing to pay a little more I would advise buying grafted outdoor-grown plants. These have a vigor vastly superior to plants raised from cuttings. The hybrid tea roses will be the best for you to grow, as they are perpetual bloomers. You will get better results from your heavy soil if some sand is incorporated with it. A few hybrid perpetuals are tolerably free-flowering, including Frau Karl Druschki, white, and Mrs. John Laing and Mrs. Sharman-Crawford, pink.

Excellent hybrid teas are: Caroline Testout, salmon pink; Gruss an Teplitz, light crimson; Double Pink Killarney, flesh pink; Double White Killarney; Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, cream, shaded lemon; Mme. A. Chatenay, carmine rose; Mrs. Aaron Ward, rich yellow; Sunburst, coppery orange; Antoine Rivoire, soft peach; Lady Pirrie, coppery reddish salmon, and Rhea Reid, rich red.

Maman Cochet, light pink, and its pure white form are persistent bloomers, and Clothilde Soupert, with pearly white outer petals and a rosy center, flowers all summer.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met Monday, February 9, and took up various important questions relative to the coming exhibition. The judges were chosen, subject to their acceptance. The Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard gold medal will be awarded Monday, March 23. This gold medal is a special prize provided for in perpetuity by the late Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard, of Washington, and the provisions are that it is to be given once in five years to the raiser or originator of the best rose introduced in the five years previous to the award. The rose is to be of American origin. This will be the first occasion on which the prize will be awarded.

A special prize of $25 was offered by Treasurer Harry O. May for the best twenty-five blooms of any undissemated variety of rose. The Waban Rose Conservatories offer a prize of $25 for the best fifty Russell roses, and a special prize is offered by the executive committee of the American Rose Society, the particular object of which is to be determined later.

The annual business meeting of the society will be held Monday evening, March 23, subject to adjournment. Last year the attractions at the Grand Central Palace were so great that it was difficult to get anything to counterbalance the attractions of the general exhibit, and it was deemed advisable to omit everything in the way of papers.

The society will have a special booth, where any business of the American Rose Society may be transacted; this will be an improvement over conditions existing in that respect last year. Entries for all the rose classes should be forwarded to reach the secretary at Beacon, N. Y., not later than March 10. Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., has accepted the position of manager for the rose exhibition. Treasurer Harry O. May will be assistant to the secretary during exhibition week. From present appearances it seems as though there will be much interest taken in getting up a fine show. President Wallace R. Pierson is sparing no time or expense personally to persuade everyone, large and small, who grows roses, to become a part of the exhibition and force of the American Rose Society. S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, is in charge of the executive committee's prize.

Benjamin Hammond, Secretary.

IN A MISSOURI STORE.

The Archias Seed Store, of Sedalia, Mo., has behind its office and salesroom a conservatory for the display of potted plants, which materially assists its sales. The accompanying illustration gives a view of this conservatory, as well as of some members of the sales force, who likewise do their part to materially assist sales.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

This city has been experiencing its first real taste of consistent winter weather. For the last week it has been cold and cloudy, yet there was less snow here than in many of the neighboring cities. Valentine business in some instances was quite satisfactory, despite the extremely cold weather of the day, while other florists report a falling off in trade. From the postoffice records it seems that the idea of giving valentines is becoming obsolete, and this may account for the fact that flowers were not in such great demand. It is up to florists to prevent the day from languishing into oblivion, and by persistent advertising they can make it as great a flower day as the other festivals, such as Easter, Memorial day and Mothers' day. Nothing else lends itself so easily to an appropriate celebration of St. Valentine's day as flowers, because they express in a better way than words the tender sentiments of love and friendship. It only remains for the florists to make a united effort to combine the two ideas.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club, which was a lively and businesslike one, the club decided to establish a blue book, in order to keep in closer touch with their credit customers and to prevent much of the loss that is sustained by local florists from bad accounts. Each florist has agreed to furnish his fellow florists with a list of his bad accounts, which will enable all to be on their guard and will protect them from dead beats.

Various Notes.

Snow which had begun to thaw on an overhanging roof loosened all at once and fell on the greenhouses of Schramm Bros., on Cherry street, breaking considerable glass and destroying some choice azaleas. This firm reports a splendid increase in St. Valentine's day business. This was due in a great measure, according to Frank Schramm, the hustling manager of the concern, to the thorough manner in which preparations were made to advertise the day and to attract business. A beautiful folder in colors was sent out and was backed up by attractive advertisements in the daily papers. By these methods every special valentine box was disposed of before the day was over.

With the outside temperature 5 degrees below zero, the greenhouses of George Bayer were visited by an accident that mused up things generally. There was a boiler explosion that blew off the fire doors and it took the efforts of part of the Toledo fire department to subdue the flames. Luckily, no one was injured.

Miss Helen Patten leaves this week to attend the Mardi Gras at New Orleans, after which she will visit Gulfport, Miss., Chattanooga, Tenn., and parts of Louisiana. She will be accompanied by Miss C. B. Flick, of Fort Wayne.

A. C. K.

The business of the Art Floral & Decorating Co., of Toledo, has been sold to C. W. Mordoff, F. E. Thompson and others. Mr. Mordoff is an expert sweet pea grower, having 10,000 square feet of glass devoted to this flower at his establishment in Maumee, O. It is his plan to increase his glass to 30,000 feet, the balance to be used for roses and carnations, and the fifteen acres of ground to be devoted to gladioli, asters and other flowers. Mr. Thompson, formerly manager of the Swan Floral Co., of Lima, O., is an expert grower and landscape gardener. It is the intention of the new concern to sell at both wholesale and retail. Henry E. Klunder will be manager of both departments.

OBITUARY.

L. Baumann.

The death is announced of L. Baumann, president of L. Baumann & Co., Inc., of Chicago, as occurring at his home at Monrovia, Cal., Sunday, February 15.

Mr. Baumann was a self-made man of wide acquaintance in the trade. He was born at Baden-Baden, Germany, forty-two years ago. Possessed of a keen commercial instinct and well grounded in business training, he came to America upon attaining his majority as the representative of a European house dealing in decorating materials. Exactly half his life, therefore, had been spent in selling articles of the class included under the general term of florists' supplies. Fourteen years ago the firm of Richter & Baumann was established, but two years later F. H. Gelderman purchased the Richter interest and the partnership was turned into a corporation under the name of L. Baumann & Co. The growth of the business since that time has been not only steady but rapid. For some years Mr. Baumann devoted a considerable part of his time to selling goods on the road, establishing a personal acquaintance with florists all over the country, but later the buying end occupied practically all his attention, necessitating his spending some months of each year in Europe. Two years ago failing health caused Mr. Baumann to retire from active participation in the business and to remove to the milder climate of California, where he waged an unsuccessful battle against tuberculosis.

Mr. Baumann leaves a wife and two young children. The body now is on the way from Monrovia to Chicago and interment will take place Sunday afternoon in Rosehill cemetery, with services at the chapel, probably at 2:30.

Middletown, Del.—Eliza E. Steele is now conducting the business formerly run under the name of Edward J. Steele.

Clyde, O.—The Clyde Carnationary, which is owned by the W. E. Hall estate, is recovering from the cold weather of last week. No loss was suffered, even when the temperature outside went down to 4 below, although the night man had to call for help at 3 a. m. one morning.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE necessity for filing a statement of income with the government seems likely to result in improved bookkeeping on the part of a good many florists.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

IF the spring bedding season does not afford a larger volume of business than any in the past, there will be a lot of disappointed growers. The stock in preparation surely will break all records for quantity.

LENT begins next Wednesday, February 25, but it is not a matter of large importance to the trade as in earlier years. Recently Lent has had comparatively little effect on the sale of plants and cut flowers.

A NEW rose really receives no decisive test until the second year it is on the market. Those who like the way it starts the first season usually use their plants for stock purposes and the winter blooming qualities do not become known until a year later.

DID it ever occur to you, dear reader, that there wouldn't be half so much disappointment in this world if buyers, instead of rushing at the cheapest offer, took time to consider that usually "the best is the cheapest in the long run," and that ordinarily a man's goods are worth little if any more than he asks for them?

IT certainly is true that trade standards are higher now than they ever were before, and that a novelty of no more than average merit is difficult to distribute widely, but it nevertheless is just as true that the man with a new variety that marks a clearly apparent advance can get a larger sale than ever before was possible. The buying power of the trade never was so large as it is today.

"FAR, FAR AWAY."

A few people, located near the eastern seaboard, still appear to think that, because The Review is printed practically at the center of population of the United States, the paper would not be a good advertising medium for them. Great mistake! It makes no difference where a paper is PRINTED; the value lies in where it is READ. How could there be a better publishing point than the center of population? There couldn't be, and isn't. From the center The Review reaches both coasts quickly. No matter how far away a seller is, The Review is nearest to the buyers. But let these Florida fern growers tell it; they are about as far away as anyone can get in that direction:

In sending check to cover your January bill, we wish to say we consider this expenditure the most profitable one we have. Through The Review, we certainly get the orders, all right.—Newell & Ustler, Apopka, Fla., February 9, 1914.

As if that were not enough, here is a letter from a New York advertiser who finds The Review "worth its weight in gold" to the man who wants to sell at wholesale. He also has found that it is not where a paper is printed, but where it is read, that counts. Read what he says:

Please do not print my ad of geraniums any more, for I have had the same experience as other advertisers who use classified ads in The Review. I should have had the ad cut out last issue, but did not have time to get word to you. I sold 34,000 plants on the first insertion, besides receiving a number of orders I could not fill. The Review certainly is some paper and worth its weight in gold to the man who wants to sell to the trade.—Wm. J. Nicklas, Allegany, N. Y., February 12, 1914.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

THE approach of St. Valentine's day awakened the market from the lethargy of the preceding week and gave two or three days' business that wholesalers generally report as the best ever experienced in February. The rate of increase that was noted last year was fairly well maintained and the trade is of the opinion that St. Valentine's day, not only in Chicago, but all through the wide territory that this city serves, has become established as one of the important special flower days, to be reckoned with in years to come.

While there was an excellent demand, generally speaking there was an abundance of stock. Certain lines developed shortages, as had been expected, but there were plenty of other flowers. Excellent crops of Richmond roses cleaned up quickly and carried with them the smaller lots of Milady and Rhea Reid, leaving orders unfilled. There was a call for more Beauties than could be supplied in good quality, but there were some low grade Beauties that were hard to sell. Yellow roses also were short of the demand, Ward, Sunburst and the little Cecile Brunner being in special request for corsage work. Red carnations also were far short of requirements.

With the exceptions noted, there were enough other flowers to meet all demands—and then some. Killarney was abundant, especially in the longer grades; any orders that were not filled in full were cut because the stock on hand was too fine to let go at the price. Carnations other than red were too numerous to clean up. A large part of the receipts continued of low grade and it was the soft, split and weak-stemmed

BEAUTIES

YOU WILL FIND NO FAULT WITH THE STOCK—NOR WITH THE PRICE

HERE are a lot of Beauties on the market at this time of year that do not come up to the quality demanded by the Retailers' customers, but we have no hesitancy in saying that OUR Beauties are first-class, especially the medium and long grades—good short Beauties are almost unheard of in February. If you have sale for good Beauties order of us. Let us help you build up your business.

SWEET PEAS

FANCY WINTER-BLOOMING SPENCERS

These Peas are called by various names. Some people call them Orchid-flowered Peas, others Butterfly Peas. In reality they are a winter-blooming section of the true Spencer type. We introduced these Peas to this market last season. They made a wonderful bit. The supply now is far larger than before. Can fill orders, usually without notice, always if time is given to get the stock in from the greenhouses.

CARNATIONS

For years it has been recognized that we have the highest average quality of any large supply of carnations—almost all of our stock will meet the needs of the most exacting buyer. It not only is good stock when it leaves us, but it is good stock when it reaches the out-of-town retailer—and it pleases HIS customers.

FANCY ROSES

You can get all the roses you need if you send your order to us. Not many short roses—ours are mostly long roses, stock that is second to none. If you want the best, order our SPECIALS. A full line flowers that were slow sale. The strictly fancy stock, such as Mrs. C. W. Ward and Pink Delight, sold clean at 3 cents to 4 cents. The bulk of the receipts this season again are Enchantress and white, with moderate quantities of Winsor and other medium pinks.

The greatest trouble was experienced with double violets. The fancy singles were not in large supply and cleaned up at fair prices, but the Hudson river stock was a glut, and some of it extremely poor. The week had started with zero weather, which shut off the sale of violets for street wear. This resulted in an accumulation, in the face of receipts that increased as the week progressed, which could not be cleaned up. All week long the wholesalers were trying to work off old violets and there were enough buyers willing to take them at a price so that it was impossible to get even fair figures for the fresh stock. Considering the shipments that were lost, the average price of the eastern violets was so low that St. Valentine's day will not be a pleasant memory for the Hudson river growers.

Even sweet peas were plentiful. The belated crops are gathering headway.

Some of the stock is fine. Daffodils, jonquils and valley also sold well. The miscellaneous flowers that can be used for filling in low-priced boxes sold well, including the tulips, which have been hanging fire. The few fancy bright-colored tulips have been doing well, but the short-stemmed white, pale La Reine and Murillo have been slow sale.

That the retailers had a good St. Valentine's day was shown by the way they bought late Saturday and on Sunday morning. But Sunday developed a blizzard shortly after the stores had stocked up for the day, which shut off all transient trade. The result was that the city demand was light February 16 and receipts, while somewhat curtailed, fully up to the shipping demand. The week started about the same way the preceding one did, but with no hope of so good a finish, since St. Valentine's day, like Christmas, comes but once a year.

The market has been bare of violets this week because of the big storm that swept over the Hudson river district February 14. No shipments arrived Monday or Tuesday. The result was that the leftover stock was sold out and the moderate quantities of local singles new being received found a fine market. Rose supplies are light. It is possible to find as many 12-cent and 15-cent roses as most buyers want, but not all orders can be filled for 5-cent to 8-cent roses, and nothing at all can be had below 4 cents.

Lent begins February 25, Ash Wednesday, but the trade in Chicago has ceased to regard the date as of much significance.

Various Notes.

There have been numerous reports of frozen flowers. In a few instances the express companies have left a wholesaler's well protected shipment outdoors until it was nipped, but most of the trouble has resulted from the careless way growers wrapped incoming stock. When flowers are shipped in a loose wood box lined with only a few thicknesses of newspaper, with anywhere from 20 to 40 degrees of frost in the air, it is not a matter of surprise that the express people are unable to prevent loss and refuse to take the blame.

The use of flowers as valentines in Chicago itself showed a marked increase this season. Seven of the retailers used strong display advertisements in the leading daily paper. The Fleischman Floral Co., as usual, went in strongest, but E. Wienhoeber Co., C. A. Samuelson, George Wittbold Co., Muir, John Mangel and A. Lange all made good showings, featuring flowers for valentines. Not only did these advertisers themselves get good increases in sales for the day, but so large a volume of flower advertising must have done a great deal to stimulate the business of those who did nothing themselves for that purpose beyond, perhaps, decorating the show window.

How retail florists are awakening to the possibilities of building business through advertising is shown by the success of the McNeff-Swenson Co., in the comparatively short time it has been specializing in this field. Mr. Swenson was writing advertising for local retail florists when he became impressed with the opportunity for a service national in its scope. He says that already accounts have been opened with 300 florists, located all over America, most of whom are using the company's series of monthly mailing cards, in some instances as few as 100 a month, but in one case as many as 20,000.

One of the largest jobs of the season was the decoration of St. James church and the residence of the bride, February 12, for the Spoor-Broome wedding. The E. Wienhoeber Co., on Elm street, did the decorating and supplied the bouquets.

One of last week's visitors was S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia. He says his firm and associates have orders for over 200,000 cuttings of Carnation Philadelphia, of which over 100,000 have been shipped. While the big orders doubtless are in, the orders for 500 and 1,000 are coming in better than ever since the Cleveland convention. Mr. Skidelsky expects the sale to run close to 300,000 and is confident the carnation will make good all his claims for it. It gave him much pleasure that after August Poehlmann and Guy French inspected the variety growing, they increased their order from 5,000 to 10,000.

Speaking to E. J. Fancourt and others Saturday afternoon, John Michelsen said February 13 and 14 were the largest days in February in the history of the E. C. Amling Co. He commented that the sales February 13, which slightly exceeded $2,600, were almost exactly

This is election night with the Cook County Florists' Association. A. C. Kohlbrand, of the E. C. Amling Co., will be succeeded in the presidency, after two terms, by N. P. Miller, of Kennicott Bros. Co.
That the retail florists as a class are steadily working onto a higher business plane is the belief of C. L. Washburn: He says there has been, in the last few years, a distinct improvement in the average florist's business methods and regard for obligations.
Working around by way of St. Louis after the Cleveland convention, E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, spent several days in town last week. He says he has found florists busy, but not rushed, everywhere he has gone.

Gentlemen:

We are in receipt of four hundred of your beautiful St. Valentine Day folders, and wish we had made the order a larger one.

It seems to us that each of your folders is an advancement in artistic merit over its predecessor. In this St. Valentine Day folder especially we think you have achieved a triumph.

We anticipate from the use of this folder a material increase in the volume of our St. Valentine Day business, and we think it will make a decidedly favorable impression upon the more discriminating of our retail patrons. We should think you would have great success among florists alive to their own interests, in pushing your very meritorious lines of high-grade florists' publicity. It certainly supplies a well-defined want in floral advertising.

Yours very truly, Gullett & Sons required, or, if placed end to end, enough to reach from the Foley plant to Morton Grove. Estimating the total length of bars turned out for the Poehlmann houses by Mr. Foley in the last three years, a total of over forty-two miles is reached.

Buyers are each season becoming more willing to place orders in advance, according to A. Henderson, who says his firm had a good year's business for 1914 booked before the end of 1913.

That yellow roses were in special request for St. Valentine's day is the report of Harry C. Rowe, who says he was unable to find enough Saturday forenoon to fill his orders.

One of the most successful of the recent additions to the ranks of the growers is Charles Poulsen. He has a not large establishment at Arlington Heights, but Kyle & Foerster say he is cutting more flowers per square foot than most of the older growers, and that his flowers average nearly a cent above the general run. He is especially successful with Victory.

Standing on the shipping floor of Buchbinder Bros. last week was a refrigerator crated for shipment to Moline, Ill., where it will be installed in the retail store of John Klehm & Son. The box was in the natural wood and will be finished after installation to match the store fixtures.

Valentine's day brought no rush of trade to Englewood retailers, but Mr. Simmons is authority for the statement that J. L. Raske used 14,000 violets February 14.

Tim Matchen, sales manager for Peter Reinberg, comments that the percentage of split carnations has decreased notably with the increase in production.

February 14 was moving day for Peter Olsem, who took up his residence this week in the flat building on the premises of the Star Floral Co., at Wilmette. Mr. Pyfer plans to move into the same building in the spring.

Excellent success with Formosa lilies, from Christmas to St. Valentine's day, is reported by George Reinberg. The stock has been on extremely long stems, carrying from three to ten flowers each. He used Barnard's bulbs.

Returning from a month's trip through the western section that suffered so severely in last summer's heat and drought, C. E. Pruner says he found conditions there fully as good as usual. While some florists are not doing the usual business, others are doing more than ever before at this season.

A strained back was acquired by T. E. Waters on his southern trip last week. He was barely able to be about.

Good callas are excellent property this season, according to Weiland & Risch.

With his 19-year-old daughter suffering with neuritis at Sacred Heart sanitarium, John Zech is a frequent visitor to Milwaukee. He reports the young lady as somewhat improved February 15.

Peter Schumer, who was placed in charge of the new vegetable growers' cooperative commission house on South Water street, opened a few months ago, has found the work too strenuous and has resigned. Mr. Schumer is a lettuce and carnation grower.

A ring around February 17 on the calendar of A. L. Vaughan & Co. was a reminder that a tip had been received that the day would see a special demand for red carnations.

Carnation Philadelphia is one of the novelties Wieter Bros. will try out this season.

If St. Valentine's day had not been good with the out-of-town buyers, William Homburg, of J. A. Budlong's, says they would not have come back so strongly as nearly everyone did Monday.

The transportation committee of the Chicago Florists' Club has arranged for those who will attend the Danville convention to leave on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Dearborn station, Dearborn and Polk streets, at 11:10 a. m., March 10. The fare one way is $2.46.

February 9 we had the change that we have been wishing for all winter and since then the weather has been cold enough to keep the fruit buds back, at least. They were just at the danger point and the earlier spring flowers, such as snowdrops and chionodoxas, were in full bloom. In fact, a few daffodils were seen in the open and there would have been hundreds in another week. Elms and maples were in bud in protected places and Lonicera fragrantissima was in full bloom.

Business has been decidedly better since the cold weather, though it is not yet normal. Stock is low in all lines except carnations. There are plenty of these and they are as good as we generally see. Dutch bulbs are also in good supply, though not so numerous as last year at this time. Cyclamens and primulas are mostly cleaned up and cinerarias are coming in freely. Made-up boxes continue to be the best sellers, however. St. Valentine's day was prepared for by the trade and was pretty well advertised in the daily papers, but there was not so heavy a demand as might have been wished. Still, business was good. The chief drawback was the fact that violets were scarce here and the best ones were all shipped in. Roses are decidedly off crop, and the summer varieties are about all that are seen, except Ward, which seems never to tire of blooming. Snapdragons are scarce and are snapped up as soon as they appear.

Customers were inquiring for spring bulbs ten days ago, but are quiet about them now. Tree planting goes merrily on. The demand for evergreens amounts almost to a craze. The dwarf growers are about all that are in demand; they are wanted for beds and for grouping about foundations.

Various Notes.

McIntyre Bros. have some unusually good orchids. One variety, in particular, is equal to the better cattleyas. The members of the firm are so well pleased with the results of their last season's purchase that they are buying an additional supply of orchids. They report good business for the last week.

The Joys are cutting heavily of some of the best sweet peas ever seen in the city. They have a large house of them that are just beginning to bloom well. They say that they sell much better than the smaller varieties. At the recent meeting here of the State Horticultural Society and the State Nursery-men's Association, all the members of both societies inspected this firm's houses and many favorable comments were made by the visitors. The firm has been experimenting with dynamiting their soil during the last two seasons, to secure better moisture retention. They are well pleased with the results thus far. They gave a demonstration for the Dupont Powder people while the nurserymen were there.

J. H. Corbitt's place is crowded with spring stock and he was never better prepared for a good spring business. He is growing bedding plants almost exclusively this season.

Haury & Sons are managing to keep their stock well cleaned up most of the time. Their primroses are still a feature of their windows. They are selling large quantities of Dutch bulbs in pots, especially Golden Spur.

Some of the smaller growers who have no retail place, and who devote only a part of their time to growing pot plants, have wagons on the street every warm day now, with hyacinths and ferns.

Joe Brown, of Lischey's Gardens, continues in tolerably good health and it really looks as though he were recovering from his long illness. He says that business with him is about normal this year.

Geny Bros. have had an unusually heavy cut of carnations right along and their bulbous stock is extra good. They say that business has improved decidedly of late. They have some of the best violets that have been seen thus far this season, and a good cut of them, too.

At Mt. Olivet, trade is somewhat slack, but there is a good stock for the spring trade and especially for Easter.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Eastern Market.

The violet is not favored as of yore. This is the important fact that stands out boldly in reviewing the business at St. Valentine's. Great preparations were made. Violets came to "The Eastern Market" from the local growers of fancy singles, from the home of Lady Hume Campbell at Hightstown, N. J., and from the Hudson river, as well as from many other places. They came by the hundreds, by the thousands, by the tens of thousands; so many that the price asked for them was moderate, from $7.50 per thousand down to $5. So many were left at the close of the day that they will not average the growers anything like these prices. Possibly the storm and the cold February 13 and 14 had something to do with this. Undoubtedly the lateness of some of the shipments affected the result, but there is no question that the demand was not there. People were not hunting violets; they were hunting other flowers; that is the truth in a sentence. Sweet peas, now so fine, both in the winter-blooming and the Spencer type, have partly displaced violets. Orchids had something to do with this change of public sentiment, too. Gardenias have suffered with their bosom friend, the violet.

Roses and carnations have been quite scarce, especially roses in the shorter grades. Daffodils are plentiful and of good quality. The former, but not the latter, applies to tulips. Through a misunderstanding forget-me-nots were not satisfactory at St. Valentine's, the on the morning of February 14. The weight of snow and ice, and the fierce wind, proved too much for the south side of the great structure. It gave way for nearly half its length. burst and Mrs. Aaron Ward. The house, which is nearly forty feet high at the ridge, is the most radical example of the flat roofed greenhouse. Its main idea is economy in building material consistent with the health of the plants. It covers a larger number of plants at a smaller cost per plant than any other house. Florists all over the country will sympathize with the managers of the Florex Gardens in their great loss and will rejoice in their courage in immediately repairing the damage.

The Arrival of the Prince.

A shipment of the new red rose, Prince E. C. d'Arenberg, arrived at Chestnut Hill recently for Myers & Samtman. The plants came from abroad and were in excellent condition after their journey, promising to make good growth in a short time. There is a curious bit of history connected with these plants. When Louis J. Reuter exhibited his fine blooms of the Prince in several of our large cities, they attracted much attention. The growers saw that here was a rose with a possible future, a red rose with size, foliage and stem that bid fair to distance Richmond, a red rose for all the year around. It must be tried. So finding that it had been introduced four years ago, they sought it in this country and abroad, sought it in such numbers that there were no less than forty-six inquiries for this particular lot that are now growing at Chestnut Hill. But how did they happen to go to Chestnut Hill instead of being parceled out or going somewhere else?

The Redles Cup.

A friend, of horticultural taste and liberal mind, offered a silver cup for competition at the February meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society. The cup, made of silver, he presented in the name of G. Francis Redles, the youngest member of the society. G. Francis Redles is the son of George Redles, the society's able secretary. This friend of the society and of Master Redles is a lover of carnations. He stipulated that the competition should be for the best twenty-five carnations of one or more varieties, as the exhibitor might prefer. There were a number of entries, but some fell by the wayside. Only three fine entries of twenty-five blooms were staged. So keen was the competition that the judges, one of whom was a lady, a member of the society, awarded distinction to the unsuccessful competitors that must have cheered them mightily in the hour of defeat. The Redles cup was captured by a real live countess. Thomas A. Gaynor, gardener to the Countess de Santa Eulalia, was the winner. The meeting was crowded. There were numerous exhibits in the regular classes. One honorary and five active members were elected.

At the Bellevue-Stratford.

Edward Habermehl obligingly discussed a few points of general interest in his firm's beautiful flower shop in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel one afternoon this week. Mr. Habermehl thought that the storm had not made much difference in the demand for floral valentines, which was good, though not in excess of last season. He said that while heart baskets, forget-me-nots and other strictly sentimental souvenirs of affection were sent, a pretty bunch of flowers was much more generally favored. Mr. Habermehl believes that the scarcity of well-grown medium grade stock at this season drives away many flower buyers of moderate means. He further believes that greater variety in high grade roses would broaden the market. He considers Mrs. Charles Russell, when well grown, a great acquisition and finds lilacs, fancy snapdragon and Acacia pubescens help out wonderfully.

Various Notes.

John Stanley has taken possession of the greenhouse range owned and operated by J. L. Maull, at Whitford, Pa. This range, formerly known as the Millbrook Lea Greenhouses, was for many years owned by Maull & Howell. Two or three years ago J. Lardner Howell withdrew from the firm. Now J. L.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The worst snow storm since 1888, delayed trains, cut flower shipments hours behind schedule, a foot of snow on the level and huge drifts all over the city sums up the situation that confronted the wholesale section Saturday morning, February 14. The market had held firm all the week. The best retail stores were all busy and a splendid clean-up Saturday was everywhere anticipated. Then the snow storm stepped in and brought disappointment. Prices, however, remained steady and a good business seems assured from now until Easter. Zero weather came after the storm; Sunday was distressingly cold and locomotion difficult.

Warmer temperature is promised by the weather man for the present week and normal conditions will again prevail. There will be no shortage in roses or anything else from this date. American Beauties have maintained appreciative levels all the year to date. The best were selling at 60 cents each Saturday. The shipments delayed by the storm accounted for the good range of prices for everything but bulbous stock as the week closed. There is no change in the rose quotations from last week's record, but from now on daily increase in shipments of all varieties may be depended on. The specialties and novelties in carnations have brought excellent prices, but the older kinds have dragged somewhat and the tendency is downward.

Valley has been hard to move and the market seems oversupplied. It needed an exceptional grade of stock to command over $2 per hundred. There seems to be a sufficiency of longiflorum lilies. Gardenias are abundant and only the selected stock goes over $2 per dozen. Orchids of all kinds are in great supply and values are at a low ebb, with no advance in sight. Violets have not risen in price or popularity. The low rates of last week prevail.

There is a superabundance of bulbous stock of all kinds, especially daffodils, and shipments from the south are not far away. Six bunches for $1 was the offer at many of the wholesale houses Saturday. Freesias, too, are accumulating and there is much short-stemmed stock. Tulips are the same, with only the selected in demand. Lilac is increasing. Acacia has dropped to $2.50 a bunch. There is a great sufficiency of narcissi, myosotis and mignonette.

PITTSBURGH.*The Market.

Pittsburgh has had a cold week, winding up with a heavy fall of snow Friday night, followed by continued cold. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, except Beauties. Other roses keep increasing in quantity, but there is still a scarcity of the shorter grades. Carnations are just about equal to the demand. Violets are in oversupply and lilac and all kinds of bulbous stock are certainly a glut. The wholesale houses certainly look like real cut flower houses. The varieties include almost everything you can think of, and they are not cleaning up in a couple of hours in the morning, as was the case for several weeks.

Among the retail stores last week was certainly a St. Valentine's week. They commenced early in the week to show valentine effects and were booking orders all week. Had it not been for the advance orders, the extreme wind and cold of Friday and the snow and cold of Saturday would have caused a sad disappointment in the St. Valentine's day business. As it was, St. Valentine's day will go down in history as one of the big days, comparing with a small Easter.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams showed special valentine boxes and ribbons in her window all week, but they all disappeared Saturday. After seeing one of them arranged with flowers and tied with ribbons, one cannot conceive how anyone could send the paper valentines, no matter how beautiful they might be.

Randolph & McClements had their hands full taking care of their special St. Valentine's day features, using many special baskets. They had unique boxes beautifully ribboned, which must have aroused a good deal of sentiment before they were opened. Orchids largely took the place of violets.

it pays to advertise. The company's St. Valentine's day business was simply phenomenal. I know that if I were to take the liberty of telling how many orders were sent out there would be many doubters.

The Zieger Co. got its share of the spoils, as all hands can testify; all were glad when the last order went out and they went home for a much-needed rest.

Ray Daschbach found an opportunity to make use of all his ingenuity in producing effects to satisfy his exacting customers and make the boxes and bunches carry just the right message of love from Him to Her.

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. reports from the north side that the sentimental day worked just the same on that side of the river and that the whole force was worked to the limit sending out the love messages.

The Ludwig Floral Co. finds its Federal street location just the right spot on these special days to catch the people who are not regular flower buyers. Their elaborate windows help, too, as educators of those who need a look to know what they want, and Julius says, "We got our share, all right."

We had the pleasure of a call from Louis L. Sander, of Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England. Mr. Sander is the guest of J. Wilkinson Elliott.

Mrs. Smith, mother of S. P. Smith, Mercer, Pa., died Saturday, February 14. Mrs. Smith had been an invalid for years. The members of the trade here extend their sympathy to both Mr. Smith and his sister.

Jacob Elicker, of Homestead, Pa., is ill with Bright's disease and is in St. Francis hospital.

August Pajonk, who was arrested by a postoffice inspector of Chicago for using the mails to defraud, was a grower in the employ of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. When he left a lot of carnation cuttings of a scarce variety disappeared.

THREE SPECIAL OFFERS

On account of sickness, will make the three following offers, any one of which will bear investigation—any one of which is a money maker. We have been in business for 30 years; have 15,000 feet of glass in good repair, some only two years old. Same stocked with general assortment of cut flowers and plants. Are near two cemeteries.

FIRST OFFER

Will sell the greenhouses and stock outright for any reasonable offer and give long lease on land.

SECOND OFFER

I will sell the stock and rent greenhouses.

THIRD OFFER

I will sell half interest in both greenhouses and real estate, or half interest in greenhouses and stock alone.

I want to give my whole attention to the store and through it can use all the cut flowers and plants you can raise. Have never yet been able to supply the demand.

Address No. 439, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

Situation Wanted

As a manager, propagator and grower in up-to-date establishment; Lorraine, Obconica, poinsettias, cyclamen, bulbs, Easter lilies, bedding and pot plants, fern spore raising in quantities; European experience and 20 years in best establishments in the States. ## TEN PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

St. Valentine's day proved good as far as demand was concerned, but there was such a large supply of flowers that wholesalers were unable to realize the prices they had anticipated. In some lines considerable stock was left over. Both sweet peas and valley cleaned up. The best of the single violets sold well, but a few were still on hand at the close of the day. Double violets were in large supply and did not clean up at all satisfactorily. Both red roses and red carnations cleaned up. Orchids found a fair market, but not nearly what was expected for them.

Roses still are short of the call. The dark weather that accompanied the heavy snows of the last few days has reduced the cuts to a minimum. Carnations are generally in good supply. The receipts of giganteum lilies have decreased considerably and all are cleaning up in a hurry. Calla receipts, too, are limited. Bulbous offerings include tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, jonquils, daffodils and freesias. Other offerings include snapdragons, marguerites and wallflowers. The supply of all kinds of greens is adequate.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell offered Acacia pubescens last week and says it sold well.

The Market.

Our market has been well filled with good quality stock at reasonable prices. Roses are in fine condition, with a varied assortment. There are practically no short-stemmed roses on the market. There are plenty of carnations and a good supply of sweet peas. Violets are plentiful, but some have arrived frozen, making a scarcity for one day. Valley is all that can be desired. Forget-me-nots are almost a novelty with us and sell well. Gardenias are cheap and sell well. Orchids are not good sellers just at present. There are plenty of tulips of all kinds and a profusion of jonquils and daffodils. Lilacs are much used in design work. Romans and Paper Whites are plentiful. Callas and Easter lilies are arriving more freely now. Asparagus is still scarce and of poor quality. Other greens are plentiful and fully supply our needs.

From the amount of business done for St. Valentine's day it seems that it was larger than that of last year. Most of the stores displayed some novelty or other and included in their stock such novelties as hearts, arrows and cupids, artistically arranged in baskets and boxes of flowers. Newspaper advertisements for St. Valentine's day brought good returns. A heavy snow storm, which lasted all day, made deliveries quite late.

Various Notes.

J. B. Keller Sons had a unique window decoration last week, which showed Cupid, suspended from the ceiling, with wings of white chiffon, being drawn through the air by a flock of doves. Their St. Valentine's day trade was quite large.

Mrs. C. W. Curtis was confined to her room last week with a severe attack of tonsilitis. There is a great deal of sickness about at present, and nearly all the stores have been short-handed on this account.

The bowling match between Buffalo and Rochester florists will be held Friday, February 20, at the Grand Central alleys. Supper will be served at Hotel Eggleston before the game.

Paul Campus, who occupies an outdoor stand at the Four Corners, says business with him is quite satisfactory, although the severe weather has made a difference the last week. His helper, Louis Bretenbercher, has been sick with an attack of grip, but is back on the job feeling quite well again.

Frank Bohnke is looking around for a boiler for his new greenhouse and hopes to have everything in good running order in a few days. He expects to begin almost immediately to fill his new house with bedding stock.

F. Mossgraber reports everything in a prosperous condition. His carnations have been doing finely and he is well pleased with the returns they have brought.

The vegetable growers complain that on account of the cloudy weather they have been able to produce only one crop this season, while some years they have been able to harvest two crops at this season.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held in Musicians' hall Monday, February 9. O. E. Wiig, gardener for several years at the Kew Botanical Gardens, London, England, told of the wonders of those famous gardens. President Dunbar designated Wm. H. Dildine, C. B. Ogston, Fred Vick and F. J. Keller to attend farmers' week at Cornell University, and appointed chairmen of committees as follows: George B. Hart, entertainment; C. B. Ogston, essays; W. H. Dildine, finance; H. P. Neun, audit; W. T. Logan, membership; A. H. Seckler, lookout, and H. E. Bates, bowling.

A full-length casket blanket of Easter lilies, roses, orchids and lilacs was made by H. E. Wilson for the funeral of Fred Cobb, of the Cobb Preserving Co., last week. Several other large designs and sprays were furnished for the same funeral by this firm.

Henry P. Neun put in a busy week. Counter trade and funeral work kept the force quite busy. The St. Valentine's day trade was extremely good.

Morris Cohen, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, was in town last Friday, showing an unusually large selection

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The market was well stocked last week and the demand was reported as the best for some time. In retail circles it is said that every day was good except February 13, when a snow storm raged. All florists had a big business for St. Valentine's day. This day is increasing in popularity each season and may be classed among the big flower days of the year. As to cut stock, violets had the largest demand and prices went up somewhat; from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred was asked, and all the markets cleaned up daily the latter part of the week. Sweet peas, too, had a great call and all good grades sold well. There were plenty of good carnations, roses and valley. Bulbous stock was looked for and was of extra fine quality, especially tulips, Easter lilies and Von Sions. Paper Whites and Romans are again plentiful. From reports of local growers, bulbous stock promises to be fine from now on.
Asparagus was in great demand last week, as were ferns, but smilax dragged.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting February 12. President Pilcher was unable to be present and Vice-President Jaenicke presided. The publicity committee made its report, through Chairman R. J. Windler. Inasmuch as the local florists had not supported the committee, he recommended the discharge of the committee, which was done. Chairman Frank Windler reported for the trustees on the anniversary banquet and stated that arrangements are not complete. It was decided that the banquet be held in June, but the date and all other arrangements were left in the hands of the trustees.

The fall flower show came up for discussion, but after several members had given their opinion on the question, it was laid over for final disposition at the next meeting.

R. J. Windler, state vice-president of the S. A. F., read a letter from President Wirth regarding the club's affiliation with the national society. After a lengthy discussion this was recommended and the secretary was instructed to inform Secretary John Young of this action.

John Steidle, of Olivette, Mo., staged a fine vase of a pink carnation, a seedling he has grown for the last few years, but owing to the unfavorable weather of late it was not at its best, so that the club took no action on it.

J. J. Karins, of Philadelphia, and Victor Morgan, of New York, were visitors and gave short talks.

Adolph Jaenicke was down for a lecture on city gardens, but owing to the lateness of the hour this was held for the next meeting. The financial standing of the club as reported by Treasurer Smith was pleasing to the members.

The next meeting takes place Thursday, March 12.

Various Notes.

The following traveling salesmen were with us last week: J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia; Geo. Struck, of Knight & Struck Co., New York; Fred Lautenschlager, representing Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago; Victor Morgan, of Lord & Burnham Co., New York, and Joseph Rölker, of New York.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle spent a pleasant afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. C. Weber, Jr., on Waterman avenue. It was the regular monthly meeting. The March meeting will be held March 11 at the home of Mrs. Theo. Miller, on Delmar boulevard.

Joseph Witek, 918 North King's highway, will soon move to his new location at Euclid and McPherson avenues, which is considered much better.

Pierre Schneider, manager for the Oakland Floral Co., says he will soon be cutting fine sweet peas. Their cut of carnations is among the best coming to this market.

David Geddes, of Vandevort's floral department, received a telegram February 13, announcing the death of his father in Pittsburgh. Mr. Geddes left that night to attend the funeral.

as they have he will be booked up long before the time of delivery, which is April 15. He has advertised it exclusively in The Review.

Charles Beyer is showing some extra fine bulbous stock in pots and pans. The tulips, especially, are well flowered. These had an extra good demand for St. Valentine's day.

Herman Weber, son of Fred C. Weber, who is now a resident of Chicago, was married there February 14. Mrs. Weber and daughter, Adele, attended the wedding and will remain several days.

The five wholesale houses all handled large consignments of violets and sweet peas February 13 and 14. Violets, though, were not so plentiful as last year, and sold out early at good prices, which ranged from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Sweet peas were plentiful at the same prices.

Burglars entered the residence of Fred C. Weber, Jr., 5846 Waterman avenue, February 14, and in the absence of the family got away with much of value, including clothing, cut glass and silver.

The wind storm of February 15 broke a large pane of glass in the rear of Miss M. S. Newman's store at Spring avenue and Olive street. The cold did a lot of damage to the plants before repairs could be made.

The Retail Florists' Association met February 16 at Beers' hotel and elected officers for the ensuing year.

A. S. Cerny, of Kirkwood, had a loss of $2,000 by fire February 9. The members of the County Growers' Club, on hearing of the fire, got together and made the repairs in short order. Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros Co., was the hero of the occasion. He went to work at once and had the boilers go-

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

THE Texas truckers are not planting onions as heavily as formerly.

THE spring season is opening in excellent shape for the southern seed houses.

OTTO GUNTHER, an employe of the Nebraska Seed Co., took his own life by inhaling illuminating gas Friday, February 13.

ARNOLD RINGIER, secretary of the W. W. Barnard Co., has been confined to his home in Chicago by illness since his return from the canners' convention at Baltimore.

THE Dorman-Shaw Seed Co. has been incorporated at Los Angeles, Cal., with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are Robert H. Dorman, Charles Shaw and A. J. Mitchell.

ONE of the unique publications of the season is "The Food Value of Fresh Vegetables," an essay by a college professor which W. Atlee Burpee has published as a 16-page pamphlet with pen-and-ink illustrations.

LAST summer, during the protracted season of heat and drought in the middle west the cold storage giganteum lilies gave poor results and many growers canceled their orders. Later deliveries of the same bulbs gave good flowers.

SINCE the appearance of Burpee's Annual with Matchless tomato on the cover and an "apology" on page 20 for the size of the cut, the firm has received several letters stating that the writers have grown Matchless as large or even larger than the picture. These have now been printed as a circular for stuffing mail.

THE probabilities are that after the Holland growers have cut, and cut, and cut on each other's prices for a season or two they will conclude there isn't much money in gladiolus bulbs, and that many of them will drop out of the business. When that time comes there will be a fair margin for those who grow a list of good sorts in moderate quantity.

CURTIS NYE SMITH, the Boston attorney retained by the American Seed Trade Association, is preparing an exhaustive paper on the disclaimer for presentation at the June meeting at Washington. In assigning the topic to Mr. Smith the executive committee evidently had in mind that Mr. Smith would show the trade how to make the disclaimer stick better than it does for many seedsmen.

SEEDSMEN who issue catalogues weighing in excess of eight ounces are figuring on the course to pursue for next season. In a number of cases books will be cut down to come within the 8-ounce limit, either by reducing the size of the pages or the number of pages. In certain cases it is figured the seedsman with a heavy catalogue can escape the operation of the law by shipping his books by freight to a central distributing point from which everything within a radius of 150 miles can be covered for 5 cents if the book weighs less than a pound. For instance, from Columbus the state of Ohio could be covered.

THE Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, advertised an opening of its new retail store for February 14 and Charles N. Page estimates the attendance as between 6,000 and 7,000.

THE COST OF THE SEEDS.

The Department of Agriculture estimates the expense of seeds on farms operated by owners is 2.1 per cent of the total cost of running the farm. This is based on 273 farms. The expense of seeds on farms operated by tenants, 247 farms, is given as follows: Farm total, 2.5 per cent; tenant, 1.1 per cent; landlord, 1.4 per cent. E. H. P.

THIS IS THE BILL TO SUPPORT.

Of the dozen or so bills that have been introduced in one or the other branch of Congress for the purpose of including seeds and plants in the parcel post, that of Representative L'Engle, introduced February 11, is the one the seed trade should support. It would give parcels of seeds up to half a pound the benefit of the present flat rate and admit the more bulky parcels to the advantages of the local zone rates; in other words, the L'Engle bill would make the postage on seeds and plants the same as it will be on catalogues after March 15. Here is the bill in full:

A BILL, H. R. 13229

To fix the rates of postage on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter postage on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants, weighing eight ounces or less, shall be 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof; and on such matter weighing in excess of eight ounces the regular zone rates applicable to other fourth-class mail shall apply.

Sec. 2. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

The bill was referred to the committee on postoffice and post roads, where the other bills on the same subject have gone.

A BILL, H. R. 13310

To establish the rates of postage on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter parcel post rates shall be extended to include seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants, except in the event said articles weigh less than nine ounces, when the charge shall be 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof.

Sec. 2. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

NEBRASKA PURE SEED LAW.

A bulletin summarizing the provisions of the Nebraska pure seed law has been prepared in the office of the state commission in charge of its enforcement and will be sent out to all firms affected by it. The bulletin issued by Commissioner Harman is as follows:

This law covers the sale of agricultural seeds, principal of which are alfalfa, barley, bluegrass, bromegrass, clovers, corn (sweet and field), flax, millet, oats, rye, sorghum, timothy and wheat.

Every parcel, package or lot of agricultural seeds containing one pound or more, offered or exposed for sale in the state of Nebraska for use within this state, shall have affixed thereto in a conspicuous place on the outside thereof, distinctly printed in the English language, in legible type, not smaller than eight-point heavy Gothic caps, or plainly written, a statement as follows:

The name of the seed; the name and address of the seedsmen; statement of purity if below standard fixed by law; marked standard if so or above; place where grown.

All agricultural seeds must be true to the name under which they are sold.

tack upon the seedlings. If the weather is favorably cool and moist, the diseased plants may mature a partial crop, but if dry, hot weather prevails, the plants dry up or blight quickly.

While these investigators have found that the disinfection of seed by spraying may be of benefit in some cases, such treatment cannot as yet be recommended for practical use. They are endeavoring to develop seed from plants showing great disease resistant power. In the hope of developing disease resistant strains, they are sowing seed from healthy plants which have been found in badly blighted fields.

Vegetable Forcing

VARIOUS VEGETABLE QUERIES.

Please give me some information on growing Grand Rapids lettuce in a hot-bed; also, how to keep worms from Early Scarlet Globe radish. I will also grow the Early Spring cabbage, and Sparks' Earliana and Champion Dwarf tomatoes. Are these good forcing varieties? If not, please give me the names of good early sorts. My lettuce plants in the greenhouse are not stocky. Please give me advice about them. The size of my hotbed is 6x12 feet, holding ten inches of manure and three inches of soil. The location is north-western Pennsylvania. H. M.

A foot of warm horse manure should be used for any hotbed crop of lettuce in your latitude. If made up between February 15 and March 15, six inches of soil should cover this. It should be well mixed with horse manure and should be allowed to become thoroughly warm before any lettuce plants are set in it. Radishes need not have much manure in the soil; they will come cleaner skinned without it. Worms in the soil will do no particular harm to the lettuce. Cutworms must be hand-picked, or a poison must be laid for them, composed of fresh shorts, molasses and Paris green, just enough of the latter to color the mash, and add sufficient water to make it pasty.

Try Copenhagen Market or Selected Jersey Wakefield for early cabbages. They are superior to Early Spring. Sparks' Earliana and Dwarf Champion are not good forcing tomatoes. Try Lister's Prolific, Comet, or that grand new variety, Terrace Hall. All these are special forcing varieties, and will give at least 100 per cent more fruit than Earliana and Champion. C. W.

LARVÆ IN MUSHROOM HOUSE.

I have fixed up an abandoned greenhouse for mushroom growing, but made the mistake of not thoroughly cleaning the house and of using some old soil for casing some of the beds. The soil seems to have contained some small particles of manure that have bred innumerable quantities of white, hair-like larvæ, about one-sixteenth to one-eighth of an inch long. They spread out over the beds, but are most numerous on the boards and in the corners. On the boards they cluster in bunches. In fact, I at first supposed them to be mold, such as gets on wood in moist places. The larvæ finally turn into small black flies. Both larvæ and flies get on the small mushrooms, causing them to "fog off." I have replaced the old soil with new, clean loam. The question now is: How can I get rid of the larvæ on the woodwork, and the flies? A salt water solution as strong as two pounds to ten gallons does not do the work. Could I safely use fir tree oil soap for a spray, and fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas without injury to the growing mushrooms? What remedies would you suggest?

E. D. C.

Fir tree oil, if used, would probably kill many of the larvæ, but it would, at the same time, render any mushrooms it might touch unfit to use. A fumigation would be the best way to clean out the pests. As there are, no doubt, quantities of unhatched eggs, a second fumigation would probably be necessary two days later. Hydrocyanic acid gas would be the most effective fumigant, and a weak dose would suffice. It would not harm the mushrooms. If the gas does not reach all the pests, it may be necessary to bore holes fifteen inches apart each way in the bed and pour half a teaspoonful of carbon bisulphide in each, immediately covering the holes. While this would not harm the mushrooms, it would prob-

TOMATOES UNDERSIZED.

I am growing indoor tomatoes and have three houses of Comet. These have set well and there is a great quantity of fruit, some of which is now ripening off. They were planted between September 30 and October 2. The fruit, however, is quite small; few fruits as yet are over three and one-half ounces, and most of them smaller. I grew the same variety last year and it was much larger. Can I do anything to make the fruit swell to larger size? The beds, which are solid, have been once top-dressed with bone meal and new soil, and some with "2-6-8" and new soil. I know the Comet to be a small variety, but I think the individual fruits this year are smaller than usual, many not over two ounces.

R. N. W.

Comet is not a large tomato. In common with the majority of indoor varieties it produces large bunches of medium to small fruit. These are usually preferred in winter to larger ones. Most of the big wholesalers, in the east at least, prefer tomatoes which average six to the pound. If, however, your fruit is running smaller than a year ago, there must be a reason for it. Are you sure your soil is all right? If it is, and the plants need feeding, give it either in the form of liquid cow manure, or in top-dressings of cow or sheep manure. In midwinter Comet and other forcing tomatoes run smaller than in spring and, at this dull season of the year, heavy feeding will only aggravate the trouble.

I would suggest keeping a night temperature of 60 to 62 degrees, with a dry atmosphere. Shorten back the leaves somewhat to let more light on the fruit. If reduced size seems in any way due to soil starvation, feed in a moderate way. Allow the beds to dry out well between waterings. Be sure to use care in seed selection. Choose only the finest fruits on the most vigorous plants. If you find Comet too small for your customers, there are larger varieties you should try another season. C. W.

Rochester, Ind.—An editorial recommendation in the Republican of February 10, of flowers for valentines, together with J. H. Shelton's offer through its columns of a bouquet to anyone whose birthday fell on St. Valentine's day, boosted business for the holiday at Shelton's Greenhouses. This florist evidently believes in making as good use as possible of the daily press.

Gentlemen:

I sure got good results from the little Classified ad I placed in The Review last month. Have sold nearly $800.00 worth of bulbs from it, and have inquiries for at least $200.00 worth more that look like sure sales. The inquiries came from Maine, from California, and all the way between. Pretty good investment!

Truly yours,

The Market.

There has been during the last week a much better tone to business, though it is difficult to account for it. There have been no more people in town, the death list has been shorter and the weather has been all that could be desired for outdoor rather than indoor entertainment. As one retailer given to slangy expression said, "You can't dope it out; you just got to take it as it comes." Not for many moons has there been such a shortage of the little Cecile Brunner roses. They were more plentiful even at this time last year, after the frost, than now, and it is difficult to find a dozen good bunches. "Baby" roses are so popular here now that it is really difficult to get along without them. Other roses from outside are scarce also, but the indoor stock is in good shape and the former are not much missed. Carnations have been on the short side for a time, many splits occurring and rendering the cut practically useless.

Freeseas are now at their best; Purity is the only variety that brings anything like a price. By the looks of things, growers of freeseas are making about as much as anybody now. Bulbous stock is not particularly good so far. Both daffodils and tulips are away below the average quality for this time of year, while hyacinths probably were never so poor. The peculiar thing about it is that locally grown bulbs suffer equally with the Dutch product. Once again the futility of growing the extremely early tulips has been proved and growers will probably take the lesson to heart this time.

Various Notes.

Robert Fulton, representing Henry & Lee, and C. B. Knickman, of McHutchinson & Co., both of New York, have been calling on the trade here in the interests of their firms.

Wolfskill's & Morris Goldenson had the class bouquet for the Los Angeles high school pupils, supplying 77 bunches of daffodils with golden yellow chiffon. Funeral work also keeps up well here.

At the Los Angeles Flower Market's new store I noted an especially fine lot of cyclamens and large kentias. Business is fine here.

Tulips, ranunculus and some early Spanish iris were among the showings last week at the store of the H. N. Gage Co.

Murata & Co. have some of the finest violets ever seen in Los Angeles and trade is reported as good.

Howard & Smith report an ever increasing demand for ornamentals of all kinds and their landscape department is flourishing.

At a specially called meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society, February 11, Fred Howard, chairman of the committee on the 1915 exhibition, made his report and briefly outlined the plan that has been maturing for some time past. This is to obtain possession of a large tract of mountain and canyon land near Mount

Our business in Carnation Cuttings is breaking all records. The Review is our only means of advertising.—Hollywood Gardens, Hollywood, Wash., January 8, 1914.

Hollywood, in Griffith park, and by planting bright flowering stock of different kinds make fullest use of the beauties so lavishly produced by nature. There is in this tract a natural amphitheater backed by hills covered with live oaks and cut up with deep canyons, only needing the veneer of surface planting and the application of water to make it one of the most lovely spots on earth. San Francisco and San Diego have both big projects in hand, but from a landscape point of view neither city could compare with what Los Angeles has at her gates, needing only the touch of the gardener and the magic of water. Over the natural rocks cascades of water could be formed with practically no expense, the water then flowing into ponds and small lakes planted to aquatics and edged with moisture-loving plants. The idea is too good to let slip and if, owing to financial reasons or any red tape regulations, this chance is allowed to slip by, it will be a lasting disgrace to Los Angeles horticulture.

A bunch of Freesia Purity, grown by the originator, Rudolph Fischer, of San Gabriel, is before me as I write and I have never seen more perfect flowers. They are pure in color and quite large, on stiff stems, just the kind florists need. Mr. Fischer is working stock of an absolutely pure white type without a tinge of any color, as well as a number of new colored forms.

James McGilvray is beginning to make quite a show in the new greenhouses at Eastlake park. Several orchids and other flowering plants look fine and there is a good prospect in the fine stock of rhododendrons now advancing for flower. Mr. McGilvray shows with pardonable pride the elegant gold watch presented him by the Pasadena boys at the expiration of his term as president of their society.

moved well. Daffodils, tulips, hyacinths and freesias were the most favored. Carnations and roses are gradually increasing in quantity, but as yet there is no surplus. Roses have unusually good color and move readily. There is more of a variety of blooming plants shown; tulips, hyacinths, azaleas, cyclamens, cinerarias and white lilac are the most salable. Special St. Valentine's day windows were predominant. While there was a scarcity of red roses, red carnations and tulips in pans and fancy baskets proved good sellers. The week-end business showed a general increase over that of previous years.

Various Notes.

E. T. Mische, city park superintendent, says he has planted out this season 2,000 Acer macrophyllum and about 15,000 evergreens and hardy shrubs in the various streets.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held February 10. Considerable business was transacted, and the attention of the members was called to the fact that in the future the society will meet every third Thursday, at Masonic Temple hall, instead of at Architectural hall, as in the past. Resolutions were passed to hold a spring flower show at the public library, details and time to be determined at a later date.

Fechheimer's Flower Shop has been showing rather odd window arrangements, usually of an antique nature. Acacia sprays were used effectively as a background for one window.

The mild winter has forced foliage and plants far ahead of the season. Snowdrops are blooming in the yards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Market conditions have experienced a decided change, owing to a succession of bright days. Roses are again at a normal price and in good supply. Among the best are Russells, American Beauties and Killarneys. There has been a heavy influx of spring flowers during the week. Particularly strong has been the offering of daffodils and the market for these is unsettled. Vendors are selling them at ridiculously low figures. Large quantities of flowering fruits are available; acacias also are arriving in profusion. Tulips are coming in gradually and are excellent sellers. Freesias are deteriorating in quality and are not moving as rapidly as last week. Violets are still fairly good sellers, particularly in conjunction with jonquils. Cattleya Trianæ is still in good supply, but the flowers are not so large and perfect as during the early part of January. The Irish Fire Flame rose, of recent adoption, has ceased to be a novelty and is much sought for. Fine sprays of daphne are among the offerings of the week and prove to be wonderfully good sellers.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held February 7. An important feature of the evening was the installation of the officers for the ensuing year, which was impressively conducted by J. W. Bagge. The officers are as follows: President, H. Plath; vice-president, Thomas Taylor; corresponding secretary, Walter A. Hofinghoff; financial secretary, B. Meyer; treasurer, Donald McLaren; librarian, H. Kempf; ushers, D. Raymond and John Pos; trustee, John McLaren.

The following new members were initiated: Charles Rice, Gerrard Samson, W. Ehrich, Gardner A. Dailey, A. H. Serveau, Peter A. De Vries, Andrew Butvil and Frank Thatcher.

The monthly exhibition included a finely flowered Cattleya Trianæ containing forty blooms, exhibited by the MacRorie-McLaren Co. and awarded 95 points. Dr. J. P. Parker, of Santa Cruz, exhibited a plant of Cattleya Trianæ alba, carrying two flowers, which caused considerable comment and admiration.

Various Notes.

It is interesting to hear that the florists of Sacramento have organized a horticultural society, with Mark Ebel as president and W. J. Meldrum as secretary. The object of this society will be to cooperate with the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society of San Francisco, particularly in securing the convention of the Society of American Florists for San Francisco in 1915. The organization will undoubtedly be of general benefit to Sacramento, in improving local conditions. Members of the nursery trade, as well as florists, will be included in the roll.

The GENUINE Crego Aster

DIRECT FROM THE ORIGINATOR

With its enormous blossoms, long stems and vigorous, healthy plants, this Aster is becoming more valuable to the florist from year to year, and its remarkable success is due to the fact that it has had the benefit of twelve years of the most rigid and painstaking selection, every effort having been directed toward developing its commercial qualities—toward making it a money-maker for every florist who handles it. Growing no other seed of any kind, I am able to give this the closest possible attention.

One of the largest growers at Irondequoit, the great Aster center of New York state, says: "Our best Crego blooms usually sell at about $1.00 per dozen, retail—about twice as much as can be got here for any other variety." (See "Asters at Irondequoit," in Florists' Review, April 25, 1912.) Both wholesale and retail, when properly handled, the Crego Aster has always maintained its position at the top of the market.

BUY YOUR SEED DIRECT FROM THE ORIGINATOR

¶ This Aster has proved itself to be exactly what every florist needs—an Aster which finds instant favor with his customers, for which they are willing to pay the highest price, and which gives him the highest return for his time and labor. It costs the grower no more to produce flowers of that grade than to grow the common run of Asters which sell for but little more than enough to pay express charges. ¶ If you are interested in getting the highest possible returns from your Aster crop next summer, I shall be pleased to hear from you at an early date. ¶ I am offering the Crego Aster in four colors—White, Shell-pink, Rose-pink and Violet—all fully up to Crego grade, with immense, fluffy blooms 4 to 6 inches in diameter and of splendid color.

The closing of the oldest establishment on the coast, the J. H. Sievers nursery, is a matter of more than local interest. The Sievers estate has sold out the stock and greenhouses and retired from business. This was done, not only for settling the estate of the late John H. Sievers, but principally on account of the location of the establishment, which has for its neighborhood one of the finest residence districts of the city. The nursery, built over thirty-five years ago, was famous for its many new creations in carnations, begonias, pelargoniums, etc. The large and varied collection of orchids came next in prominence, as there were over 5,000 plants of many varieties. Cattleyas were grown mostly, for cut flower purposes. J. A. Carbone, of Berkeley, was the successful bidder for the orchids of the J. H. Sievers estate. The addition of all these plants to his establishment places Mr. Carbone as possibly the leading orchid grower in the west. Two additional houses are being built at his place in Berkeley, 125 feet in length, one of them being especially constructed for the growing of Odontoglossum crispum, and the other for new importations of cattleyas.

Various Notes.

F. C. Smith is again attending to business, after his recent illness.

P. C. Richardson, of the Floral Market Co., Seattle, visited Tacoma February 5, in the interests of his business. Upon invitation, he gave a most instructive talk before the Florists' Club, which met in regular session that evening. H. Benthien also read an interesting paper on "The Past, Present and Future of the Florists' Business in This City." Mr. Milton, of the city parks conservatory, was asked to tell the club something about the park work at the next meeting, March 5.

The bowling team is keeping in trim for any emergency which may arise.

On a recent visit to the plant of Davies & Goldsack, at Larchmont, the writer found everything in excellent shape. In three houses, planted to lettuce, the crop is almost ready for market and the product of a fourth house is now being sold. Two smaller houses are stocked with potted plants and rooted cuttings.

J. L. S.

ASPARAGUS IN CALIFORNIA.

Wishing to save space in my lath house, I am thinking of transplanting my 6-months-old seedlings of Asparagus Sprengeri and A. plumosus to the open ground, under half shade. I am located in southern California, in the latitude of Los Angeles. The soil is a rich, friable loam, well manured and with "water on tap." Would the plants make a good growth if so treated, and would they transplant as well as from pots?

J. E. W.

The plants will make as good a growth in summer outdoors in partial shade as in a lath house. If ordinary care is used in transplanting, they will not suffer in the least. Asparagus plumosus is even easier to move than A. Sprengeri, though either can be moved with perfect safety.

H. R. R.

WHITE FLY ON PELARGONIUMS.

I am sending you a sample of pelargonium leaves that have some white flies on them. Kindly let me know what to do to exterminate the pests.

J. J.

The best remedy for white fly is hydrocyanic acid gas. The insects you sent were much alive when the box was opened and they landed in the furnace as quickly as I could get them there.

W. J. K.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

AMONG the officers reelected at the annual meeting of the Rochester Industrial Exposition Association, at Rochester, N. Y., were William C. Barry, Jr., vice-president; William Pitkin, on the executive committee, and John Hall, director.

F. A. WARD, one of the proprietors of the Royal Nursery Co., at Fairmont, Minn., is arranging for the establishment of the St. Cloud Nursery Co., at St. Cloud, Minn. The company is to be composed of F. A. and A. B. Ward, who will move to St. Cloud next June.

JOHN E. FRENCH, of Marinette, Wis., who has for a long time been the representative of W. C. Moore & Co., of Newark, N. Y., is entering into a partnership with John Darrow, of Escanaba, Mich., and will set out ten acres of plum and cherry trees next spring at Escanaba.

A SUIT has been brought for the dissolution of the Muskogee Wholesale Nursery Co., at Muskogee, Okla., by Clarence E. De Groot, a stockholder. He declares the concern has been neglected by the directors, who, he says, never meet. There are two judgments against the concern which have not been satisfied. He asks that either a receiver be appointed with full powers to run the business and a new board of directors be elected, or the company be dissolved.

NEW ENGLAND ASSOCIATION.

Second Meeting of Live Organization.

The New England Nurserymen's Association will hold its second annual meeting at the Hotel Bond, at Hartford, Conn., Tuesday and Wednesday, February 24 and 25. Although this is only the second year of the existence of this association, it has already proved itself a live organization, of much help as well as interest to the members of the nursery trade in that section. Its meeting next week should, therefore, draw a large attendance. An additional attraction at Hartford during the week of the meeting will be the automobile show.

The first session will open at 1 p. m., February 24, and after the president's address, presentation of reports and appointment of new committees, the bug question, in which nurserymen of this section are vitally interested just now, will engross the attention of the members. The chief inspectors of the New England states and the federal Department of Agriculture have been invited to lead the discussion on this subject. Following this conference, the subject of "Forestry and Its Relation to the Nurserymen" will be taken up by Professor J. W. Toomey, director of the Yale Forestry School, and W. O. Filley, Connecticut state forester. A paper by E. F. Coe, of New Haven, Conn., on "Local Retail Nursery and Sales Grounds" will close the session.

Dinner by Connecticut Nurserymen.

At 6:30 p. m., Tuesday evening, the association will be given a dinner by the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association.

The following day at 9:30 a. m. will be held the election of officers. After this a paper on "The Nurserymen and Public Parks" will be presented by Geo. A. Parker, superintendent of parks at Hartford, and another on "Evergreens for New England," by Henry Kelly, of New Canaan, Conn.

After lunch a discussion of "Proper Methods of Growing Herbaceous Stock in the Nursery" will be taken up by A. E. Robinson, Daniel A. Clarke, Julius Heurlin, George C. Thurlow and John Kirkegaard. Papers on "Imported Nursery Stock," by W. H. Wyman, of North Abington, Mass., and on "Early History of the Nursery Business," by F. E. Burroughs, president of the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association, will be read. A talk by J. H. Hale, "the peach king," of South Glastonbury, Conn., will close the meeting.

MENERAY NURSERY SOLD.

The F. W. Meneray Co., of Council Bluffs, Ia., which has been in the hands of a receiver for the last year and a half, has been purchased by the First National bank of Council Bluffs, for $31,000, considerably less than its appraised value. The First National bank holds a judgment against the company for the sum of $58,168.12.

The purchase was made at a public sale held at the company's warehouse Monday, February 2, but report of the sale was not made until the following Saturday. The First National bank was the only bidder, but in his report to the court Receiver C. W. McDonald expressed the belief that the sale was an advantageous one. Judge Thornell approved the sale.

In February, 1913, the First National bank obtained judgment for $58,168.12 against the F. W. Meneray Co., the judgment being based on several promissory notes held by the bank. At the time the bank instituted suit, C. W. McDonald was appointed receiver.

When judgment was rendered, the decree provided for the sale of all the real estate and of the nursery stock of the company. Painter Knox and A. W. Tyler were appointed appraisers of the property, and their report, as filed before the sale, fixed the value of the property at $45,246.01.

KELSEY ON THE OUTLOOK.

Frederick W. Kelsey, president of the F. W. Kelsey Nursery Co., with headquarters at 150 Broadway, New York, also is interested in a number of the larger railroad and industrial corporations, including one of the largest banks in the city, and having been established downtown in the vicinity of though not in Wall street for so many years, has, perhaps, exceptional facilities for obtaining the viewpoint of the largest business interests of the country. sequently the following statement given out at his office February 16 will be of general interest to the trade:

"The decision of the banks all over the country, including the larger banking institutions in the moneyed centers, to come under the provisions of the new banking law, should give encouragement to those identified with horticultural interests and business enterprises generally.

"The fact that no more money panics are likely to occur under the new law is in itself enough to open the way permanently for more stable conditions of credit everywhere. The double advantage under the new system of having the surplus cash of the country and the commercial credits available from the regional banks in various parts of the country should also remove the causes for money disturbances, as they have under the present banking law existed for the fifty years since the Civil war.

"When the new banking system is in full operation, every manufacturer, nurseryman or proprietor of other business enterprise, in the hands of honest, capable men whose records show a clean and prosperous business, can obtain the requisite credit without submitting to the exacting commissions not infrequently demanded and paid on loans from responsible borrowers under the present conditions.

"The pessimistic views which have largely prevailed for the past year or two in many financial and business circles appear to have been unreasonably accentuated, especially in localities and particular instances more or less affected by the change in tariff, and the results from bad and incompetent management, as with some of the railroad systems and industrial corporations. The legitimate business of the country has, however, gone forward in increasing volume commensurate with the growth of the country and in many instances with most satisfactory results.

"In our own business, we shipped more stock last autumn and have more orders on our books for spring than for a like period for a number of years, and I believe the indications generally are favorable to an excellent aggregate business for the coming year and for the years to come. There is, of course, a good supply of nursery and plant material available and at reasonable prices. The present system of wire communication and transportation is, moreover, making more and more an international market for all products. The growth of the country's business must, however, continue with the growth and wealth of population, and those in the nursery and florist trades who have an established business and standing and are worthy of success will no doubt secure their fair share of profitable business."

BOSTON.

The Market.

Last week was an exceptionally cold one. February 12 Boston experienced its lowest temperature for ten years, with 11 degrees below zero. Readings of 15 and 25 degrees below were common within fifty miles of the Hub. The severe cold contracted the flower supply, but at the same time crippled flower buying. Supplies were unusually light for the season and prices held up remarkably well. Everyone had anticipated a great business for St. Valentine's day, but a fierce northeast blizzard raged the whole day, half paralyzing traffic and spoiling what had promised to be a record-breaking day for February 14.

American Beauty roses continue scarce and high-priced, but Russell, Killarney Queen, Sawyer and Sunburst are of exceptional quality; Richmond also is in strong supply. Ward, Hillingdon, Killarney, White Killarney and Taft are all good, and sales of late have been satisfactory. Carnations have shortened up materially since the cold wave hit us, and prices have been firm. Violets are somewhat weak; more sales at 300 for a dollar are made than at any other price. The clean-up for Valentine's day was good considering the unprecedentedly bad weather.

Bulbous stock is abundant. In tulips, doubles as well as singles are plentiful; the same holds true of narcissi. It is noticed that double Von Sions are harder to sell than singles. Freesias continue good. Sweet peas have been somewhat less abundant, but are ample for the demands. Mignonette is fine. Yellow marguerites sell rapidly. Lilies and callas are overplentiful. There is a wide assortment of miscellaneous flowers. Cattleya Trianae remains plentiful. Schröderae is almost ready. Gardenias, valley and green stock are all in fairly good demand.

Various Notes.

The directors of the Boston Coöperative Market have work so well advanced on their commodious new market, at 260 Devonshire street, that everything will be in readiness for the opening, March 1. Several more large growers signed leases last week, among them Thomas Roland and William Sim, and several others are considering leases. The Boston Flower Exchange expects to have the Waban Rose Conservatories and the Boston Rose Co. among the stall holders in the near future.

Thomas Capers, of Wellesley Hills, is having good success with carnations this season. Beacon he always does remarkably well. His other specialties are Benora, White Wonder and Pink Delight.

William R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills, is sending an extra fine lot of Killarney and White Killarney and Richmond roses to B. J. McGinty.

Wax Bros., in spite of the unpropitious weather, had an extra good Valentine's day trade, with violets in heavy demand.

Charles Holbrow, of Brighton, has 4,000 giganteum lilies in good shape for Easter. He has a fine cut of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses. In carnations he grows Enchantress, White Enchantress and Pink Delight.

The lecture at Horticultural hall

February 14 was poorly attended, owing to the inclement weather. The speaker was J. B. Morton, Washington, D. C., and his subject was, "Making a New Variety of Asparagus." There will be no lecture March 21. From March 24 to 28 an extension school in pomology will be conducted by the Massachusetts Agricultural College, with three or four daily lectures and demonstrations.

Last week Carbone had one of his windows beautifully arranged with specimen acacias. Forced deciduous shrubs continue to be much featured here.

John W. Foote, of Reading, grows Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus in quantity this season. His carnation specialties this season are Beacon, Pink Delight and Benora.

F. H. Houghton made, as usual, quite a hit with his old-fashioned bouquets for Valentine's day. Mr. Houghton has many imitators but no equals in this class of work.

William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, has 3,500 giganteum lilies in prime condition for Easter. He is marketing an extra fine lot of Dutch bulbs in pans; also lilacs and azaleas.

Patten & Co. are receiving orders from all over the country for their grand new crimson carnation, Princess Dagmar, which they believe is easily the leader in its color today.

A. M. Davenport has 10,000 giganteum

PERHAPS you know the difference as applied to greenhouse plants. You know there are always a few left-overs that are the by-products. ## PRONOUNCED THE FINEST

G. S. Ramsburg,

Somersworth, N. H.

Belvidere, Cal., Jan. 22, 1914

Dear Sir:—Please send me one packet seed of your Silver Pink Snapdragon, for which find money order inclosed. I had a packet of your seed last season which gave excellent results. Every one who saw it admired it very much, and pronounced it the finest thing in the line of a Pink Snapdragon. I can highly recommend it for outdoor cultivation around the Bay region of San Francisco as a bedding or cut flower plant.

Yours truly,

E. A. ASMUS.

As usual, our testimonials come unsolicited from satisfied patrons. Our friends and "cronies" would be expected to say nice things, especially when solicited. We have a stack of nice letters like the above which are a far greater satisfaction than the dollars that we receive. We had a good thing and started out to encircle the globe. We are getting on well, having this week landed in South Africa, in the Transvaal, right among the diamond fields. Going some! Yes; but it is easy sailing with a high-class variety like our original Silver Pink. Sooner or later you will grow it, not only on account of its beauty, but for its great productiveness and the extra dollars that it holds for you.

Not too early to start bedding stock, which can be had in blossom in 3½-inch pots. Price of seed, $1.00 per trade packet; 3 packets, $2.50; 7 packets, $5.00. Plants for Memorial Day, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. All orders cash, please.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Violets and red roses were in great demand for St. Valentine's day and all the florists in the downtown section had special window displays for the occasion. There was an unusual number of social events that created a big demand for cut flowers, while the call for decorations also kept those handling these jobs on the jump. There was a slight stiffening in prices, but only for a couple of days. Bulbous stock is increasing in supply and some fine pans are making their appearance and find ready sale.

A communication from the National Association of Gardeners was read, urging the local societies to consider the question of greater coöperation with the national body. The question was discussed by the members and probably will be taken up again at the next meeting. ## LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Trade in the last two weeks has been only fair; yet there are no surplus flowers, unless it may be in bulbous stock. Roses and carnations are more plentiful and of better color, on account of the colder and clearer weather. Violets and sweet peas are scarce. We are having our first severe cold spell. St. Valentine's day business was ahead of last year. Violets, roses and blooming plants met with the heaviest call.

Various Notes.

The Michler Bros. Co. reports trade good. The firm has a new Lord & Burnham house in course of construction and will install a new boiler in the spring, large enough to take care of future additions.

Honaker the Florist is cutting a fine lot of stock. He reports a general clean-up on St. Valentine's day.

The John A. Keller Estate was in just right with a heavy cut of fine roses and carnations for St. Valentine's day. A fine lot of blooming plants, such as obconicas, cinerarias and hyacinths, were easily disposed of. Stock for Easter is coming on nicely.

Keller, Florist, says St. Valentine's day was surely "some day." Everything sold well. This firm had the decoration and supplied some 3,000 carnations for the opening of a new bank recently.

A brand-new girl arrived at the home of Ernest Hillenmeyer, our popular young nurseryman, last week.

August Leclere, the florist at the Eastern State hospital here, has been confined to bed for the last two weeks.

John F. Keller made a flying trip to Cincinnati, O., and Richmond, Ind., last week.

Miss Fannie White reports trade as steady. Her St. Valentine's day business was unusually good this year.

NEW PINK ROSES

Mrs. George Shawyer One of the best Roses that has been introduced in years. It is a very rapid, strong grower and with us produces more flowers per plant than Killarney. It is exceptionally well adapted to the grower that retails his stock.

Grafted Plants only, $12.00 per 100. Ready by March 15th, in 2½-inch pots.

CECILE BRUNNER, the Baby Pink Rose This is a beautiful little Rose coming in sprays of three to five buds and has been a great success with the retail florists of this city, as it combines in beautiful effect with so many other flowers in all kinds of work. Every grower should try some of these—not only in the greenhouse but in his garden. It is a very prolific bloomer and if carefully protected in the winter, should be a money-maker both outdoors and under glass.

Grafted Plants, $12.00 per 100. Own Root, $8.00 per 100; $35.00 per 500; $60.00 per 1000.

Both of the above varieties are not novelties but have been thoroughly tried out.

Rhea Reid, Killarney, White Killarney, Bulgarie and Richmond

All carefully grafted on selected English Manetti, $10.00 per 100. Ready about April 1st, in 2½-inch pots. All of our plants are well hardened off, ready for shifting into larger pots or planting direct in the benches.

The flowering quality of our plants is well known, as we select only flowering wood for scions—no blind wood used at all.

New Rose, Killarney Brilliant

THE MOST VALUABLE ROSE INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

We consider this new rose—a sport from the original pink Killarney—the most valuable rose that has been introduced in many years. It is well named Killarney Brilliant, on account of its brilliant color.

It is a great improvement on the original pink Killarney; first, because of its much more brilliant color, it being almost crimson in bright weather, while in midwinter—in dull, cloudy and foggy weather,—when the original pink Killarney loses its brilliancy and becomes badly faded, Killarney Brilliant is as bright and deep a pink as the original variety at its best. In addition to its great superiority in color, the flower is almost twice as large, having from twenty-five to forty full-sized petals.

It has the same desirable color that Killarney Queen possesses, but has double the number of petals, making it a very double and a fuller flower; and it is also very much more productive, having the same habit of growth and the same freedom of bloom as its parent.

We have watched Killarney Brilliant growing during the past winter, planted in the same house with the original and the double pink Killarney, and when those varieties faded so as to be almost unmarketable, Killarney Brilliant was superb. We are thoroughly convinced that it will immediately supplant the original Killarney as the standard market variety, and that every up-to-date grower will be compelled to plant it, on account of its great superiority. A prominent rose grower, who has seen it growing, says it is the only rose he has ever seen that needs no advertising; it sells itself.

JOY!

You must have heard about it. We know it sounds good. It sounds so good because it happens to be true.

This is a Carnation that did not get a reputation over night. We have been handling it for a little over two years and ought to know something about it.

IT'S A REAL RED

Perhaps we should call it Scarlet, because it is a live, glowing Red.

Better still, it is the kind of Carnation that proves the florist's friend. Shipped over a distance, it will look as good on arrival as when sent. This feature appeals to us because we know what it means to the man who is depending on us.

JOY has been described by Mr. E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, Ill.—the man who raised it—as “a strong grower, early, very free and continuous bloomer, with strong calyx and good stem.” That should be good enough for anybody. Don't wait for the other fellow to tell you about it. Send your order in now.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

We are having real winter this month and business seems to be good. Flowers, especially roses, are somewhat scarce. Carnations and bulbous stock are in much better supply. There have been a good many funerals lately, as well as social affairs, so flowers are in demand. St. Valentine's day is proving to be a profitable day for the florists. As the people are becoming more and more appreciative of flowers for valentines, the florists should help things along by advertising and using special boxes for the flowers sent out. There is no reason why this day should not be as great a day for the florists as any other holiday.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel arrived home unexpectedly and reports an exceedingly enjoyable trip abroad. He is cutting a large number of carnations of fine quality, for which there is a good demand. Business is rushing here, as usual.

Karl Zeidler, Jr., has bought the business of the Evansville Floral Co. and is conducting the store on Second street.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports the usual good business. Valentine's day was a good day for this firm. They had special flower boxes, which were strikingly appropriate, and which attracted considerable attention when displayed in their windows. Their cut of roses and carnations is good.

The following varieties of recent introduction stand out prominently as the best of their respective types and colors, and you will make no mistake in accepting our endorsement of the ten varieties here offered.

SPECIAL.—Note the reduction in price of the three leaders—Hungaria, the ideal pink, Gustav Gumpfer, yellow, and Mrs. Alfred Conard, popular salmon pink.

Gustav Gumpfer. Another season's trial strengthens us in again recommending this as the ideal rich yellow bedding Canna; the flowers of good size are held well above the foliage, the fine trusses always clean looking; in habit of growth very uniform; color a rich golden-yellow, a shade that has been missing heretofore and which can be seen as far as the eye will carry; 3½ to 4 feet. 20 cts. each; $1.25 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $65.00 per 1,000.

Hungaria. The ideal pink bedding Canna; flowers large, in good sized trusses, produced early, freely and continuously, in color not unlike that of the Paul Neyron Rose. Compared to all other pink varieties, it possesses a softness and refinement not found in any other sort; 3 to 3½ feet. 20 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1,000.

Louis Reverchon. This was one of the best dark-leaved red-flowering varieties in our trials during the past three years. A block of about 2,000 plants attracted great attention. The flowers are very large, of a cochineal-red color, very freely produced on vigorous plants with light bronze foliage; 4½ to 5 feet. 10 cts. each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1,000.

Meteor. There are two varieties of Cannas being sold under the name of Meteor, one a German introduction which can be bought very cheap. We offer the American variety and it is the Canna you want, as it is the best red flowering Canna in commerce. 30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Mrs. Alfred F. Conard. A most remarkable variety, with exquisite salmon-pink flowers of largest size in erect and abundantly furnished heads, so freely produced as to keep a superb showing of bloom for months above the rich green foliage; 4 feet. 20 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000.

Rosea Gigantea. Extra large flowers, borne in such abundance that the mass of color on each plant is truly amazing; individual petals are 2½ inches across; a deep, rich rose, almost a coral-carmine. 10 cts. each; 75 cts. per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1,000.

Maros. The best white bedder, in color about the same as Mont Blanc Improved, but produces not only three or four times as many flowers, and, as the old flowers shed themselves, it always presents a clean and tidy appearance. Maros in our fields attracted great attention, forming great broad clean bands of white. Its habit is perfect, filling every requirement of a tip-top bedder. 15 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1,000.

Uhlberg. Entirely distinct and one of the freest-flowering varieties we have ever grown. The flowers expand very full and are of a soft rosy-carmine; the throat of the flower is of a creamy-yellow and the edges of the petals, which are slightly crimped, are also pale yellow. This variety attracted much attention at our trials; 3 feet. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

Undine. Unquestionably the best of its type, and we heartily recommend it either for massing or as single specimens in the border. Its growth is dwarf and graceful, with green foliage, and its flowers, which are produced very freely, are of a bright orange-scarlet broadly edged with golden yellow; a most satisfactory variety in every way; 3½ feet. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

William Bates. A splendid free-flowering pure yellow Canna that has attracted much attention. The size of its flowers, of its trusses, its habit of growth are all that can be desired; a variety that will become a great favorite; 5 feet. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

The varieties Meteor and Uhlberg will be supplied in growing plants, all others in roots.

Twenty-five at hundred rates; 250 or more at thousand rates.

We will supply 1 each of the set of 10 varieties for $2.00.

We will supply 6 each of the set of 10 varieties for $8.00.

We also have an immense stock of the standard varieties of Cannas and we shall be pleased to quote special prices on your requirements.

HENRY A. DREER, Inc., 714-716 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The above prices are intended for the trade only.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Valentine's day business was a repetition of that of the last few years—a little Christmas. Weather conditions were much against it. Snow and zero weather are not ideal for corsages, but they sold just the same. All the retailers report an increase, some of them as much as fifty per cent. Pot plants did not move so fast. Violets, valley, sweet peas and all kinds of spring flowers sold in excess of any other year. While there was stock enough to go around, the call was brisk the last day. Weather conditions were such that buying was put off until the last minute. Roses are scarce. Carnations are equal to all demands, but bring top-notch prices. Coöperative advertising by the florists of any city can do much to increase this Valentine's day business. The public is just awakening to the fact that flowers are acceptable valentine gifts.

Various Notes.

A crowd of local bowlers and rooters went to Salem, O., February 16, to bowl a series with V. A. Cowgill's florists. George Bate, Herbert Bate, H. P. Knoble, Frank Ritzenthaler, John Kirchner, Charles Gibson, S. K. Gartman, Gus Knippenberg, Tim Smith, F. C. W. Brown, C. E. Russell, F. A. Friedley, George W. Smith and I. Rosnosky composed the party.

An interesting meeting was held by the Florists' Club, February 9. The state tax on growing crops in greenhouses was discussed. A fund has been started to be sent to Springfield to assist the florists there in their appeal of the case that was recently decided against them. Over $200 will be sent from Cleveland and vicinity. Any local firm not already on the list should mail his share at once to George W. Smith, treasurer, 606 Huron road, Cleveland. A sum considerably in excess of the $200 already collected will be secured here if it is needed. This is an important matter, affecting every grower in the state, and none should let this opportunity slip by without fighting for our rights.

The wholesalers are planning to close their places of business on Sundays, if possible, by keeping open until 9 p. m. on Saturday nights. This is a good

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business in this city has been fine the last week, and the demand for stock has been so heavy that the supply is exceedingly short. Beauties are still only read about on trade price lists. Roses are of fine quality and bring good prices. Carnations are selling well, despite the fact that there is plenty of bulb stock available. Owing to the fine valley and sweet peas on the market the sale of violets is not quite so heavy, although many thousands were disposed of for St. Valentine's day.

St. Valentine's day was the best by far ever experienced in this city. There are still some flower merchants who have not much faith in these special days, but they are few, in this city at least. About thirty of the local men, both retail and growers, as well as the wholesale house, advertised St. Valentine's day in coöperative advertisements in all the papers and with splendid results. Many attractive window displays were also seen, and I doubt if the florists in the outlying districts and those situated in the heart of the city but who as a rule make no special displays appreciate the value of these elaborate windows. The public certainly does, and shows its appreciation by patronizing the merchant who suggests flowers for every occasion through his windows. The call this year was heavy for plants and baskets at moderate prices. Cut flowers, of course, were most popular and hundreds of corsage bouquets were used. Nearly all the violets arriving from the east were badly frozen on arrival here.

Various Notes.

E. A. Feters purchased a handsome new touring car last week and is now wishing for nice summer weather.

P. L. McKee, of the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, has been in Detroit for about a week with his family. Mr. McKee was much interested in tests of a new boiler made for his firm by a Detroit concern. He reports business as having been exceptionally good; in fact, his firm lacks but little of having done as much business so far this year as all of last year.

In reporting the dancing party given by the florists' wives February 4, the writer made an error in not giving S. S. Skidelsky proper credit for his contribution. Plants donated by Charles Plumb brought $25 when sold at auction and one handsome combination of lilacs, azaleas, etc., donated by S. S. Skidelsky also brought $25.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange will soon be located in its new home at 264 and 266 Randolph street. The whole building, with a frontage of forty feet, four stories high, will be devoted to the interests of this concern. It is well located, being right in the midst of the many flower stores. A large part of the stock has already been moved to the new quarters and by March 1 they will be entirely moved. H. S.

NORTHERN GROWN ASTER SEED.

In this day and age of sharp and wideawake competition to claim "the best" in any line, requires a colossal nerve. We keep a mighty watchful eye on the doings and stocks of our competitors, and to the best of our knowledge, the quality of the stocks offered below is equal to and just a little beyond the head of the procession. If better can be found, the finder will indeed come into possession of a prime strain of aster seed. Trials free to large growers. Prices on larger quantities on application.

CYCLAMEN.

200,000 GIANT FLOWERING CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS AND BLOOMING PLANTS.

For the last 18 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no flake of many so-called English varieties.

Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be potted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first prize at the Cleveland show and first and second at Toledo, early November, when blooming cyclamen were scarce.

STRONG AUGUST SOWN SEEDLINGS, once-transplanted, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

BLOOMING PLANTS, 5, 6 and 8-in., 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50 each. Cash with order. Cultural directions with all orders.

C. Winterich, Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS.

Giant flowering from very best strain obtainable; these are twice transplanted and are sure of giving satisfaction. Early planting will make best plants for next Christmas.

COLUMBUS, O.*The Market.

Trade was extra heavy here for St. Valentine's day and an enormous quantity of stock was disposed of. There was a large quantity of stock in the city and besides that a great deal was shipped in, much of which was frozen in transit. Some dealers had most of their stock frozen that was shipped in, and it was quite a loss to them, as well as disappointment to the customers. A regular blizzard struck Columbus Friday and about nine inches of snow fell, with the mercury hovering about the zero mark. This made it hard to deliver cut flowers and plants. The snow started in again Sunday evening.

There was a large quantity of potted plants disposed of for St. Valentine's day, including a great many azaleas and fancy plants. In cut flowers, violets seemed to take the lead, with sweet peas a close second. Carnations came in for their usual demand and were cleaned up early. Roses were in good demand, with a fair supply, while there were quantities of bulbous stock on the market. About everything was cleaned up that was salable. The general opinion is that trade was even heavier than last year, when it broke all records. Most of the florists were in on the full-page advertising in the newspapers and they lay great stress on the results obtained from it.

Various Notes.

Wilson's Seed Store is doing business in the new quarters and has things fixed up in good shape.

The Munk Floral Co. reports heavy St. Valentine's day business, both wholesale and retail.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports a heavy business for the holiday.

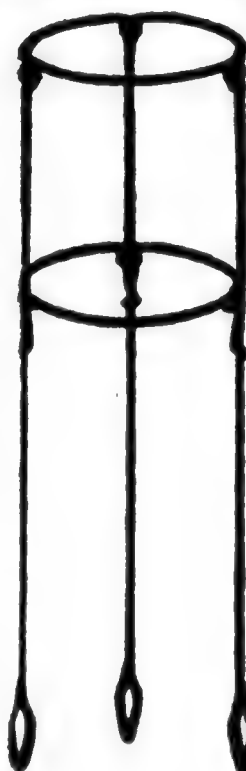

The Riverside Floral Co. says it was the best ever.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. had heavy business, both at the store and the greenhouse plant.

Richard Winters is sending in good lots of fancy peas at this time and they find a ready sale.

The Art Floral Co. reports business rushing for St. Valentine's day.

Taking it all around, everybody seems satisfied with the amount of business done for St. Valentine's day and all are

DO YOU KNOW VERMINE?

John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., writes: "I suppose you will be glad to know that VERMINE is giving excellent satisfaction. Our greenhouse foreman says that it is the only thing that he has ever used that will kill white ants in the benches."

Valentin Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., write: "We wish to say that we find VERMINE an excellent thing. We used it on a bench planted with Smilax to kill root lice or maggots, which ate the roots, and after two applications our Smilax is taking on new life and has started off to grow."

The Gardner Nursery Company, Osage, Iowa, writes: "We will use VERMINE on our out-of-door fields of strawberry plants, if the inside test continues as satisfactory as it now seems."

W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass., writes: "I have used VERMINE and found it effective against root maggots, cut worms, earth worms, ants and other ground pests."

VERMINE is applied one part to four hundred parts of water by thoroughly soaking the soil. It will protect your crops from the ravages of vermin underground without the slightest injury to vegetation.

GREEN HOUSE BOILER

SIZE OF BOILER.

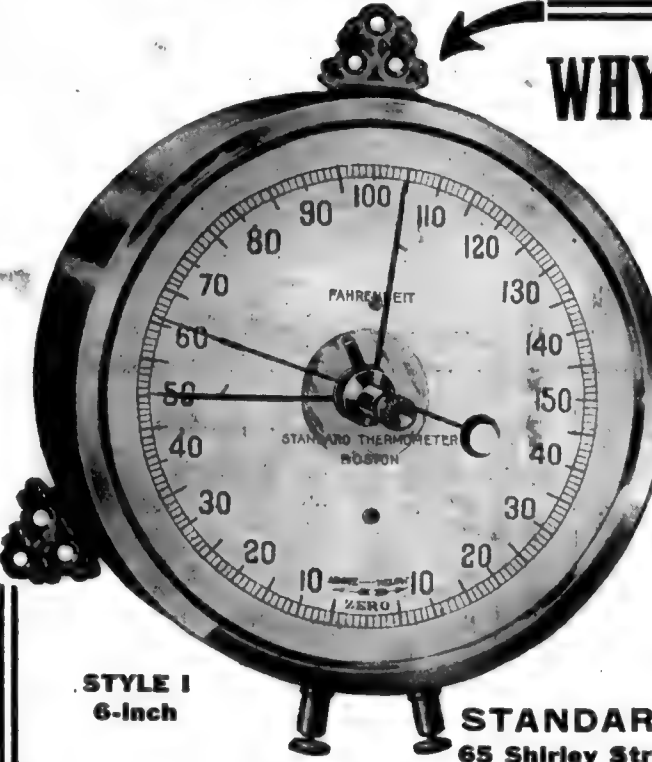

I expect to build two houses, each 18x70. What size of boiler will be needed to heat these properly, in this Ohio climate? I expect to heat with hot water, as there will be an opportunity for a good return system, with the boiler in a basement on a hillside. I will also have another building, 12x60, in front of the greenhouses, and will use it as a workroom, store and experiment room. In this building there will be about 400 feet of glass, in the sides only. G. L. N.

The inquiry is far from being clear enough to warrant a definite reply. The temperature which is desired is not stated, and the construction of the greenhouse walls and the amount of glass they contain are not given. If the walls of the greenhouses are well built and contain no glass, it should be possible to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in them with 1,000 square feet of radiation.

One can only give a guess at the amount of radiation required in the other building. If the walls are ceiled or plastered inside and 400 square feet of glass is the entire amount in the building, it should be found an easy matter to heat it to 60 degrees with 250 square feet of radiation, provided the walls are only eight or nine feet high and there is a ceiling at about that height. To furnish the radiation for both this building and the greenhouses it would be advisable to have a hot water boiler rated at about 1,500 square feet of radiation.

THE FUEL MARKET.

The last few days have brought the first real winter weather of the season over a large part of the country—the part in which greenhouse fuel requirements are heaviest. It has increased consumption while it has, in some sections, more or less impeded the movement of cars by the railroads. The situation at Chicago is much the same as elsewhere and the heavier buying at wholesale has, so far, done nothing more

Morehead

Back to Boiler SYSTEM

The Morehead "Back to Boiler" System of Steam Traps has drained hundreds of formerly dissipated dollars out of hundreds of lines in greenhouses and turned them right back to the boiler for re-investment.

That's one reason why there are more Moreheads in greenhouses than all others combined. The Keller Floral Co. says: "The Trap is a wonder. We do not know how we have done without it for so long."

Save the heat—turn the condensation back to the boiler as feed water—use considerably less fuel and water—

Install Morehead Traps!

The ideal temperature conditions following the installation of the Morehead System promote the growth of live, substantial flowers—full of life and sparkle.

crease in production and will not unless the weather continues cold for another week or ten days.

With a large number of middle-western growers the smokeless coals are a favorite fuel. The situation on these was beginning to be distressing when cold weather came. There had been a let-up in demand all over the country and for the first time in a year the producers were facing a flat market generally. Heretofore when demand fell off in the west there was a market in the east, and vice versa. Lately there has been no demand in either direction and even with production on half time it was impossible to avoid an accumulation of unsold coal. A great deal of this was in Chicago. There were some sharp concessions in prices. The last few days of cold weather have done much to clean up the accumulation and to restore prices to circular, but still $1.15 and $1.25 on mine run coal is a common quotation, the circular being $1.40. The situation with regard to Illinois and Indiana bituminous and the eastern anthracite also has been strengthened by the winter weather.

LANCASTER, PA.

St. Valentine's Day Trade.

During the last week we have been having some genuine winter weather. St. Valentine's day we were in the midst of a snow storm, which left us a foot of snow and severe weather. Trade for St. Valentine's day was good. The window arrangements of B. F. Barr & Co., H. A. Schroyer, W. A. Hammond, Geo. Goldbach and the Rosery never showed a finer or more varied display of spring flowers. Fancy sweet peas, yellow marguerites and forget-me-nots were in extra demand. Our local daily papers carried some good advertising matter relative to using flowers more freely for valentines, which brought good results to the trade in general.

Club Meeting.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club is issuing membership cards to its members, with which they can secure a discount at certain stores for goods needed in the business. At their next meeting, Thursday, February 19, there will be on exhibition vases of many of the new carnations. We shall also have a report from our special representative at the American Carnation Society exhibition at Cleveland. H. K. R.

Southington, Conn.—C. F. Curtiss is planning the erection of two more greenhouses.

The Market.

Trade for St. Valentine's day was good. The weather was cold, but clear and sunny, and this helped business a great deal. Plants sold as well as cut flowers. In fact, on account of the cold weather, plants were preferred to corsage bouquets. Fancy baskets of tulips, azaleas, lilacs and daffodils, decorated with hearts, arrows and cupids, sold well. Boxes of spring flowers with valentine novelties were in demand. Tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and bleeding hearts found a place in the valentine list. Old-fashioned bouquets were not so much in demand this year. Sweet peas and valley were fine and the demand was brisk. Cyclamens and primroses were in splendid condition, but flower buyers were not so taken up with these plants at this particular time.

Various Notes.

S. A. Anderson did a big business last week. All kinds of valentine novelties sold well. A great drawing card was a large red heart, about ten feet in height, with a huge bunch of white lilacs fastened on top. The heart was fastened on the outside of the window and created quite a stir in the downtown district.

The Wm. Scott Co. had a fine St. Valentine's day trade.

William Adams, William Palmer and W. F. Kasting visited the horticultural convention at Ithaca, N. Y. Mr. Kasting addressed the convention.

Robert A. Scott is in a hospital, where he submitted to an operation on his feet. The operation proved successful and he is improving rapidly.

The Buffalo florists gave a banquet for Wm. F. Kasting at the rooms of the Ellicott Club, February 10. The decorations were elaborate and drew considerable comment. Mr. Kasting expressed great appreciation of the decorations and said they were the handsomest he had ever seen at a florists' function. William Palmer acted as toastmaster. The speakers were William Legg, president of the Buffalo Florists' Club; David A. Seymour, superintendent of parks; S. A. Anderson, L. H. Neubeck, W. A. Adams and others.

Joseph Streit is cutting some splendid Formosa lilies. He has a lot of Lilium giganteum, which are coming along finely.

Miss Mabel Hoke is at Anderson's Main street store for a few days.

The following are planning to go to Rochester, February 20, for the bowling match: Messrs. Vick, Walter, Streit, Armbrust, Aust, Neubeck, Greever and others.

Among the visitors for the week were: John Tenhagen, of Lisse, Holland, and Irwin Bertermann, of Indianapolis, Ind. E. C. A.

The Market.

The market conditions remain about the same as they have been for the last few weeks. Roses are still scarce, and the prospects for a good supply of this stock are still poor. Carnations are arriving in abundance and the trade has no trouble in getting all its needs supplied. Bulbous stock is also in good supply and the stock is fine.

Violets, as usual, were in great demand for St. Valentine's day, and we are thankful to be able to say that the supply was sufficient to take care of all orders. The Wisconsin grown violets came in much more heavily than was expected and the stock was in fine condition. Everyone seems to be enjoying a good business for this time of year and the only fly in the ointment is that collections are slower than usual.

Various Notes.

Now's the time to gain on Spring

If you wait for the weather to start your Spring plants, the market will be gone before you have anything to offer. An equipment of Sunlight Double Glass Sash should be ordered early. They provide growing conditions even in the worst weather. The 3/8-inch air space between the two layers of glass shuts out the cold and holds in the warmth, letting in the light and protecting better than mats or boards.

Ten years use has proved their success. Made of the best cyress; glazed or repaired in half the usual time; eliminating all need of mats or shutters; making plants early without undue forcing—they are simply indispensable to obtain the best results.

A new double glass greenhouse

The Sunlight idea has been carried into an inexpensive greenhouse, 11 x 12, 11 x 24, 11 x 36, or 11 x 48 feet in size. It is made of Sunlight Double Glass Sash, which are instantly removable when the greenhouse is idle for use on hot-beds or cold-frames. Thus they serve a double purpose. Sash ordered now for Spring work may be used on a greenhouse frame ordered at your convenience for next Fall or Winter.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day brought an increase of business as compared with last year. Pot plants were in heavy demand and everything in bloom was sold. The buying public is becoming more educated in the art of basket work and just one plant in a basket, well arranged, makes a profitable and quick sale; more so than the old way of using a pot cover.

Roses have been short of the demand and red roses, at the close of the week, were not to be had at any price. Killarney and White Killarney held up in price all week. Beauties are becoming more plentiful and a big improvement is seen in them as well as in the Killarneys. Carnations are coming in more plentifully and are of better quality. There is no oversupply as yet, but it is expected within two weeks. Bulbous stock is more plentiful, especially daffodils and jonquils. The demand for violets and sweet peas in corsage bouquets was extra heavy for valentine parties.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell reports that he had a good valentine business, but says it would have been better if it had not been so cold the few days before.

Samuel Murray is showing a fine lot of lilac, grown at his greenhouses. St. Valentine's day business was up to his expectations.

The George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. has been busy with decorations. That business is increasing and stock is becoming more plentiful is the report at this place.

R. S. Brown & Son are filling their houses with spring bedding stock. They have about 30,000 feet of glass devoted to nothing else in the spring.

W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports an increase over last year on the St. Valentine's day business. Blooming plants in baskets were more in demand this year than ever and the call for corsage bouquets also was exceptionally heavy.

The Peterson Floral Co. had a large decoration last week for the Western Fruit Growers' Association convention.

Business across the state line was all that could be expected for St. Valentine's day. Corsage bouquets were in special demand and pot plants went well.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Difficulties experienced in the making of deliveries due to a heavy fall of snow did much to mar what would perhaps have been the heaviest St. Valentine's day business in the history of the local trade. The sudden change in the temperature caused a heavy falling off in the production of flowers, with the result that on some varieties the prices soared high. The supply of red flowers was insufficient to meet the local demand and it was impossible to fill all of the orders received from other cities. Red carnations held firm at $5 per hundred, while whites and pinks brought an average of $4.50. Roses that had been selling for $4 quickly rose to $6, $8 and even $10 per hundred, and on some varieties orders remained unfilled. American Beauty roses were not to be had and cattleya orchids were also scarce and of poor quality.

The heaviest call was on violets and sweet peas, the latter bringing $7.50 to $10 per thousand, while some few hundreds of the orchid-flowering type brought $2 per hundred. Both of these cleaned up well and none were left over. Valley sold well at $4.

Various Notes.

A conference was held last week by William F. Gude, Robert Pyle, of Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.; Mr. Cummings, of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Mr. Mulford and other members of the staff of the agricultural department, with reference to the proposed rose gardens, for which plans were perfected at this meeting. The rules and regulations governing the gardens will be made public within a few days.

The eight-hour law for women in the District of Columbia last week passed the House of Representatives and, as it had previously been passed by the Senate, it requires but the signature of the president to become effective. Several of the stores employ women, but as yet the florists have made no preparations other than to comply with the law when enforced. C. L. L.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

were almost nil, but it has grown with leaps and bounds until it has become a regular feature in the trade. From now on it will be prepared for, the same as other days when the demand for cut flowers almost exceeds the supply. The most noticeable feature of the day was the marked absence of really first-class pot plants, while the call for them was just as marked. This will not be neglected another season in this city, as all have noted that good plants can be sold at this time as well as at Christmas or Easter. We must also not forget that much of this awakening to this use of the old and hoary St. Valentine's day observance is due in no small measure to the education of the trade by The Review to the opening presented on such occasions for the use of cut flowers and plants.

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

DOES YOUR WINDOW PAY?

Possibilities Greatest for Florists.

The flower business is in a class by itself in the possibilities of display windows and the various ways and means an energetic florist has at his disposal to make his windows the "talk of the town" and the most direct medium of procuring business. The holidays for the florist are so distinctive and the variety of merchandise he is selling and displaying in his windows is so near nature that with little effort he can make an attractive display.

In any other line of business the window trimmer must plan an appropriate background for his window display, put in a considerable amount of work to get the proper effect, and then add sprays of artificially prepared or manufactured foliage to get the natural effect. A florist, on the other hand, has all the necessary material at his disposal; a group of palms or ferns, a few sprays of southern smilax or asparagus form a beautiful background. He does not have to go out and look for natural effects; he has them all at the tips of his fingers.

Flowers Always an Attraction.

In the window display proper a few cut flowers greatly enhance the effect. The public will stop and admire a prettily arranged vase of flowers in almost any surroundings. The reason is that flowers appeal to everyone; we all admire the beautiful and are fond of nature. We have them both combined in the material available for a florists' display window.

At the time of a seasonable holiday, such as St. Valentine's day, what florist has not the material to make an appropriate display? Lavishness is not necessary, but if you have the finest class of stock, it of course makes a richer showing than poor stock. To make the public talk about your windows, originality and some artistic ability are the requirements. The man who copies the other fellow's display window does not get the results the originator did. People have seen it before and he only helps to boost the originator. Someone must be the originator; why not you?

For Example.

Holm & Olson, of St. Paul, placed in their show windows a business-getting window for St. Valentine's day. The smaller window of their large display space was the feature window. A loosely arranged ceiling of southern smilax and a low background of the same material furnished the setting for the display. To the left side toward the back of the window was placed an old-fashioned valentine, nine feet high and five and one-half feet in width. This was made to represent the beautiful, lacy love messages formerly used to convey St. Valentine's day sentiments. The center was a tilted heart thirty-six inches in diameter made solid of red carnations. To one side of the center of the heart a vase was imbedded, in which was arranged a bunch of 300 single violets and fifty valley; to this bouquet were attached showers of violets. A gold arrow two feet long, with an immense bow of red Silverine ribbon, pierced the heart at this point. A border of Mexican ivy completed the heart. Around it was a solid background of white carnations, in which were imbedded twenty vases, those close to the heart containing cattleyas and those toward the border, violets. Next was a row of Werbro lace handkerchiefs.

An 8-inch border of pink lace maline shaded with a combination of lavender moistened and hearts and "I love you" messages were inscribed therein. Several small bisque cupids were placed around the fountain, as were also a number of gold arrows tied with red Silverine. To the right of the fountain was a wall of mirrors eight feet high, and this was loosely covered with southern smilax, in which were placed a number of solid hearts of red carnations with trimmings of violets.

This formed a setting to the valentine display of fancy boxes and hearts, some tied with Silverine and arrows to show them ready for delivery, and others arranged with flowers to convey the desired effect. Throughout the window were scattered, on display stands with vases attached, prettily made-up corsage and Dutch bouquets daintily tied with embroidered Silverine corsage ribbon.

The whole made a most pleasing and attractive window, and as to the business-getting part of the display, Holm & Olson can safely vouch that it pays to arrange your windows artistically. Samuel Seligman.

"THE VOICE WITH THE SMILE."

The telephone exchange girl of A. W. Smith Co., the Pittsburgh retail florist, deserves honorable mention.

The usual way to handle a call that has come in on the line by mistake is to yell "Wrong number" and ring off.

This is what happened February 13, when the calls were coming so fast that all trunk lines were busy nearly every moment:

A voice: "Is this the — Coal Co?"

Phone girl: "This is A. W. Smith Co., and we sell nicer things than coal."

The voice: "Oh, you do? Well, what do you sell?"

The girl: "We sell flowers, and just now we have the Valentine Special on."

The voice: "What is the Valentine Special?"

The girl: "I'll give you the order department."

Curtain, as salesman books order.

Verily, as the telephone company says, "the voice with the smile wins." Clarke.

A UNIQUE WINDOW DECORATION.

As a part of the campaign for telegraph orders, as well as an advertisement for St. Valentine's day business, the holiday windows of Edward Sceery at both his Passaic and Paterson, N. J., stores showed an ingenious idea well carried out. At both stores the same decoration was shown. Business tags were obtained from all the leading florists of the United States and Canada, and these, together with valentine boxes, were arranged in the window to show the possibilities of telegraphing orders to all parts of the continent.

A flock of doves with outspread wings seemed to fly toward the front of the window with cards in their beaks, car-lace maline formed the frame, to which rolls and ruffles of maline were fastened. The piece was mounted on an easel. To the right, at the back of the window, was arranged a group of alsophila. In front of this group, about two feet from the floor and about five feet in diameter, was a sand pile, such as all have the desire to imprint hearts and love messages in. The feature of this mound of sand was an electric fountain, placed in the center, which threw a continuous stream of water about two feet high and was illuminated from underneath with green lights. Around this fountain, which was twenty-seven inches in diameter, was a loosely arranged wreath of violets and pink'sweet peas.

Boxes and Bouquets Shown.

The front of the sand mound was rying orders to "Sceery" from all parts of the world. Orchids, gardenias, lilac, violets and roses arranged in the bottom of the window showed the kinds of floral valentines that could be sent to places far and near.

WISCONSIN RETAILER'S STORE.

Situated in a city that is both the capital of the state and the seat of the state university, the Rentschler Floral Co., at Madison, Wis., has a double opportunity for handling a high-class trade. To make the most of it, the company recently opened a new store tor & Ice Machine Co. This concern also installed a one and one-half-ton ice machine, which cools the present equipment and will take care of a large storage refrigerator in addition.

TWO KINDS OF ADVERTISING.

We have noticed for a long time that The Review persistently advises florists to advertise in the newspapers, as, for instance, in the issue of February 12, pages 13 and 14, in the conversation between Messrs. Brown, Smith and Knoble. Smith asks Knoble if newspaper advertising will reach the flower-old mossbacks how to run a florists' business. He ran advertisements in the three daily papers, covering a 4-inch space; then he cut prices. In about two years he opened a store. He seemed to get business, but after a time he got into financial troubles, failed, tried working for other concerns and finally died in the insane hospital without paying his printer's bill.

Two florists entered the business and advertised in the three daily papers. They got a good trade without cutting prices, but could not keep going. Too much advertising did it. Again, another man started a store and ran advertisements in all the papers. He is now in the Binghamton insane hospital, while the florists who never advertise run greenhouses and, in our case, have two stores and have no big advertising bills to pay. It looks to us as though the writers have an advertising scheme to sell.

J. C. Bigelow & Son.

There are several reasons for printing the foregoing communication. One is, to assure Bigelow & Son that neither Mr. Knoble nor Mr. Seligman has advertising schemes to sell; The Review did not suppose it necessary to explain in the article, but Mr. Knoble is one of the most widely known retail florists in Cleveland, at present president of the Cleveland Florists' Club, and Mr. Seligman is a ribbon salesman, interested in the success of his customers, the retail florists. Each believes, with The Review, that the way to sell goods is to tell possible buyers what one has to sell.

Bigelow & Son are well known and successful florists at Utica, N. Y. Their standing entitles their views to respectful consideration, but the fact is they, and many others, base their opinion on wrong premises: Advertising is not wholly responsible for any man's success, nor wholly responsible for any man's failure. The same lack of judgment that would lead a man to over-advertise would lead him to other business extravagances, and the same discrimination that would enable a man to pick out the one or two best adver-which in design and fittings is one of the handsomest and most up-to-date in the state. The latest introductions in store fittings give it distinction. The system of indirect lighting which has been installed softens, without decreasing the clearness of, the effect. A tile floor also helps the appearance of the interior.

All the woodwork is of oak, stained a forest green, with white marble trimmings. The ceiling is crossed by oak beams, stained to match the woodwork. The side walls are paneled and fitted with full-length plate mirrors. There are two large, glazed wall cases, a marble-topped working counter and a refrigerator display counter for showing small cut flowers, as well as a desk for the convenience of customers, with plate-glass stationery compartments. These are well shown in the illustration giving a view of the front of the store.

Across the rear of the store is a large refrigerator display case with three full-length doors. The interior is lined with French plate mirrors except for the top and floor, which are of white enamel and white tile respectively. At one end are five large drawers for the storage of ferns and violets. The refrigerator, as well as the art glass partition above it, may be seen in the illustration showing the rear of the store. Back of this partition is a large workroom, entered by a rear door, so that supplies do not need to be carried through the show room. The store fixtures, as well as the refrigerator and refrigerator display case, were furnished by the United Refrigerator buying public. Knoble asks in return, "Did you ever know of a florist who started advertising, who stopped?"

In answer to Mr. Knoble I will tell him of a man who came here from Minnesota and bought out a greenhouse business. He started out to show us tising mediums and use them wisely would no doubt enable him to do a profitable small business without spending a cent for printers' ink.

Bigelow & Son say they have no big advertising bills to pay. But they have greenhouses on the edge of town and two stores in the business center. Why two stores? Why one store? Just to get before the public—to let people know what they have for sale. Just what advertising does!

Perhaps Bigelow & Son are spending more than they think for advertising.

CARBONE'S FLOWER STORE.

The store of Philip L. Carbone, on Boylston street, Boston, is in many ways unique and original. The genial and cultured proprietor started in business in a small way nineteen years ago, with a flower stand at the Young Woman's Union, where he stayed about two years. He next opened a small basement store at 258 Boylston street, which he left after about four years to occupy the present beautiful and commodious store at 342 Boylston street.

Mr. Carbone was ever on the lookout for new, rare and unique flowers or plants and in this way built a large trade among the wealthier class of buyers. For some years Mr. Carbone conducted a flower store at Harvard square, Cambridge, also, but this was discontinued ten years ago, as his Boston business developed.

In addition to plants and cut flowers, Carbone's store is noted for its choice collection of imported baskets, garden pottery, glass, china and stone ware, an immense yearly business being now done in this department, which was started in a modest way twelve years ago. A large wholesale warehouse at Milcher street, near the South Terminal station, is devoted to this end of the business. Five men are employed here, and two salesmen are kept on the road all the time.

A few weeks ago the store adjoining 342 Boylston street was taken over. This gives the store 150 feet in depth and forty-five feet in width, with four large show windows. A balcony is reached by a broad stairway, and half the depth on the second floor is used for show room purposes. There also are commodious basements, and plans are well matured for a model Italian garden in one of these, which will have mural paintings, concealed electric light, several fountains and pools, statuary, and all the features which go to make up an Italian garden. Competent artists will do the painting, and this will be retained as a permanent feature.
